The track will be ready for working horses by March 15th, and as this track has the reputation of being the finest in the West, and as this point is centrally located, there is every reason to look for a large attendance and considerable enthusiasm. The track is within easy distance of this city, the local patronage is always liberal, and there is not a healthier spot in the country.

The officers of the corporation are Samuel McIntyre, president; L. C. Hardy, treasurer; G. W. Parks, secretary; directors, Samuel McIntyre, A. G. Bast, L. G. Hardy, S. C. Ewing, R. N. Baskin, A. C. Beckwith, Amos Howe.

A Sacramento dispatch tells us that Maxim, son of Musket and Realization, by Vespasian, imported from New Zealand, by J. B. Haggin, and who arrived here last week, has been dangerously ill with pneumonia. He is expected to recover, however. Maxim, for whom $21,000 were paid, landed in this State as sound as a dollar and apparently in the best of health, but a day or so after he was housed at Rancho del Paso he was seized with a raging fever, and later pneumonia developed.

WM. APPLEBY'S colt by John Happy out of Jess, by Joe Hooker is just recovering from a severe attack of distemper. Several other youngsters at the San Jose race track are showing symptoms of this dreaded sickness.

Nutwood Stock Farm.

In the splendid advertisement which Mr. Martin Carter has inserted in our columns the pedigrees and descriptions of his stallions are briefly stated, but they do not convey one-hundredth part of the merits of these fine animals. They are hard to excel anywhere, and to all of our readers who wish to see really first-class horses and splendidly-bred mares, colts and fillies, we know of no better place than this farm, which has been hid in obscurity for so long a time. While others were making the trotting world listen to their descriptions of the stock they had, Mr. Carter has been quietly picking up the choicest mares he could find, and, like all students of the science of breeding, he has not selected in vain. The most exacting could not find fault with the class of mares he has purchased, neither could the most critical find fault with his manner of breeding nor the progeny. It will surprise every horseman who has ever seen Nutwood Wilkes trot if he does not make a lower record than any other son of Guy Wilkes this year. His dam is already famous in this State. In two years she will, through her produce, be as famous as Green Mountain Maid, Sontag Mohawk or Beautiful Bells. The Nutwood Stock Farm is conducted on business principles, and is achieving a reputation for the class of horses it raises that is second to no other farm of its size in this State.

Shepard and Arab.

An Eastern writer has the following: Mr. John Shepard the best-known amateur reinsman in the East, and who in years past has had Mill Boy and Blondine, to which he gave the New England double team record of 2:22, Dick Swiveler, 2:18, Glengarry, 2:27; Robert Lee, 2:23½; Buttercup; 2:28; Butterfly, 2:19¾; DeBarry, 2:19½; Hattie C., 2:30½; Aldine, 2:19½; Young Rolfe, 2:11½, and some others. He has Arab, 2:15, the California whirlwind now, and in better shape I think than for years. He is a pretty horse at speed, active, rapid and true and rated easily. Of course, there is always the horse which returns to his matron livery, and on alighting the driver boastfully, asserts: "Well, I beat Arab to-day." I am well aware there are many speedy trotters here to-day, but let me add, if Arab has fair play and is out for a sleigh-race in earnest, there is not a horse to-day in Boston can step with him. I have seen many fast horses, but till yesterday never did I realize how much speed the mighty Californian had. For my pleasure Mr. S. let him step by me a few hundred yards across the railroad track, where the footing was not good, there was lots of room. I have not seen so fast a clip in my remembrance as he was going side my sleigh, and easy at that. Arab suffered acclimatization badly, but to-day he is as fast a horse as ever. I find it impossible to rate speed to sleigh, for they don't go so fast as they appear to be going, but I do know speed when I see it.

The Fresno Fair Association.

The directors of the Fresno Fair Grounds association held a meeting last evening and levied an assessment of $1 per share. This will make $13.75 paid up on each share of the value of $25 each.

The affairs of the association are in a flourishing condition, and the prospects for the sixth annual fair are of a character to insure success.

The resignation of the secretary, J. M. Reuck, was accepted. He was requested, however, to serve until a competent successor could be obtained, to which he assented. Mr. Reuck has done splendid work for the association and the members regret exceedingly to see him leave. He found the business of the association in rather a neglected condition and worked early and late to get it in shape. He contributed largely to the success of the fall exposition, and leaves his position to the regret of every person interested in the association. He exhibited splendid business habits and training, which will bring him success in his new field of operations. The best wishes of his old associates go with him.—Fresno Republican.

Catalogues Received.

Last Monday we received the Highland Stock Farm catalogue of H. L. and F. D. Stout, Dubuque, Ia. Truly the young animals listed in this neat volume are bred in the purple, coming from the loins of the great Nutwood, 2:18¾ (whom the Stouts own), Alcantara, St. Bel, Manager (2.11½ at three years), Wilton, Greenlander, and other famous sires, and out of Mambrino Patchen, Harold, Mambrino Boy, Cuyler, George Wilkes, Guy Wilkes, Blackwood, Alcyone, Stamboul, Wilton, Electioneer and Red Wilkes mares.

We are in receipt of the catalogue of Highland Farm, owned by W. C. France & Son, of Lexington, Ky. The horses listed are the get of the famous Red Wilkes, Allie Wilkes, Allandorf, Mambrino Patchen, Harry Clay 45, Edwin Forrest, Robert Bonner 270, Woodford Mambrino, Harold, Forest King, Dictator, and other equally famous sires. Red Wilkes, Allandorf, Belmont 64 and Director are so well known as producers of speedy and game animals that there should be a ready sale for the large number of gilt-edged animals offered.

J. Malcolm Forbes' Sale.

The following horses, the property of J. Malcolm Forbes, of Boston, were sold after the Palo Alto sale in New York:

Jack, 2:12¼, gray gelding, 1883, by Pilot Medium, dam Carrie Russell, by Magna Charta, George Middleton, Chicago, $2,600; Epigram, bay filly, 1888, by Lord Russell, dam Englewood, by Belmont, John A Wilson Franklin, Pa., $1,675; Pawnee, brown colt, 1889, by Stamboul, dam Minnehaha, by Stevens' Bald Chief, J. B. Butcher, Pawling, N. Y., $6,100; Jack, which Middleton bought to-day for $2,600, was sold by him to Forbes some years ago for $12,000.

ANTENUT is the appropriate name of a magnificent young stallion that Mr. George E. Guerne advertises in this issue. When it comes to good size, color and breeding he will attract attention anywhere. He is by Anteeo, his dam is by Nutwood, his second dam is the grandam of Myrtle, the phenomenal three-year-old. See the advertisement.

Geo. E. Guerne sold a colt by Anteeo, 2:16¼, to parties in Ferndale, Humboldt county, his dam by Robert Bonner, second dam by Ironclad; third dam by Norfolk; fourth dam a fast thoroughbred.

NAPA SODA sold in all saloons, restaurants and drug stores on the Pacific Coast.

TURF AND TRACK.

The late rain has insured plenty of pasture for live stock

A large number of horses are being jogged at the Bay District track.

Charles Reed will breed thirty-three of his own mares to St. Blaise this spring.

Boston, sire of Lexington the Great, took his name from the game of cards, and not from the city of culture and baked beans.

If you think your horse has merit let the people know it. They should know it. Through the turf papers is the way to let them know it.

Mambrino Maid, 2:15¼, will be campaigned this season by John A. Goldsmith, brother of the man who brought the mare out, says an exchange.

We understand that the pacer Tom Ryder, 2:18¾, is going like a flash at Woodland, and that he will be quite a figure on California tracks this season.

Our old friend, L. Swan, of Yreka, Cal., has concluded to take his string, including the Antevolo stallion, Ante-Echo, to City View Park, Portland, Or.

The next auction sale that will attract the attention of trotting horse breeders is the Palo Alto sale which will take place on the 24th of this month.

I. DeTurk has sold his game little stallion, Anteeo Button, to Los Angeles parties. He was shipped recently, going in the same car with Streining's horse, Willets.

May Queen, 2:20, the Palo Alto matron (dam of May King, 2:23½), is not by Electioneer, and has not been sold, as several papers in the East have stated lately.

Work on the various kite tracks in this State is progressing most favorably, and the associations that are to hold their meetings on them this fall are sanguine of success.

L. U. Shippee's trotting youngsters will be started from Stockton for Chicago on the 10th inst. in charge of James Thompson. In the Windy City they will be sold at auction.

Mrs. Mary A. Meyer, of Petaluma, knows a good trotter when she sees one, and the Dawn filly this lady drives around Petaluma is greatly admired by every one that sees it.

Mr. P. Ryan has purchased the entire interest of Mr. John A. Logan, Jr., in the horses formerly raced in the name of Mr. Manning. They include Tringle, Lavish, Marmont and Trialto.

Every subscriber of the Breeder and Sportsman should endeavor to get his neighbor to subscribe. We intend to make this paper second to no other one of its class in the United States.

The first copy of Volume XI of Wallace's Register, brought to California was in the careful custody of Mrs. Frank H. Burke, who arrived in this city from her Eastern trip last Wednesday.

A number of good horses have been sold in Santa Rosa lately and taken away for breeding purposes, and that city is fast gaining a reputation as being an excellent place to go to select good stock.

The killing of Mr. De Greayer by the cowboy policeman Harper, in the Golden Gate Park last Saturday, has been the leading topic of discussion among all classes of citizens ever since its occurrence.

We are pleased to state that Dan Miller's rider and trainer, Cooper, has been reinstated by the Los Angeles racing society. After thorough investigation, his innocence was satisfactorily established.

Pescador is entered in all the good stakes at St. Louis, and if we are not mistaken the game colt is good enough to capture about seven-tenths of everything he starts after in the big city by the Mississippi.

Bravo, eight years old, a winner of the Melbourne Cup in 1889, by Grand Flaneur, died of inflammation of the kidneys at Calcutta on Dec. 16. He was purchased by Mr. Apear, of Calcutta, in Melbourne, for $6,500.

M. E. McHenry will have, besides Delmarch, 2:11½, a string of fast ones that include Charleston, 2:15; Lobasco, 2:16¼; Bonnie Mack, 2:20½, and others. He will train his horses at Taylor track, Freeport. Ill.

Senator Oswald, of Minneapolis, has gone to California, but before leaving he turned over his bay gelding Greenleaf, by Simmons, to George Spear, who will handle him through the season, says the American Trotter.

The Breeder and Sporesman has appeared in a new dress, and is now one of the handsomest turf papers in the Union. The Pacific Coast is proud of such an energetic and reliable paper.—Santa Rosa Republican.

S. S. Warren, of Spokane, Wash., is a most valuable addition to the breeders' ranks of the Pacific Coast. At the recent Hicks sale he purchased a few choice mares, and goes into the business of breeding in the right way.

Ed. Corrigan has lost the great bay horse Tennessee, famous as a steeplechaser. He was foaled in 1882, by Ten Broeck dam Lizzie Hoover by Jack Malone, her dam by imp. Sovereign, out of Kitty Fagan, by imp. Leviathan, etc.

The Australian horse Ringmaster, by First King, dam Yardley, once a sojourner in England, is winning in India for His Highness the Kowar Sahib of Patiala. Peake, an English jockey, was specially imported to ride him.

Our old friend, Charles M. Grubbs, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., is developing a love for the national horse—the trotter—and recently purchased an interest in Folly, 2:21½, by Happy Medium dam Orole. This is gilt-edged horseflesh, surely.

They went a-riding—in due course
He held his passion with much vim—
How gracefully she sat her horse;
How gracefully she sat on him!
—The Rider and Driver.

Tom Murphy, the well-known driver and trainer, is handling at Petaluma an exceedingly promising two-year-old colt by Eclectic, dam by General McClellan 144. The youngster belongs to Mrs. M. A. Meyer, and is as level-headed as he is fast.

George L. Swan is handling a choice string of trotters at the Oakland track, in which are Emma Nevada, Grand Moor, Chandelier, Sallie M. and Harry I. They are receiving easy work, and will be heard from on the California circuit this year.

Dan Mace used to say of James Dustin: "He is the only man I ever started against that did not know when he was beaten; no one was ever sure of a race until their horse's head was under the wire in the third heat when Jim was in the race."

The overhead checkrein is refined and steady torture, not only for the strain backward of the neck, but because the horse cannot see the ground on which he is stepping. The swaying of his head from side to side is evidence of his trying to find relief.

Everyone in the East who purchased Eros colts and fillies last year are well satisfied it seems, for not one of the youngsters have so far appeared in any of the large sales. Facts like these prove the estimation placed upon a stallion's progeny as much as anything else.

Dutch Skater, by The Flying Dutchman, out of Fulvie, by Gladiator, is dead. He was an excellent race horse, having won among other races the Great Metropolitan Handicap in 1872, two miles and a quarter, with 125 pounds up. At the stud he was fairly successful.

Elista, one of Green Mountain Maid's foals, has been booked to Arion, 2:10¾. As Elista is a half-sister to Electioneer, sire of Arion, this breeding the colt to his half-aunt should satisfy those who believe that one cannot get too much of a good strain of blood in a horse.

Peter Brandow, the old-time driver and trainer, is looking forward to a very successful year on the circuit with a colt by Frazer's Secretary that he is interested in. Everyone who has had the pleasure of knowing this gentleman hopes that all his prospects will be realized.

Howard Atkinson, of Wabash, Ind., has sold his trotting mare Nettie, with a record of 2:19, to S. A. Browne, of the Kalamazoo (Mich.) Stock Farm, for $6,000. Nettie's sire is Blue Bull Jr., No. 2878 (sire of Lottie P., 2:17, etc.), the best-bred son of this now famous sire.

J. Malcolm Forbes has given it out in Boston that he paid Senator Leland Stanford just $125,000 for Arion, not believing in exaggerating. Arion will be allowed to serve a few outside mares, and Mr. Forbes has had several applications by telegraph. His fee will be $2,500.

Woodland will have a five-day running, trotting and pacing meeting in May, and as the purses offered are liberal and the track there greatly improved (it will be one of the best on the coast), the people of that enterprising city confidently look forward to a splendid season of sport.

We received last Monday Goodwin's Guide for the year 1891, a neat and well-bound volume of 1245 pages in all. As showing the increase in the thoroughbred "racing industry," we will state that there are just 174 pages more matter in the 1891 volume than in the one for 1890.

Some horses may be slowly jogged without the use of boots, but they are very few in number, and should never be speeded without them. Senator Stanford, Marvin, and all breeders of note will not even let their weanling colts be exercised without booting their limbs almost completely.

The get of imp. St. Blaise won $159,940 on the American turf in 1891. There were thirty-six winners and nine racing that did not win. St. Florian heads the list, with $37,825 then comes Potomac with $36,040, La Tosca with $20,490 and Chesapeake (full brother to Potomac) with $14,465.

Alcona's two representatives that are to go East in the two strings of horses that are soon to leave for the Eastern circuit should make Fred. W. Loeber, the owner of the stallion, happy. Hickok has Prince Warwick and Starr has Almonition, both candidates for low records and big purses.

The days of roughs, toughs and sluggers in the sulky have gone, never to return. The old-time driver who forced his way by mere brute force is a thing of the past. That the way to make a horse trot fast is to start a "pulling match" with him is exploded. Brain has been substituted for brawn.

The thoroughbred-blood-in-the-trotter theory may be all wrong, but as the three fastest trotters in the world (Sunol, Palo Alto and Maud S.) have the "despised blood" in their veins in large quantities, until they are made to take a back seat we shall be inclined to the belief that it is all right.

California horses lead, and her owners of thoroughbreds are in the front rank when it comes to entering liberally. J. B. Haggin has nominated no less than 141 fillies for the Matron Stakes to be run at Morris Park in 1894. The race has received the unprecedented number of 930 nominations, Haggin heading the list.

The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association has decided to make the $25,000 Futurity for trotting foals a fixed event, and will reduce the entrance fee. The stake will be guaranteed to be worth $25,000, and if the entry fees swell it to twice that amount all the money will go to the placed horses.

Candlemas, who was sent to South Africa in 1889 and proved himself a champion in that country, is on his way back to England for stud purposes. A correspondent at the Cape states that subscriptions have been taken at 30gs. per mare, and that his list is already full for two seasons. Candlemas is an own brother to St. Blaise.—English Exchange.

A communication has been forwarded to the Horseman of Chicago, by E. I. Robinson, of this city, in reply to an article that appeared in that able journal, signed by F. M. Shangle. The evidence presented regarding the breeding of Flaxtail will prove most conclusive, The Blue Bull theorists do not care to have the name of Flaxtail disappear from their rosters.

Milkyway Higgins—"Mawnin', Mist' Patchen! Ridin' yo' new mule, hay? Wha' yo' gwan?" Slackline Patchen—"Pen's a heap on de cyonduc' o' dishyuh mule, Mist' Higgins. If disyuh mule don't teck to kickin' I's gwan to Coonville, but if disyuh mule tecks to kickin' I's a dead culled g'em'n, sho's yo' b'on, an' in dat case I can't jes' say wha'm gwan, Mist' Higgins."

Jack Hallinan's filly by Sidney out of his Gen. Benton mare and a Director filly out of the same dam are doing very well in James Sutherland's string at Pleasanton. The prospects are very good for this well-known horseman having this pair of trotters on the Eastern circuit this fall. A friend informs us that this Gen. Benton mare is heavy in foal to Director.

Owners of stock farms in need of a grand mare should not let the opportunity of possessing such an individual as Fallen Leaf pass by. She is only five years old, and her breeding is fashionable. She is by Fallis 2:23, out of Mabel Echo, by Echo, second dam Sister to Ruth Ryan, by Lodi, etc. In height she is 15:3 hands, and her disposition and gait cannot be improved upon.

A fact which breeders of animals should never forget or undervalue was stated by Agassiz when he said: "No offspring is simply the offspring of its father and mother. It is at the same time the offspring of the grandfather and grandmother on both sides; in fact, this dependence of offspring or liability to reproduce family characteristics extends much further up the ancestral line."

Messrs. G. & C. P. Cecil, Sam Lyons and Tip Bruce have sold to Richard Wilson and Albert Winship, of Rushville, Ind., the five-year-old pacing stallion Gambrel, 2:15, by Gambetta Wilkes, 2:26, dam Bellfield, by Enfield. Price, $5,000. The horse will be delivered this week. He will do stud duty at Rushville in the fore part of the season, and then be fitted for a fall campaign.

Overman, 2:19¼, is being driven on the road in Boston. This is the only horse that Orrin Hickok ever bred and he turned out a good one for the California driver, as in his prime he was able to get a good share of the money whenever trotted, but for all that he was a rather uncertain horse in training, having a good many aches and pains that seemed to come upon him at stated intervals.

Sidney Benton expects his stallion, Almont Medium, 2:28½, to prove a great sire. As Mark Medium, 2:25½, is the only one of the Almont Mediums ever trained for speed, it is a pretty good indication that the son of Happy Medium will be a splendid progenitor. Mr. Benton is one of the best-posted man we have come across in many a day.

Fifteen thousand dollars is the largest price ever paid for a weanling, yet Senator Seanford received that sum last week in New York from Miller & Sibley, of Franklin, Pa., for the brown colt Election Bell, by Electioneer—Beautiful Bells, foaled February 20, 1891. Surely Beautiful Bells has been a veritable gold mine to our senior Senator.

Through the Russian Consul-General of the United States, Senator Stanford has made a dicker with the Czar of all the Russias, whereby he (the Senator) agrees to exchange three Electioneer mares of his own picking for the same number of Orloff stallions from the imperial stables, the Senator to name his agent in Russia to select the stallions.

The Legislature of Tennessee has passed an act which is calculated to strike terror to the hearts of the owners of scrub stallions. One of the terrorizing sections is the following: "Any person, firm, company or association who shall knowingly record or post any false or fraudulent pedigree shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof be fined not less than $25 nor more than $100.

If like produces like or the likeness of an ancestor, why does Allerton trot so fast? The American Trotter and Western Resources have called Palo Alto, 2:08¾, a "freak." If he is one, pray what must Williams' horse be? Echo answers that the Iowa trotter must be a whole side-show in himself, for if many of this horse's ancestors could ever trot in 2:30 the timers must have combined against the proposition of their entering the list.

D. R. Mills, of Mambrino Park, Des Moines, Ia., has recently purchased of Dr. S. E. Burroughs, Allison, Iowa, five daughters of the famous Mambrino Boy, sire of the dams of Allerton, 2:09¼, and Axtell, 2:12. One of the above mares is strongly inbred to Mambrino Boy, being out of a Mambrino Boy dam. They will be bred to Chestnut Wilkes, 2:26½, by Red Wilkes, the premier at Mambrino Park, and San Mateo, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½.

The question, "Can a man look at a horse and be a Christian?" is answered thus by the Gate City: "Well, that depends. If a man is only a little bit of a Christian, has religion badly put on with a poor glue, he might lose it in a crowd at a horse race, especially if he bet on the wrong horse. But if he has the root of the matter in him, he will be like the old prophet who watched the driving of Jehu—just as good a man then and there as ever."

MAY BOY, 2:26 (sire of Colonel May, 2:25¼, and Vernon, 2:26½), who was purchased a few months ago from Alvinza Hayward by J. A. Hale, of Potsdam, N. Y., is standing at the last-named place for $50. May Boy will, if given any sort of chance, prove himself a first-class sire of trotters, and his services are going exceedingly cheap.

THE copper kings of the West are taking to racing and the breeding of racers like the proverbial duck takes to water. The most recent addition to the ranks is Mr. W. A. Clark, of Butte, Montana. Mr. Clark has a fine ranch in the vicinity of Butte, where he will extensively breed thoroughbred and other horses. He is a gentleman of large wealth and not unfamiliar with the science of mating so as to obtain the best results. His colors will be seen on the turf in 1893.

GRANT'S PASS, OR., has one of the best winter tracks on the whole coast. McMullen, the trainer, has lost very little time in training the thoroughbreds in his charge, as the track has been in splendid condition right along. In the stables are Dictator, the property of N. C. Boynton; Strohecker's Adrian Jr.; John Man, the property of Messrs. Vandyke, Kinney and Miller; Mitchell's Altair; Judson's Cameo and Altamont and Sheriff Moss's colt. These are all trotting stock of the first grade.

L. J. ROSE has decided to send a carload of young trotters to New York to be sold at public auction. There will be several Stambouls and Alcazars in the consignment. The youngsters by these sires are very promising. Bric-a-Brac, the three-year-old who last week trotted in 2:26½, will be sent to the sale. Mr. Rose has had more luck in selling trotters at public auction than any other breeder in America, and he will doubtless do well at the coming sale, although the auction sales this year have been far below the average.

NEARLY all the turf writers in America have written that Electioneer is the sire of 100 or 101 trotters in the 2:30 list, and every mail brings in these misstatements, which it is high time to correct. Electioneer sired just ninety-nine trotters with authenticated records of 2:30, and that is all even the superintendent of Palo Alto Farm, Mr. Lathrop, claims. Memento's record Mr. L. refuses to claim; Lily Mack is by Auctioneer, and not by the great departed sire, while we are not certain about Miss Nande's record being an authenticated one.

MARCUS DALY, Anaconda, Mont, has purchased from W. H. Raymond, Belmont Park, Montana, the bay mare Carrie Bell, 2:23½, by Commodore Belmont, dam Pocahontas, by Conscript, with her yearling filly Opal B., by Tempest; the bay mare Hallien, by Tempest, dam Belphœb, by Commodore Belmont; bay mare Jetta, by Tempest, dam Delta, by Commodore Belmont; bay two-year-old filly Nightingale, by Doncaster, 2:28¾, dam Jenny Wren, by Tempest; bay filly, two years, by Doncaster, dam Halpin, by Tempest, and bay two-year-old filly Nevada, by Tempest, dam Idaho, by Commodore Belmont.

MR. WILLIAM DAY, admittedly one of the most successful trainers of any day, says: "For the stud or running I should prefer moderately-sized horses, about fifteen hands one or two inches high. A really good big horse is probably better than a really good small one; but, as a rule, you may get fifty good small horses for one good large one, and the former will and do run well after the latter has been put to the stud. A good big horse may beat a good little one over a short course, or even a mile or so, but I think at three or four miles a good little one would beat the best big one I ever saw."

AN EXPERT in driving gives this bit of caution: "In hitching to the wagon a serious mistake is often made with the breeching. How many times you will see a driver trying to get a little speed out of his horse,that is obliged to go hitching and hobbling along simply because he is tied up so tight that he cannot spread himself. When standing and the traces are straightened, there should be about room enough for a small boy to crawl through between the horse and breeching strap. He will then carry you further and faster and do it with less effort, there being nothing to fret him."

MAY QUEEN, the dam of May King, 2:23½, was a good race mare in her day, and when it came to a burst of speed there were not many trotters in her time that could hold their own with the bay mare for a quarter of a mile or so. She made a record when in Charlie Green's stable and showed so much foot that had she been handled as trotters are at the present time, with a view of securing the lowest possible record against the watch, it is altogether probable that she would have accomplished a mile in about 2:15, especially with a man in the sulky who could have rated her well from one end of the journey to the other.

THE liveliest meeting of the directors of the Fresno Fair Ground Association ever held was that which met in the Hughes Block recently, says the Fresno Republican. It all grew out of the election of a secretary to succeed J. M. Reuck. The ball was opened by Frank P. Wickersham nominating P. L. Warlow. This brought Dr. Leach to his feet. He nominated H. T. Marfield, and declared that if Mr. Warlow were elected he would resign from the board. Warlow was elected, receiving three votes to two for Marfield. Dr. Leach at once tendered his resignation, and was followed by W. M. Hughes in the same course. No action was taken on the resignations.

R. C. STINSON has in his stable at Brantford, Ont., a young horse that promises to be one of the fast green performers of 1892. It is the black stallion Mar Caspio, foaled 1886, by Director, 2:17, dam Kate Nutwood, by Nutwood, 2:18¾; second dam Kate (dam of Homestake, 2:14¼), by Volunteer; third dam Jenny (dam of Powers, 2:21), by American Star. This young horse is bred in the height of fashion, and is the property of C. F. Emery, Cleveland, O. Trainer Stinson says that he is the right kind, and will go below 2:20 this season. "Cope" has some young Patrons in his stable that he thinks will be among the money-winners in the colt stakes next fall.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., has caught the fever—that is the light-harness horse fever. The horsemen of that city are to have trotting and pacing races, above par, over a kite track that will, to use a somewhat ancient phrase, be "lightning fast." The meeting will follow Columbia, and a major portion of the horses at the Nashville and Columbia meetings will race in the "Bluff City." The projectors of the enterprise are local capitalists, three prominent horsemen from Indiana and a well-known track man from Middle Tennessee. Memphis is a good racing point for the runners, and there is no reason why trotting and pacing races should not take with the populace.

GEORGE VAN GORDEN, well and favorably known throughout California, has retired from the superintendency of the Hearst thoroughbred breeding establishment at San Simeon. Although only about fifty colts have been raised at this place, several noted winners were among them, viz., Osric, Dr. Ross, Vernon, Gonzales, Snowball, Anarchist, J. B. and Ragna. This speaks volumes for Mr. Van Gorden, who will be succeeded by Mr. Taylor, late of Haggin's Bakersfield establishment.

GENIAL Jack Hallinan started for Yokohama, Japan, last Thursday, on the steamer Gaelic, and will continue on a pleasure trip around the world. He brings to the land of the Mikado the handsome, five-year-old bay stallion Dude, by Monroe Chief, 2:18¼, out of Flora, the dam of Gold Elsie, 2:29½, by Woodburn (sire of the dam of Victor, 2:20), second dam Clara, by Pochi, third dam Kentucky Belle. The Japanese will have an opportunity of seeing what a perfect trotting horse looks like when this fellow arrives. A large crowd of friends and well-wishers were at the steamer to wish Mr. Hallinan and his wife 'bon voyage." The martial strains of his celebrated brass band were a revelation to the great number of sea-faring men from every clime that were present.

A HORSE does not like to exert his powers aimlessly, and the effect of compelling him to repeatedly perform against his will when he can see nothing is being accomplished, and with no variety, is to make him sour and reduce his physical condition at the same time. A horse that has been honed long on a track without change becomes sick of his work and extends himself grudgingly, even in a race. To cultivate a horse's speed and at the same time preserve a sweet temper and a desire to do his best taxes the trainer's skill to the utmost. Those colts and horses that are worked all winter on a track will hate the very sight of it before spring. Give the young things their work on the road; that will develop their muscle and wind. Make their speed in short brushes next summer. Don't try to make speed now. The colt that shows quarters in fast time early in the season is seldom heard of after the races begin.—The Horseman.

WE HAVE received many inquiries regarding the dimensions of kite tracks, and for the benefit of such inquirers, we will give the dimensions of the kite-shaped track at this place, says the American Trotter, of Independence, Ia. The track lays north and south, with the loop to the north. From the beginning of the turn on the loop to the wire there is 500 feet straight for scoring. The track is 75 feet wide at the start and finish, and gradually decreases in width until at the beginning of the turn, 1574.743 feet from the wire, it is sixty feet wide, which is the width around the turn. Measured around the turn on the fence line, the distance is 2130.514 feet. Both stretches are the same. The track here is two and a half feet down grade to the first quarter, then five feet up grade to the three-eighths pole, then down grade five feet to the three-quarter pole, then two and a half feet up grade to the finish. The track is on low, swampy ground, and is built of decomposed vegetation. To the character of the soil, and the condition in which the track is kept as much as to the shape is due the fastness of this track.

O. H. LOCKHART, proprietor of the Lockhaven Stock Farm at Burbank, and J. Warren Carhart, have returned from a visit to the north, where they inspected all the leading stock farms and also made some purchases of interest to the horsemen in this section, says the Los Angeles Herald. Mr. Lockhart purchased from Mr. DeTurk, of Santa Rosa, the brown horse Anteeo Button. This young sire is by Anteeo, 2:16¼, who recently sold for $65,000. The dam of Anteeo Button is Lady Button, by Napa Rattler. The dam of Lady Button was also the dam of Alexander Button, 2:26½, the sire of Yolo Maid, the sensational pacing mare, and Rosa Mc, a trotting mare, who has a record of 2:20½. Mr. Lockhart owns Ashwood, the only standard-bred Nutwood stallion in Southern California, and with Anteeo Button is now well supplied with fashionable blood for his stock farm. Mr. Carhart bought a brown three-year-old colt by Anteeo, dam by Union, he by Stockbridge Chief Jr. The dam of the brown colt is the dam of Ned Locke, 2:24½ (trial 2:18). Messrs. Lockhart and Carhart are to be commended for their enterprise in bringing this desirable blood to this county.

AT ONE of the sales next month there will be offered a colt by Baron Wilkes, 2:18; dam Storm, 2:26¾, by Middleton; second dam Green Mountain Maid, the mare that produced Electioneer and eight or nine other horses with records of 2:30 or better. Baron Wilkes comes of a distinguished family on his dam's side as well as that of his sire, and for this reason it would be rather difficult to duplicate, so far as breeding is concerned, the colt by Baron Wilk s and out of Storm. This last-named mare, by the way, was in some respects a wonder. With the single exception of Electioneer she was the only foal of Green Mountain Maid that lived sired by any horse except Messenger Duroc, and it was only after she was seventeen years old and had been for a long time in the brood-mare ranks that she was shaped up and given a record of 2:26¾, which she acquired with so little handling as to show that had she been trained in her youth 2:20 would probably not have stopped her. The blood of Green Mountain Maid is breeding on through other channels as well as that of Electioneer, as her daughter Elalne produced Norlaine, 2:31½ as a yearling, while her sons are getting speed at the trot with great uniformity, although none of them has thus far sired a sensational performer.

MESSRS. A. J. Cassatt, A. F. Walcott, John Hunter, J. O. Donner, J. A. & A. H. Morris and D. D. Withers resolved last week upon a private sweepstakes between two-year-olds from their stables. The conditions governing the race are $1,000 each, play or pay, for two-year-olds, to be run at Monmouth Park in 1892, each subscriber to name three horses and to bring one to the post; three-quarters of a mile. The following are the nominations: A. J. Cassatt's b f by Uhlan —Pike's Pride; b f by Stratford—Foxglove; ch c, by Stratford—Tara. A. F. Walcott's br c Miles Standish, by Longfellow—Fun; br c Spartan, by Eolus—Helen; ch c, by Rayon d'Or—Clemency. John Hunter's b c Ondawa, by Onondaga —Kelp; blk or br c Chicago, by Tremont—Echoless; blk f Dagliio, by Tremont—Fair Lady. J. O. Donner's b f by Runnymede—Soubrette; ch c by Runnymede or Pontiac—Annie F.; ch f by Runnymede or Pontiac—Girofle. J. A. & A. H. Morris' imp. ch g Agile, by Springfield—Active; imp. br c Gallantry, by Galopin—Jennie B.; b f Minnehaha, by Wagner—Minnehaha Belle. D. D. Withers' ch f Experiment, by Uncas—Essayez II.; b c St. Michael, by Uncas —Michaelmas; ch c by Uncas—Cadence. In the event of there being no racing at Monmouth Park the sweepstakes will be decided during the fall meeting at Morris Park.

MESSENGER stood 16 hands; Abdallah was about 16 hands high, Hambletonian 15½ hands, Electioneer 15½ hands, Harold 15 hands, George Wilkes 15½ hands, Dictator 15 hands, Volunteer 15½ hands, Happy Medium 15½ hands, Aberdeen 15 hands, Anteeo and Antevolo 16 hands, Egbert 16 hands, Dauntless 15½ hands, Alcantara 15¾ hands, Masterlode 17 hands, Alexander's Abdallah 15½ hands, Victor von Bismarck 15½ hands, Alcyone 15 hands, Bourbon Wilkes 16 hands, Guy Wilkes 15¾ hands, Robert McGregor 15½ hands, Belmont 15¾ hands, Almont 16 hands, Kentucky Prince 15¾ hands, Daniel Lambert 15 hands, Phallas 15¾ hands, Nelson 15¾ hands, Nancy Hanks 16 hands, Sunol 16 hands, Belle Hamlin 15¾ hands, Maud S. 16 hands, St. Julien 16 hands, Stamboul 16 hands, Jay-Eye-See 15 hands, Goldsmith Maid 15 hands, Flora Temple 14½ hands, Prince Wilkes 15¼ hands, Director 15 hands, Bonnie McGregor 15½ hands, Harry Wilkes 14¾ hands, Guy 15 hands, Dexter 15¼ hands, Wilkes Boy 16 hands.

SPEAKING of Arion, 2:10¾, J. Malcolm Forbes, of Boston, the colt's new owner, said recently: "I have not decided whether I will try him for a record this year. It will, of course depend entirely upon his condition. I can tell better as soon as he gets acclimated. He is all right now, and I have no doubt he will do just as well here as in the West. Early in February I will put him to service unless he shows some ill effects of his journey. I have had many letters and telegrams from prominent breeders all over the country asking for terms and dates. Here is one gentleman who offers $3,000 for the privilege of breeding his mare to Arion. My fee will be $2,500 for each service. It seems a big price, but I think it is worth it. At any rate, I have had more offers already than I can fill this year. I shall not allow him to serve more than a dozen outsiders this spring. After that I may put him in training for the track. I shall breed him to my own mares. I have twenty-two mares and fillies, most of them from very fast stock. There is Nancy Hanks, with a record of 2:09, Houri, with a record of 2:17, now in foal to Axtell, whose record is 2:12, and Maggie Sultan, a three-year-old with a record of 2:30, in foal to Edgemark (2:16), and Maybe, whose record is 2:24."

THERE is a class of people to whom there is no such thing as unprejudiced, honest criticism. If any one dares criticise the actions of any association in which the public at large are supposed to take an interest they are immediately denounced as enemies of that association. Such talk always indicates a man of small calibre, for any association, the purpose of which is to benefit a large class of people, must expect to have its actions criticised, and such criticism if honest, may be of much benefit to the association, for the officials of any association only hold their positions to do the bidding of the members. The affairs of the various trotting and trotting-horse breeders' associations are fair subjects for criticism, as all horsemen are directly interested in them and there are many things about them that can stand as much good, healthy criticism as about anything that can be mentioned. The officials of some of these associations, the moment they have been declared elected, begin to enforce a personal policy without reference to the wishes of the other members whose votes have placed them in office, and then at the first sign of criticism their actions may call out they try and make the critic out to be an enemy to all trotting horse interests. The day is past, however, when such methods will work, for the breeding interest is so widespread and the small breeder in so large a majority that they are not obliged to be dictated to by any official or set of officials, for without the patronage and favor of the so-called small breeders no association to legislate trotting horse affairs can live.

FANNY, the grandam of Monbars, 2:16½, was once owned by Mr. Colyer, a well-known carriage merchant in Newark, N. J. He bought her from Gideon Smalley, of Newark, N. J. In speaking of Fanny recently Mr. Colyer said: "When Mr. Smalley brought her into my yard hitched to a hay wagon and offered her for sale, I told him I would not give him thirty dollars for her. She was about as mean and insignificant looking as any animal of the kind I ever saw. When Smalley told me he wanted $400 for her I was paralyzed. He talked so much about her speed on the road and her good driving qualities and was so persistent in persuading me to drive the mare that I finally consented. We hitched her to a light wagon and went down to the plank road, which was the great driving ground in those days. I started the mare up, and we had not covered a hundred yards before I knew that I had hold of a trotter. There was a perfect transformation. She seemed to grow six inches taller. She spread out and squared away in a manner which made the blood tingle. I did not let Smalley know what I thought of her, but told him she was a poor-looking thing with some speed, and I would give him $300 for her. After some parleying I bought her for that sum. I kept her for two years, and in that time I never found any horse that could beat her on the road. I sold her to a livery man by the name of Barrows in New York for $400. He refused $1,000 for her, and put her to breeding. She produced some very fine colts, among them Lady Maud, 2:18¼, by General Knox."

THE following is a fair example of the great responsibility that rests on a distance judge: "In 1887 the writer was starting judge at Poughkeepsie in a race in which there were five competitors," says "Griffin," in the Turf, Field and and Farm. "In the first heat the bay gelding Eph became badly tangled, and at the finish was clearly behind the flag, according to the observations of all three of the judges, and behind by several lengths. The field not being large, it was easy enough for the judges to note what his position was. The distance judge reported that his flag fell on Eph's tail, and that he was not distanced. This statement was so far at variance with the opinion of the judges, when they came to compare notes, that the official up the track was sent for again, and reiterated his former statement. After a little discussion, the opinion prevailed among the judges that they should depend upon the report of the distance judge in spite of the verdict of their own eyes, and the heat was awarded to Jesse, with none distanced. There was no grumbling when Eph was allowed to start in the second heat, and the judges were, doubtless, influenced by their opinion, which all present seemed to share, that the horse had not the ghost of a chance. Yet the race, and it was for a purse of $1,500, was protracted to seven heats, and was won by Eph, who, in point of fact, should have been shut out in the first heat, and would have been but for an overstrained reliance upon the report of the distance judge, and a gross injustice to the other horses and the public, to which I confess myself, though unintentionally, particeps criminis, was perpetrated."

THE GUN.

On the Western Plains.

The Doctor got no horn of grog—the drinking cup was made of a buffalo's horn—though he looked longingly and lingeringly at it with silent appeal. The hunters had "dropped on him, his game was played." He seldom asked for anything, not even whiskey, except his thirst for alcoholic stimulant sore pressed him, and then it was by hint and inuendo. He lay down by the camp-fire in anything but an amiable mood, more sullen and vindictive than ever. We were prepared for a driving, soaking old thunder storm, one of the old sort, but it didn't come. The lightning ceased to play; the thunder, mutteringly, died away, and the storm spent itself in a gentle down-pour that lasted only a few minutes. As soon as the rain commenced the animals roused up and went to grazing. The wet grass slacked their thirst, and was both food and thirst. In a short time they had fed full and lay down again, the cattle ruminating in quiet contentment. Soon the first faint streaks of daylight began to crimson the orient, and Captain Clark gave directions to prepare for the return trip. The oxen were "hitched on," the horses saddled, the cows roused to give the calves a chance at pap, and in a few minutes everything was in readiness for a start except Dr. Thompson. He wanted to ride one of the extra horses, but the hunters had "soured on him," and his request was refused, and he was told that he could either ride in one of the wagons or walk. He, with much grumbling, climbed into one of the wagons, and the return journey was commenced.

All were in high spirits and rapid progress was made. The calves trotted quietly and contentedly along, hugging close to the sides of their step-mothers, never mrking any mistake as to which was the right one; the triplets clung to their own especial step-mother, and never wandered into strange pastures.

The morning was lovely, the air both balmy and bracing, just cool enough to be invigorating; the rain had cleared the atmosphere of the soft haze that for several days had hung over the landscape, enveloping it in a gauzy, diaphanous veil, making it crystal pure, and opening a landscape of illimitable expanse. Everything was bright and beautiful; the green grass and the blooming wildflowers, festooned with flossy spider-webs, and hung with limpid raindrops that sparkled in the rays of the morning sun like diamonds pendant from the ears of beauty, nodded and swayed gracefully to the caresses of the soft winds; flowers bloomed afresh, yielding a more delicate fragrance; downy-winged butterflies of brilliant hues floated lazily in the air, or lighted on grass and flower, enjoying, without molestation or stint, all the sweets and luxuries that could be crowded into their ephemeral existance; chrysalis-hued flies flitted from flower to flower silently, there was no buzzing; gentle zephyr noiselessly winged his flight across the plains and laid his palm on cheek and lip, soft and cool as the palm of maiden, delicious as her kiss, sweet as Hybla honey; but there was no song of bird, no noise to relieve the oppressive silence except the harsh chattering of a few prairie dogs whose burrows we passed, or, at intervals, the whinny of a horse or the lowing of a cow; and the thought presented itself that, perhaps, they too were oppressed by the deep silence, and gave voice that they might hear something.

The happiest and jolliest and only absolutely free member of the party was old Breck. He carried no pack that day, and was left to roam at his own sweet will, and he reveled in his freedom from labor and restraint with the zest and wild delight of a school-boy taking a holiday.

He nipped the sweet herbage, and rolled in the grass, and frisked around the horses, biting their flanks to show his affection, and made a general nuisance of himself, but old Breck "had the privilege of the house" that day, and got away scathless. He would vary his pranks by going to the wagon where Dr. Thompson lay on a pile of blankets; "nursing his wrath to keep it warm," and, poking his head under the wagon cover would laugh a hoarse mule-laugh at him as if making game of him. He might, however, have been expressing sympathy for the Doctor's forlorn condition. The Doctor would reach for one of the spiked clubs and aim a savage blow at old Brecks head with the butt of it, but he never got in a blow the mule was too alert and quick and the only satisfaction the Dr. got was a sprained arm for striking against empty air.

As the sun neared meridian and darted his fiery rays on us, old Breck quit his pranks and paced solemnly along at the heels of Horn's Horse, with bowed head and in meditave mood, forgetting to bray. In fact, we had heard but little of his melodious voice for several days. About one o'clock the heat became intense and a halt was made to give the cows and calves an opportunity to rest, and the horses to graze, and to allow the wogons, which had fallen behind to come up. When the waggons came up the oxen was given a few minutes breathing spell and the journey was resumed. Shortly after, we crossed the crest of the ridge that lay between us and the camp that we had left in the morning of the day before. The horses recognized the place and they tossed their heads and quickened their steps. Old Breck awaked from his dreams, looked around inquiringly a moment, when the thought seemed suddenly to strike him that somebody ought to say something. He extented his neck and nose to a line with his back, opened his mouth and gave vent to a more resonant bray than had ever issued from him before, to which the horses responded with whinnies and the riders with laughter and talk. Old Breck's bray was sanitary and salutary, to both man and beast. About an hour later camp was reached, and most grateful to the dry and hot palates of all, both man and beast, was the cooling, limpid waters of the rivulet.

Though desperately hungry no move was made toward preparing supper until camp was made snug and the comfort of the animals attended to. The calves lay down to rest, looking as innocent and happy as their domestic cousins, while horses and cattle grazed.

After supper, all gathered round the camp-fire—except Dr. Thompson, who moodily withdrew to himself—and smoked the fragrant weed in pipes of many different materials—meerschaum, briar-wood, cob, clay, etc. The adventures of the day before were recounted, and the incident connected with the capture of the calves rehearsed. C. E. Bigelow told the following story: "In the early summer of '53 I was with a small party on the prairies of Northwestern Iowa. We were hunting buffalo calves the same as now. At that time, only seven years ago, there were many buffalo on the prairies of Iowa, though there are none now; the advance of settlement has driven them farther west. They have taken Horace Greeley's advice of 'Go west, young man, go west.' They were not in such large herds as here on these western plains, but they roamed in quite large droves, sometimes numbering more than a thousand, though more frequently seen in bands of from thirty to forty, and it was not uncommon to run across them in groups of six or a dozen, or in pairs, or singly. Sometimes a cow with her calf would stray away to some pleasant nook where were shady trees and sweet grass. There were not so many wolves as here, and the cows didn't seem to fear them. A buffalo cow, though ordinarily as timid as a deer, is a raging fury when defending her calf, and if a wolf attacked it she would make sausage meat of him in no time. We had good success in hunting and capturing calves, though it took as many days to secure our complement as it has taken hours here. In that hunt I met with an adventure the counterpart of that which befell yesterday, but not quite so serious because the herd was smaller and I had not penetrated it so deeply. One day I got tangled up with the bulls, or rather my horse did, and they carried me along with them five miles before I could fight my way out; but I was green then and didn't know how to do it as well as I do now. Near Clear Lake, where was the outermost settlement of the frontier in that region, and which was not far from the scene of our hunt, lived a half-civilized Indian named Big Nose Joe, who obtained a scanty and precarious living by begging and stealing from the settlers and by hunting. He wouldn't work; like all his noble race, he scorned labor. One day he took his old-fashioned, muzzle-loading, smooth-bore rifle and went out to hunt meat. He ran across a stray buffalo cow, with her calf, enjoying the inviting shade of a thin skirt of timber that grew on the margin of the little stream where we were encamped, temporarily, on our return trip. Big Nose Joe shot the calf, but only wounding it. The calf bellowed with pain and fright. We heard the report of the rifle and the bellowing, or bleating rather, of the calf, and, curious to learn who was near us, and what the noise meant, we pushed our way through the thin skirt of timber to reconnoiter. As we emerged from the timber into the open prairie, we saw Big Nose Joe running for dear life, the cow a good second and closing on him rapidly, rushing for him with bent head, firey eyes and dilated nostrils.

Before we could render assistance she had caught him on her horns and tossed him in the air, and, as he fell, she caught and tossed him again. This she repeated several times and then, dropping him, returned to her wouuded calf. We went up to where he lay and—found a good Indian, a dead one. It was Big Nose Joe. He had gone to the happy hunting grounds, where, I suppose, all the thieving scalp-lifters go—sent thither on the horns of an infuriated buffalo cow whose calf he had tried to kill. An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth and blood for blood is divine law as laid down by the the law givers of Israel, and Big Nose Joe had paid the penalty of blood guiltiness and gone to that haven of beatitude where the weary are at rest and constables cease to bother for petty larceny. There was little mourning over his demise, and no funeral obsequies. A shallow hole was scooped out of the bosom of the prairie and all that was mortal of Big Nose Joe was placed in it and covered with a few inches of soil and Big Nose Joe was left to—rest.

Biglow's story was ended and Old Joe Hewitt took the floor. Old Joe had been trapper and hunter all his life and was now well advanced in years, though still vigorous, hale and active.

"When I war a younger man than now, I war in the Rockies trappin' beaver, an' killin' sich other varmint as wore pelts thet u'd sell. I hed good luck, but, afore I got ready to start fur hum I got out o' meat, an' thort as how I'd go down tu the plain an' shoot a bufferler. Ther war plenty deer an' bar' roun' thar, but, I'd sort o' soured on ven'son an' bar meat an' hankered arter bufferler. Wall, I straddle my pony, fust cachin' my pelts an' traps an' sich other truck as I hed fetched along when I went trappin' tuck my shootin' iron and skedaddled fur the plain which was not fur off, a matter o' twenty miles or so. I hadn't got jiss down to the plain afore I kim to a place wher the groun' wus broke bad, an' all full o' gullies. In one o' them gullies I seen a whappin' big bull bufferler, the whoppi'nest one I ever seen afore or sence, stan'in' with his tail p'inted at me, an' aborin' the sand bank, on the side o' the gully with his horns, like all-possessed, an' makin' the sand fly in the air an' fall all over his shaggy pe't. He didn't see me 'cause he war so busy borin' an' tossin' sand thet he couldn't see nuthin', an', I couldn't kill him 'cause a ball in his hind sho'ders 'u'd on'y smart him a little an' not hurt him bad, so I backed my pony out o' sight, gentle like, so's not to skeer him an' jumpin' down from my pony I crep' an' crawled roun' to one side o' him whar I could git a shot at nis fore sho'der. I got a chance arter awhile; the bufferler kep' on aborin' an' atossin' sand. All the bulls do thet, an' they git thar curly scalps so full o' sand thet you can't shoot an ounce ball through it. You mout as lief try tu shoot down an oak tree as try to kill a bufferler by shootin' him squar' in the florid w'en his scalp are full o' sand. I tuck aim at his fore sho'der an' blazed but, somehow 'ruther I didn't fetch him; he jiss squirmed, an' turned round, an' bellered a bit, an' looked orful mad, an' jiss like he war achin' tu find out what hit 'im. I begun tu load up my rifle ag'in, sort o' car'less like 'cause I war a heap disgusted fur not fetchin' him the fust shot, an' him so nigh. Putty soon he seen me, an' with head down an eyes ablazin', he kim straight fur me. I didn't hev no time to finish loadin', an', I jiss tuck tu my legs an' skun out for my pony, but, thet bufferler war a race hoss, a' he 'a'mos' ketch me afore I got half way to my pony. I seen it war no use to run any more, ur thet bufferler 'u'd ketched me on his horns an' throwed me tu kingdom come in no time, so I juss tuck tu a tree, but that durned tree hadn't no limbs ontu it, low down enough to ketch ontu, an' I couldn't climb it, an' I jess whipped roun' the tree with thet mad bufferler close arter me; an' we jess whipped roun' an' roun' the tree fur nigh ontu an hour, the bufferler achasin' me, an' me achasin' him, but he couldn't ketch me, cause he war so blamed big thet he hed tu take a wider circle than me, an' tu run further an' I kep' close tu his tail. He couldn't ketch me an' I didn't want tu ketch him, 'caus I were feared he mout git the best o' me in a tussle. Arter a long while he got tired o' chasin' an' sorter guv up an' walked away a few rods, an' stopped an' turned his head, an' looked at me with the wickedest, fireiest eyes I ever seen, an' 'peared tu be thinkin' we'ther it wur wuth while tu try me 'nuther chase. I finished loadin', an' tuck aim at his nigh eye, but jess as I pulled tricker he jerked his head an' the ball tuck him in the top o' his neck an' bruck his neck. I went and brung my pony over jess for company sake, an' let him roam roun' while I skun the bufferler. While skinnin' the bufferler I found thet my fust shot hed went a leetle tu fur back an' and a leetle tu fur up tu kill him, though it went clean through him; but, I can't see to this day how it war thet I didn't hit the spot I aimed fur, unless if war thet the sand he war tossin' made sech a cloud o' dust thet it fooled my sight. I skun the bufferler an' jerked the meat an' it made a powerful sight o' jerked meat; it tuck me three hull days, an' I packed it on my pony an' went back to my traps. Bull bufferler ain't the best kind o' beef fur fryin' an' br'ilin', but w'en jerked, 'tis a'mos' as good as any.

Old Joe's story was done; no one commented on it but all sat and smoked in meditative silence for several minutes; all except Dr. Thompson, he had neither pipe nor tobacco, and no one would give him any because of his cussedness, and he sat moodily apart, doubtless concocting in his mind schemes of retaliation and revenge for the many fancied wrongs and insults heaped upon him. The Doctor was like many others. He felt insulted, and injured and resentful when not invited so participate in the pleasures and enjoyments of others, though he would do nothing to promote them. He was of that class of men which says, "The world owes me a living and a living I will have, and I care not who pays for it." He was of the material that makes burglars and highway robbers, except that he lacked courage and nerve.

The dog, York, had been out hunting, all by himself again, as was his habit. He was a great hunter, though he was never known to catch anything. He came into camp limping with foot-soreness, and crept up to his master tremblingly and hesitatingly, with downcast eyes and drooped tail that wagged feebly, as though not sure of a welcome, and laid his head upon his master's knee in mute appeal of recognition. His misgivings were well-founded. The Doctor was in one of his surliest moods, and instead of a welcome and a caress, his responce to poor York's appeal was,)'Get out, you d—d dirty brute," accompanied by a vicions kick that sent the poor, faithful, affectionate dog howling away. Cooper was watching proceedings; he had several times before seen the Doctor's brutal treatment of his dog, but heretofore had held his temper and his tongue, though on every such occasion his jaws would close more firmly, his eyes would flash, and the hot blood would surge to his brain and suffuse his face and crimson his cheek.

I had been looking for Cooper to break into a storm on some occasion of the Doctor's cruelty to his dog, with great anticipation of fun, but, knowing, as I did, his firey, impetuous nature when fully roused, I had no idea of his power of invective and vituperation. He strode up to the Doctor, looked at him a full minute, and, the storm burst. For a quarter of an hour he poured upon the Doctor a continuous torrent of invective and vituperation more scathing and withering than anything I had ever heard. He was "hot in the collar" and didn't select his words except for choice expressions of cumulative vituperation, and he gave his temper and his tongue free play. He used neither profane nor vulgar language, though he trenched closely on both, and his words carned the more force because of their pure English. It struck me, then and there, that profanity and vulgarity weaken the force of language and impoverish it, and the impression and belief have grown stronger with each passing year. Everybody listened with admiration and delight to the dressing down that Cooper gave the Doctor and looked for some demonstration of retaliation, but the Doctor said never a word nor moved a muscle, not so much as the twitch of an eyelid was visible; one might as well have talked to a mud image; it would not have been healthy for him to say much and he, probably, knew it.

After finishing his tongue-lashing, Cooper looked contemptuously at the Doctor a minute and then said, "What will you take for your d-d dog anyway?" The reply of the Doctor was, "You con have him for a quart of whiskey." Cooper's disgust was unspeakable. He thrust his hands deep in his pockets, looked at the Doctor for three or four minutes with an inscrutable expression, then, shaking his head impatiently as if the burden of his thoughts lay too deep for utterance, walked over to where Captain Clark was sitting, spoke to him in a low tone and the two retired to one of the wrgons. In a short time they returned, Cooper carrying a canteen in his hand, which he tendered to the Doctor with, "There, you d-d brute, is your whiskey; I hope it will kill you and that your worthless carcass may rot on the plain or become carion for wolves and turkey-buzzards, though I scarcely think that such a whiskey-sodden carcass as yours would set well on their stomachs." The Doctor eagerly seized the canteen, took a long swig of whiskey, drew a deep breath and said, "The dog is yours." The transfer was made and Cooper politely remarked, "Dr. John Thompson, M. D. and A. M., if you ever again lay so much as a finger on that dog I'll murder you, d-n you," and the Doctor never did. "The sun had set and up rose the yellow moon." So sung the bard, but, if the moon is yellow in Spain, it is of a different color on the Great Plain; it was silver bright, and covered the landscape with a nimbus of glory, bathing it in shimmering light, and dimming the stars. Though but little rest and sleep had been obtained during the last forty hours, we sat for some time inhaling with deep inspirations the sweet, balmy air, and drinking in the beauty of the scene. Drousiness, however, began to creep over us, and, inspecting camp and picketing the horses in fresher pasture we went about retiring to our blankets when someone suggested that we have supper first. Though it was but a short time since we had supper we were all struck with the idea that we were hungry and fell in with the suggestion readily. Hunger, on the plains, is perennial, and, like the horse leach, always crying, "Give, give;" so we had another supper before retiring. The menu was the same, meal after meal, but, it did not pall on the palate nor become monotonous for keen appetite lent relish, and strong aronte coffee washed it down. It has before been spoken of, the large amount of solid food consumed by men leading such a life as we were leading, without surfeit or discomfort. It is the same with coffee; from three pints to two quarts can be drank without injury, and very strong coffee too. I have seen men drink six quarts of the strongest kind of coffee in a day. I, myself, have drank two quarts of coffee, strong enough "to bear up an iron wedge," and, lain down in my blankets, on the hard ground, with no roof but the canopy of heaven and slept as sweetly and soundly as on downy pillow.

A Good Sportsman Gone.

Al Baudle is dead. Sorrow and suffering, like a black pall, has fallen over and upon the hearts of all those he loved and those who loved him. A great, tender, generous heart is stilled, and sorrow sits enthroned upon hearts which, at the mention of his name, aforetime never knew a thought of grief. He was a famous shot; in a match with Bogardus he scored an even 100 birds to the old veteran's 95. Carver defeated him on the score of 91 to 90. He had made all preparations to go upon the road for the Lefever Arms Co., but suddenly took to his bed and on the 20th of January became delirious and he never arose from his bed, but was carried by tender hands from thence to his long place of rest. Many kind words—warm words—are said of Mr. Harvey McMurchy on account of his care and attention to Al Baudle during his last sickness. Another, speaking of his funeral says:

The funeral was to-day, Jan. 25, from the home at 152 Carlisle street. The crowd was enormous. It was touching to see the grief of the big, hardy fellows we used all to meet at Al Bandle's tournaments. There were richly dressed and poorly clad alike. One laboring man, with tears streaming down his grimed face. begged if he might "go in the parlor where Mr. Panale was," and when he came out there were many more tears upon his face. Al had friends of all ranks; and after all ls done, no man accomplishes much more than that.

The main floral piece, offered by the sportsmen friends who have practically had charge of everything since Al's sickness, was in the design of a broken ball, as whose base rested a broken gun. This design was that of Mr. Ed. Taylor, who has been here while Mr. McMurchy was at Syracuse. The latter could not be present to-day, for he is sick himself at Syracuse.

Al Bandle was only thirty-four years of age. Two years ago this Mardi Gras season he married the beautiful woman who now mourns him. Mrs. Bandle is grateful to the gentlemen who helped her in her time of distress. Speaking of the kindness she met at Syracuse, she said to Mr. Taylor that she "never knew before what it was to be among friends."

For the hard-pressed man or the distressed woman to be among sportsmen is always to be among friends. This is all that we have left of the ancient type of chivalry. It is because Al Bandle, sportsman and friend, belonged to this honorable order and stood high in it, that we shall remember him, knowing clearly that his faults, such as they were, were only such as are condoned or approved in those with whom fortune has been more kind. No fortune is kinder than the sincere tears of friends. I saw there to-day."

Camp Receipts.

The following valuable information has just been handed us by a sportsman whose experience in camp life entitles his remarks to careful consideration.

CLEAR SOUP.

Take two pints of water, wash them thoroughly on both sides, pour into a dish or something and stir around the kitchen until tired.

POUND CAKE.

Mix up some flour and things, put them into a dish, bake for awhile, then screw in the handle and commence to pound.

ICE CREAM.

Dry a piece of ice in the sun, stir in cold cream of vaseline, fan until it freezes, garnish with Christmas greens. This should be served with soup,

HASH.

Chop up everything, add cup of cayenne pepper—serve hot

TO DROP EGGS.

Let go of them.

Active preparations are being made all over the country and more especially over this State for a renewal of the sport of trap shooting. Here the open season on game lures our gunners to the field while in other sections of the country on account of scarcity of game the sportsmen are compelled to continue shooting at the trap or have no sport at all. The regular trap-shooting season opens here in this month for all the clubs and it is to be expected that fully as many if not more birds will be shot this year than there was last. The several clubs will doubtless have an increased membership and the crack of the gun will be heard more frequently than heretofore.

A bold, bad bluff comes by way of the windy city. In Billy Muzzy's safe there is enough and to spare all awaiting for Fulford and Brewer, or any one else, to come and shoot for it. Thousands for bluff, but not one cent for honest, square competition, should be the motto of the would-be sporting gentlemen who have filled and crammed Billy's safe with good, sound money, which is there to await the coming at some indefinite time of Fulford, Brewer or somebody else to beat somebody shooting pigeons at some indefinite time and place. Selah, which, being interpreted in the language of modern times, means Rats!

The local shooting grounds for the clubs of this city will be as heretofore at Oakland Shooting Park. The grounds are now in splendid condition and the automatic traps work in perfect shape. All of the clubs of the city will shoot on these grounds. The utmost harmony prevails throughout the entire body of sportsmen of this Coast and we have no doubt but that the final outcome of the season will mark a far greater degree of skill than that exhibited last year.

One day last week a number of the membership of the Country Club indulged in a preliminary practice pigeon shoot at Oakland Shooting Park. There was present President Fred R. Webster, George Crocker, Thomas Ewing, J. D. Grant, R. R. Grayson, W. C. Murdock. F. W. Tallant, A. C. Tubbs, R. B. Woodward, Fred L. Wooster and Alfred S. Tubbs. The afternoon's shoot was very enjoyable, and some very creditable scores were made.

"Doctor" Carver is again at the front shooting pigeons with all of his old time skill. On December 1st he killed 95 to Lewis Clark's 90, the latter being a celebrated Australian shot.

No sportsman should be without "Ralph Greenwood's" new book entitled "Modern American Rifles." The book contains much to interest and instruct the inquiring mind.

President Watkins on the Trials.

"Ize done gwien s'posed dat yo' all be watin' an' a-listenin' fo' t'heah 'bout de meetin' ob de Fiel' Trials Club down t' Bakersfield." said President Watkins, as he mounted the platform to address the expectant assembly at the African Sporting Club one night last week.

"Ef Brer Goosequill Swansdown 'el be shoah an' sartin 'bout de mannah ob de recordin' ob dis huh desertation in his capacity ob secretary ob dis huh body, den shoah ez yo' do be bawn de succeedin' membahs ob dis huh club el allus hab meat an' substance in de archives ob dis huh 'siety."

The Hon. G. Swansdown signified his readiness to catch every word and emblason them on the records of the club. "Gem'lin," began President Watkins, as he looked calmly and solemnly over his auditors, "de meetin' of de Field' Trial Club wur a won'ful 'casion. Yes, sah! I done s'posed dat dar been't no how pos'ble no meetin' what hab ebber 'sembled in dis huh State what wur half so good's dis huh one be.

DE DARBY.

Ize gwinter spoke 'special particklar 'bout de Darby. De Darby am de cradle ob de dogs what pint de birds. Yo' ges' bettah ter hab seed dem baby dogs. Dey wur stunnin' for looks. Dar want er single man ob de whole crowd but what furgot fur ter say, 'Yo' orter seed de dogs ob dis huh or ob dat ar meetin!' No, sah! Dey all, eber one ob em, ges' took of dar hats an' say. 'Fo' God, Ize nebber seed sich fine lot ob dogs since de day I wuz bawn!'

Dar workin' 'mong de birds wur mighty nigh ez fine ez dar looks. Dar want no runnin' ober de birds like twuz las' yeah by most ob de dogs. Dey ges', eber one ob em, kept astickin' ob dar doses in de sage an' grass an' asayin' by de golden speech ob silence, 'Ize got de bird!'

Den when dey catch de odah ob de birds what am lyin' pow'ful low an' s'prizin' still in de covah, dey ges' come to de stiffin' ob dar self an' quit de notin' ob ebber'ting 'ceptin' de smellin' ob de bird. Den de oder dogs what am maybe huntin' way ober mos' furder dan any fiel' ordinance could ebber shoot, say nuthin' 'bout bein' sartin' 'bout hittin' nuffin' ud be whistled fur an' on coming up 'ud "back" de fust dog what 'ud be pintin' de bird. Backin' means ter kinder 'sist in de game, sorter like helpin' yo' pardner all yo' kin when yo' be playin' keerds, 'ceptin' dis huh wur a straight game, kinder curus ez de dogs neber draw ter flushes, which. when dey get 'em, is on 'count ob er bad break an' ez mostly sot down ter be on 'count ob de lack ob nose. Ef de dog make pow'ful sight sich brakes, he be sot down ez er "duffer," what means he bettah go play et some udder game.

Dar do be some curus goin's on at de trials, but dar wur mostly nuffiin' 'ceptin' good time and best ob fun on dis huh 'casion, leastwise de kickahs be ob no 'count trash ez ter no mo' and ter 'title 'em ter scownful silence. But Ize gwinter say ez how dar be some indiwiduals ez would be covered all ober wid de glorious garments of 'special 'tention ef dey be 'minded wif de condescension ob de commonist sort ob sneer. 'Tain't no how pos'ble dat eber man know nuff ter know when de dog be han'els ez fit fur startin' in de trials.

No body 'round des huh parts got eny fault ter find wid any dogs what wuz started in de trials, but dar wuz some pow'ful senseless kickin' bout de propah puson usin' his own judgmunt 'bout de dogs he'd start. De dogs warn't ob de howlin' kind, an' so some folks hed ter do de howlin', an' Ize gwinter say ez how de propah persons concluded dat et wuz dar business ter howl, 'special propah twuz, ez et wan't none ob dar business.

De wurk ob de dogs durin' de whole meetin' wuz pow'ful fine, an' ebery body wuz mo' dan pleased. Most ebery countenance wuz clothed wif a smile which turned ter de grin, and most alluz 'casionally busted inter er jolly larf.

Et de noonin' time dar was 'special seasons ob change ob 'pinion. Dar wuz de man de minit you said "dog!" ud start off et er 2:40 gait, rollin' off pedigrees 'bout dish huh way: Biff, by Bang, outen Snap; Bang, by Shot, outen Smoke; Shot, by Bird, outen Bush, an' so forth, an' some mo', but noten narry word bought de dog—ges' nuffin' 'ceptin' pedigree. Ize 'special persuaded ter state dat dar do be mo' s'prizen dogs on papah dan dar be in de fiel'. Dar be shoah some won'ful s'prizen bits ob wisdom ter be foun' et de fiel' trials.

We understand that Mr. James Mortimer of Babylon, L. I., N. Y., is the choice of the California Kennel Club for judge in the coming bench show.

The club could not find a more popular all round man or a more genial judge. As superintendent of the Westminster Kennel Club he is well known, and as a judge deservedly popular.

The announcement of Mr. Jas. E. Watson in the last issue relative to the superiority of the black pointer blood has created considerable interest among kennel men generally, especially those who give attention to field sports. It seemed remarkable that the records made by the two dogs placed in the California trials should not have called attention more fully ere this to the excellent quality of the blacks; especially when it is remembered that in almost all classes of dogs, hundreds are bred before an equivalant to either of these two black pointers are secured. The strength and purity of birdsense it would seem should not be subject to such fluctuations as are shown in a great many of the so-called leading families of bird dogs. In fact the production in many of the much vaunted families of field dogs of remarkable ones has been so isolated that they may be said to be well nigh fortuitous. It is true that we may not expect wonders to be developed from each one of every litter, but that there should be but one and in many instances no indication of superior bird sense in any one of certain litters seems quite strange. Mr. Watson goes further in the present issue, than in the former, in his proposition to run the black pointers against any or all other families of dogs or in general parlance against the field. He proposes entering from four to six dogs, an equal number in the Derby and All-Age Stakes, the puppies to be run both in the Derby and All-Age as may be agreed upon. We should very much like to see this proposition taken up at once and within the next thirty days, the time specified by Mr. Watson, as a selection within that period, of dogs eligible to the Derby would preclude any question of special selection for the work aside from blood lines. There is but little question in looking over the field, but that the pointer has more than held his own, in fact has taken higher grounds this year than ever before in the field trials all over the country, but we are always in favor of the best dog, be he of whatever breed or color with which the chances of birth may have endowed him. Competition is the main spur to development in every line and especially has it so proven in the kennel world.

Perhaps the most convincing argument which could be used in favor of California winter weather would be to present a copy of the pictures taken at the Field Trials on the 22d of last month, showing the conditions existing at that time; the ladies without wraps, the gentlemen with light summer coats or coatless and the general air of summer which pervades the presentation of the entire groups taken goes to show the midsummer-like conditions which prevail in the San Joaquin Valley during the entire season. Mr. C. A. Nelson, of Bakersfield, has for a number of years acted in the capacity of official photographer for the club and the various pictures by him taken during these events form a most interesting subject for the study and reminiscense of these most pleasurable occasions. On Thursday, the 22d of last month, the ladies at Bakersfield and vicinity attended the Trials in great numbers and enlivened the proceedinge with their presence to a degree which rendered the sport doubly pleasant. The luncheon hour was particularly enjoyable and will ever remain a most pleasant memory in the minds of all present.

I deeply regret to announce that it will be impossible for me to send a team of my Clumber Spaniels through the coming circuit of shows as heretofore. During the last five months I have suffered from a series of accidents which tied me down to my bed during four of them, and the kennelman, taking advantage of my inability to oversee matters connected with the kennel, allowed the dogs, one and all, to become diseased. Two of them have already died and more may yet go to the happy hunting grounds. They are now in good hands, however, and I hope for the best. It is a bitter disappointment to me being thus debarred from exhibiting a quartet of my favorites, more especially as there was every likelihood of their meeting considerable competition. Their record for 1891 was fifty-seven challenge, first and special prizes won out of sixty competed for with ten different dogs and bitches, at eleven of our largest shows. Perhape they may recover their usual good condition in time for the latter shows.

OTTAWA, Canada. F. H. F. MERCER.

A recent transfer of the present week, and one we have an extra amount of pleasure in recording, is that of the English setter bitch Belle to Mr. L. L. Campbell, of West Berkeley, by Mr. K. E. Meyer, of Petaluma. Belle is a rangy, well-proportioned, black, white and tan, with splendid limbs and feet, good body and loin and fine coat. Her skull is typical and ears well hung; in short, she is one of the best we have seen this season. She is by ch Gladstone ex Zell, Zell by Royal II—Madge, Royal II by Royal I, he by Prince ex Dora—Dora a Duke-Rharbe bitch. With two crosses of Duke-Rhœbe on Llaverack stock, one could not ask for a better pedigree. We hope soon to be able to chronicle the fact that one of our leading Irish setter breeders has divided his allegiance with the English variety.

Mr. Wm. H. Collins has received his recent Eastern purchase, the crack bull terrier Spotless Prince, winner of first at New York and Elmira 1890, and second at New York 1891. He is royally bred being by Cato ex Venus, Cato by ch Dutch—ch Maggie May, Venus by Silver King—Kittering Maggie. He arrived in fine condition and a fine express bill, the shipper having shipped him over three express lines, in place of shipping him right through. In connection with Mr. Collin's bitch recently noticed he should raise the finest bull terriers on this coast.

In a private letter to us, says American Field Mr. E. D. Fulford writes: "'If Kleinman's friends mean business, I hope to have the pleasure of meeting you, personally, in Chicago, in three or four weeks,' which means that Mr. Fulford is open to a match with Mr. Geo. Kleinman. We do not know that Mr. Fulford could at this time get a match with Mr. Geo. Kleinman, for he has of late been shooting a new gun with which he is not yet able to do the work he did with his old one, and his former gun is in such condition that he will not use it. However, we learn that Mr. R. B. Organ, acting for the sportsmen of Chicago, has written to Mr. C. W. Budd, of Des Moines, Ia., to see if he will shoot a race with Mr. Fulford if the latter gentleman visits Chicago. An answer is expected from Mr. Budd in a few days when, if the matter is agreeable to him, a chalange to Mr. Fulford will be issued.'" Fishways.

A correspondent of the Forest and Stream has the following to say on the above named subject: "Your term of a "continual failure" is a new one, but fits the fishway at Holyoke very well. It is a monumental failure certainly, for as your correspondent Mr. Waters says, it is reported to have cost $30,000, and there is no record of any fish except a few eels ever going up it. During the five years I was on the New Hampshire Fish Commission I visited it frequently, and never saw a fish of any sort in it.

The trouble with it is that like many of the early fishways it was built from a wrong "point of view," or as the boys say, "hind end first." The Lawrence fishway was built in the same manner, or with the mouth of it far down stream out of the maiu current, up which the fish always go until they meet an obstruction, when they try to get around it.

The Lawrence fishway was utterly useless for the first few years, until in 1877 or '78 the Commissioners cut it in two in the middle and turned the lower end backward, so as to bring it into the pool at the foot of the dam where the fish could find it. The New Hampshire Commission have always protested against both of these fishways as first built, and my colleague, the late A. H. Powers, went to Massachusetts to urge the change in the one at Lawrence.

The instant it was changed fish of all kinds (except shad) began to come up it, and the number of salmon has been increasing yearly. I do not know how many Commissioner Hodge took in all this year at the hatchery at Plymouth, N. H., one hundred miles up the river, but he had taken seventy-six the last time I heard from him, and a number had been caught on their way up, about Garrins Falls, above three fishways. The New Hampshire Commissioners have begged those of Massachusetts again and again to bend back the fishway at Holyoke. They plead off at first on the excuse of great expense, but have had a better one since in the fact that the Connecticut fishermen caught every fish that attempted to ascend the river in their weirs and pounds at the mouth, and the Connecticut Legislature refused to correct the evil. The result was that the salmon with which New Hampshire and Vermont stocked the river in 1874, were all caught before they could get up as far as Hartford, but a large number were taken below there for two or three years, I think in '78 and '79.

So as New Hampshire cannot move Massachusetts, nor Massachusetts start Connecticut, the river remains unfruitful. I have never heard of shad going up any fishway, without it be the McDonald, and that is impracticable in our Northern rivers, on account of the heavy ice brought down in the freshets in the spring, which would smash any timber construction to splinters, unless protected behind a heavy stone abutment.

It is easy enough to build a practicable fishway, if the builders will only look at it in the right way, and remember that the fish are going up the river, and not down. That, except eels and small fish, they are usually out in mid current, and not being up in the air like birds, they cannot look down and see the ingenious ladders which men have built for them, far down the streams, but go on against the current till they run against a dam or rock, and then try to get around it to the right or left. It makes no difference where the upper end is, so long as it is in the water of the upper level.

I built the Manchester fishway from the pool below the dam, leading up to the canal, also below the dam horizontally, or down stream, but on the upper level. Let the fish once surmount the fall, and they will find their way up through the headgates of any canal fast enough. The Manchester fishway has been a perfect success, although some ignorant busy-bodies found fault because the fish stopped to rest for a day in the pool at the foot of the dam, after climbing the natural "chute" below, before they attempted the second climb of the fishway. Let me repeat, it is no matter where the upper end of the fishway is, if on the upper level, if the lower end is in the pool, as near the fall as possible. You may build a loop round the end of the dam, you may run down and come back, as at St. Lawrence, or lead into the canal as at Manchester, but have the lower end where the fish can find it without "going up in a balloon" to look for it. They will find their way down any fall, tail first," fast enough. The Holyoke fishway needs only to be cut in the middle and bent back to the dam.

I did not mention the one at Lowell, and it should not be omitted, but it simply consists in leaving off one fish-board at the north end of the dam, opposite the city, where the ledge rises to the surface, so that the dam is only two feet high. When the fish meet this fall they simply "turn to the right and find their way round the corner!"

A series of "log cabins," twelve feet square or so, was first built at Lowell, against the center of the dam, each one about three feet lower than the one above, expecting the fish to jump up from one to the other, but it was worthless. The point seems to me to be here, the fish do not go up stream by sight, but by feeling, and go against the most favorable current.

I do not think a fish can see very far in the broken water of a fall, and I do not think from my experience as an angler that they see objects out of water, through it, under such conditions. I always prefer to fish a pool from the upper end, where the broken water serves to hide me.

I forget how far down stream the Holyoke Fishway debouched, and have lost my record, but think it was about 400 feet and away off at one side, where no fish would think of either looking or feeling for a passage.

Artificially Reared Trout.

The Massachusetts law, as most others, forbids the sale of trout in close season. There are in the waters of that State, according to an estimate by Mr. W. S. Gilbert, the successful trout culturist of Plymouth, says the Forest and Stream, from 15,000 to 20,000 pounds of artificially reared tront; and persons engaged in the business regard it as a hardship that they are not permitted to market these fish whenever they might do so to advantage. At the meeting of the Massachusetts Association last week Mr. Gilbert presented the claim of the trout culturists and asked the Association's aid in securing a modification of the law in their favor.

When the law was enacted, artifically reared trout were an unknown factor. The law was not intended to apply to them. But experience has demonstrated that to protect any species of fish or game its sale in close time must be stopped; and the one point for the board of managers of the Association to consider is whether or not the desired permission to sell cultivated trout may open the way to the sale of wild trout. While the raising of trout for market is an industry which should be given every reasonable encouragement, because of its contribution to the food fish supply, the primary purpose of the statute is to protect the wild fish, and this must be effected, even at the expense of private enterprises.

Minnesota allows possession and transportation of trout reared in private waters, and prescribes that they must be accompanied with a written statement, signed by the proprietor of the hatchery or waters from which they have been taken.

News From Sioux Falls.

Sioux Falls, S. D.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—A few words from this far away (from California) country may prove of interest to your many readers. Sioux Falls, South Dakota, a very handsome place of about 10,000 inhabitants, situated, as its name implies, at the falls of the Sioux river; a city of very handsome residences and expensive stone business blocks, six stories high are common in fact. It seems to me as though the business blocks are ahead of the town, but be that as it may, I will proceed at once to the hunting dogs and their respective owners. Genial, gentlemanly fellows, did you ask? Well, I should say so. Who ever saw a devotee of a dog and and gun who was not a gentleman? There are more pointers and setters to the square inch in Sioux Falls than any city of of the same size I was ever in, although they have quantity I am inclined to think deficient in quality, speaking from a bench show standpoint. Never tread on a dogs toes or you will have his owner to lick, or get licked, savy? I have been here for the past month during the extreme cold weather and having nothing much else to do, and loving the dog as you know I do, I have devoted my time to a partial study of the dogs of Sioux Falls. Being a stranger, I asked for a guide, so to speak, to enable me to pass on the respective merits of each individual dog. The following criticisms are, for the most part, such as was furnished me, and as near as I can remember, in my genial guide's exact words. Said he, "Now we will head the list with that prince of goodfellows and most thorough sportsman, John Hutchinson, not because he not only deserves to be thus placed, but because he is the owner of the only thoroughbred in town that won't hunt—a remarkable Gordon handsomely marked, and, as John says, a Dandy—Henry Davis, did you say? Yes, Sir, great dog that nice head, well sprung stifles, good bone and muscle. Tail did, did you say? Yes, sir, ain't that dandy? If it only had (the tail I mean) one more curl, it would not touch the ground behind at all? Now here we come dogs and all. Great Scott, see the crowd of dogs, Do they all belong to the same owner? Yes, sir, every one of them are owned by Shanny. Don't know Shanny? Well, come here and I will introduce you. Mr. S. Kinkade, allow me the pleasure to congratulate you on your dog, and is it a fact, Mr. Kinkade, you are never seen without from four to six dogs with you all the time? Yes, sir, I own them and am proud of them. Good boy, so am I. Now, then, here we are. Bang Bang did you say? Why, man, Bang Bang died a year or two ago—a famous Westminminster pointer. Don't care anything about that this is or was Bang Bang, and is or was owned by Charley Ross. What; the lost Charley Ross? Well, not exactly, but the dog, not Charley, does get lost occasionally. J. D. Grant, did you say?

Yes, I have heard of him; shoots a little at the trap occasionally. Yes sir, only one bad fault in the world, sir. Yes, he is inclined to kill all the birds when afield, and don't give the boys any show. Well, how does he managed that? Will you see, sir? He shoots a Spencer repeating shot gun and the way he can handle it is a catution to cats. Frank Ford, handsome Frank, nice fellow, afield good shot and knows a good dog when he sees the same.

The above also applies to George Knott.

Will Kinnan good shot, great walker, owner some fine dogs. Are the dogs staunch? Say, you must be a greenie for sure around these parts, staunch. Well, I should say so. Why Will and some friends were out hunting chickens last fall and and Will's dog, that one there came to a point just on the rail road track and there he stood stiff as a poker. A passenger train came along and the dog's tail not being clear of one of the rails, why it cut his dog's tail off smooth. Yes sir, fact, and the dog never broke his point. Come take something? Well, don't care if we do. Where will we go? Why, let's go up to Stib's drug store. Get something there. Know Stibs? Know, well you ought to; why he's the dady of them all. Say, Stibs has got a wonderful idea, going to run a giraffe on birds next year. Stibs says it a dog, but we think different. Good shot did you ask? Yes sir, but when he secures his new Hammerless and with his lemon and white grand dady long legs won't he make the boy hump? Whew! I should say so.

Complimenting J. R. Dickson.

The coursing meeting gotten up for and on behalf of Mr. J. R. Dickson and run off at Newark on January 24th was a very pleasant and successful testimonial to one of the most gentlemanly and thoroughly-posted coursing men of the entire country. The meeting was tendered Mr. Dickson by the Occidental Coursing Club in recognition of the faithful services and constant care put forth by him on behalf of the club and in favor of coursing in general. The meeting was a splendid success and the attendance one of the largest of the season, in fact, it was one of the best meetings ever held at this popular coursing park.

Kathleen was awarded first prize, Queen Bess second, Daisy third, Prince Rupert fourth, Catherine Hayes fifth and Ironclad sixth.

The officers of the day were: Judge, John Grace; slipper, James Wren; slip steward, J. R. Dickson; flag steward, J. O'Shea; field stewards, H. Wormington, T. S. O'Keefe and P. D. Nolan.

We congratulate Mr. Dickson on this expression, from the most prominent coursing club of the west, of confidence and esteem and wish him many happy returns for his genial and whole-souled interest in clean sports generally.

Bred.

Jas. E. Watson, Berkeley, Cal., has bred Gyp, fox-terrier bitch by Spice—Vixen, to J. B. Martin's Blemton Shiner, by Blemton Rubicon—Blemton Brilliant, at San Francisco, February 2, 1892.

Mr. William G. Layng, one of the editors of the Breeder and Sportsman, has received from Mr. Matt Dwyer a fine cocker spaniel puppy. To use Mr. Dwyer's words, "she is bred in the purple," and her new owner is sure he has a prize-winner in her against all comers.

Retrieving at Field Trials.

San Francisco.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman—The above seems to be a current subject of comment with the sportsmen's journals all over the country, though just why retrieving should be considered simply as to its effects in field trials alone, confess I cannot conceive.

The main objection used by the adverse element as to retrieving seems to be the allegation that forced retrieving or teaching a young and highly-bred dog to retrieve would be to break his spirit and crush and cower him to such an extent as would render his breaking a detriment to his other acquirments and developments. In the light of experience this broad statement seems very strange, and I believe it to be ill-advised and with but little foundation in fact. If the trainer in teaching a dog to retrieve, should spoil him, break his spirit and cower him so that he would be impaired for the best work in the field, then so much the worse for the trainer and his methods. He must be ignorant both as to dogs and methods. Teaching to retrieve does not imply necessarily a spiked collar or unusual severity of punishment of any other nature. Different dogs require different methods of treatment, but it would seem from the very nature of the case that a dog that would be cowered by a certain means of instruction should be treated by some other method. It would seem that nothing could be clearer than that if a dog be so very finely bred that he cannot be properly schooled for the field that this very fact should disqualify him from being considered in the matter. Nothing is more disgusting than to find many kennel men apparently seriously considering as champions, dogs which from improper methods of breeding, are defective in sight, hearing, and so timid and gun shy as to be of but little use even after the utmost pains have been taken in breaking them. I am strongly in favor of dogs that have sufficient stamina and force to not only withstand thorough training, but also a good day's work in the hills without showing complete exhaustion, as many of our "crack" dogs now do at the end of an hour's heat on level ground. Retriever.

Brute instinct has formed the theme of many an article, and wonderful instances have been given of the exercise of almost human judgment by animals; but the following, which came under our own observation, lays just a shade over anything we ever read: Quite recently C. Sweeters and the writer were driving up the Water Canyon, and as we turned a bend we saw a doe and a young fawn drinking from the stone ditch. At our approach the animals were startled, and in attempting to turn and run the poor little fawn lost its balance and fell into the ditch. As many of our readers know, the water runs very swiftly and in great volume up there, and of course, the fawn was carried down stream. The mother deer seemed to lose all fear of us and ran down the edge of the ditch trying to reach her offspring with her head.

Suddenly she ran ahead of the floating fawn for some little distance. She plunged into the ditch with her head down stream and her hindquarters toward the fawn. She braced her fore feet firmly in the crevices of the rocks to resist the rush of water. In a second the fawn was washed up on its mother's back and it instinctively clasped her neck with its forelegs. The doe then sprang from the ditch with the fawn on her back. She lay down and the baby deer rolled to the ground in an utterly exhausted condition. Mr. Sweeters and myself were now not more than thirty feet from the actors in this animal tragedy, but the mother seemingly unconcious of our presence, licked and fondled her offspring for a few minutes until it rose to its feet, and the doe and fawn then trotted up the mountain side.

Residents of Banning will remenber that on two occasions a fawn had floated down the ditch to the town. It is fortunate that in this instance the doe showed so much sagacity. Otherwise, under the new game law, the Banning Land Company would have been liable to arrest for causing the death of the fawn.

If there is anybody that doesn't believe Mr. Sweeters when he tells this story, let them come to us and we will vouch for it.—Banning Herald.

Of course and if you still should doubt the scribe of the Herald, you might, gentle reader, ask Eli Perkins.

There can be but little question that the subject of small bore guns is receiving more consideration to-day than ever before. The tendency is to favor them. It is not going too far to say that to-day the 16-gauge gun is as much in favor to-day as was the 12-bore two years ago. The old 10-gauge has been long since considered a very back number, and every indication now is that but a short time will suffice to find it obsolete, except, perhaps, in the hands of occasional pot hunters. The change is to be welcomed. To carry a single pound more than is absolutely necessary on a hunting trip is folly. To shoot wing game there is but little sport at which a 16-gauge is not preferable, being equally effective to that of the 12-gauge. For quail shooting such as we here have, we are persuaded that even a 20-gauge gun is ample, most birds being killed within twenty-five yards. Do you doubt this statement? If you should, will you please not guess at it, but on your next trip mark the exact distance at which your birds are killed; my word for it, you will be surprised at the results obtained in this matter.

If the several secretaries of the various gun clubs over the State, and the west generally, will send in the results of their regular and any and all important special matches at the trap, we will be pleased to publish them. A good, live secretary can do much to advance the interests of his club. It does not require any great labor, only a little attention given at the proper time and all is complete. We have on hand score books and cards which we will be pleased to furnish any and all clubs gratis. If the secretaries of the various clubs will please to send us an account of the first meeting of the club for the season, the names of the newly elected officers, and, if possible, a complete roster of the names of the membership of their several clubs, we will try and use them to the advantage of the sporting interests of the State.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

[WRITTEN FOR THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN BY CICERO SIMS.]

"Gallop him easy until you strike the half-pole, and then send him a good, stiff mile."

"Yaas, sah."

This order was given to a diminutive piece of ebony-hued humanity humped monkey-like on the back of a strapping, long-bodied bay colt with a star in his forehead and two white feet. The commander was a wiry, blonde-haired six-footer with big blue eyes, which had a kind, true look out of them and no little magnetism. He was perhaps twenty-two years of age, by name James Vaughn, and from a Kentucky family that had raced horses for many generations. The brief conversation noted above took place just a little after daybreak on the Lexington race track.

Pomp did as his employer instructed him, and the young trainer timed the colt the full mile in 1:43. He waved his hand at the boy to stop the horse and bring him back to the stable. Here he and "Nigger Eli" went to work on the colt with rub-cloths, and with the peculiar hissing sound negroes indulge in when rubbing a horse, Lightning's coat shone in a very few moments like the finest of silk in the sun of that beautiful morning. Then came a good feed for the "big fellow" and a rest for a few hours, when he was to get some walking exercise.

"The colt did that mile easy, didn't he, Pomp?" said young Vaughn.

"Yaas, sah. Ef he keep on that-a-way he's boun' to make 'em run some to head him. I reckon he could gone about a secon' an' a half fastah if I'd sent him for all he was wuff."

"You're mighty right, Pomp," said James, "but it won't do to work him hard so early in the season. I'm glad to see you follow my instructions so well about getting up early in the morning to work the string. The touts haven't got onto the colt as yet, I believe, and if I can win a race or two with the others, we'll be in clover."

"De ole hoss (meaning Danville) pow'ful frisky, terday, Mass Jim," said Eli, "an' ef dat ah rheumatiz don't hit him agin right away we'll give somebody a hoss race wif him yit."

"I only hope he'll stand up for three weeks or so, and if he does and wins we'll give Danville the rest he deserves in his old age. He's saved our bacon for us many a time when the grass was gettin' mighty short. Eh, boys?" said Mass Jim.

"Wonnah ef you ain't right, Mass Jim," said Pomp. "Membah las' Augus' at Sar'togy, when we didan have nothin' an' didan know how we was goin.' to git back to Lexington nohow. Didan ole Danvul jes' go out and beat that ah big fav'it, 'Rastus, and win foh Mass Cunnel Jack with 15 to 1 agin' him? Maybe I don't 'membah how we all came back to Lexin'ton in a painted cah wif oodles of greenbacks in our pockets. Ooh, hoo! Lordy, honey, maybe ole Danvul didn't save us?"

The "old horse's" dicky forelegs were wrapped in red flannel, and he was worked very carefully until he was in as good shape as he ever would be again,and getting in light in an overnight handicap, once more he galloped to the front and managed to stay there to the end, although Pomp declared to "Mass Jim" that "Danvul felt to him as ef he was gwine to give out every jump of de stretch."

The odds against Danville, 8 to 1, didn't have any other effect than to madden young Vaughn, who saw the old horse come under the wire first without carrying even a dollar for him except the $500 purse. However, this meant oats for the string and the standing off for a time, at least, of the hunger wolves.

One of the two-year-olds was "on edge," and landed a neat little purse race for the youthful trainer, and things began to "look up." However, he longed to win that Tennessee Cup and sufficient money to "set up housekeeping," for be it known that Jim was in love, and the feeling was reciprocated by the pretty object of his choice, Miss Winnie Hunter, a representative of one of the proudest of the F. F. of K.'s. Her parents knew nothing of the feeling that existed between the young people, and if they had there would have been war indeed. A Hunter marry a horse-trainer? Ridiculous! But Winnie had promised to wed Jim the moment he was able to provide for her, and had in addition agreed to come to him the moment Dame Fortune had given him a sufficient number of smiles. Johnson pere had often seen young Vaughn around the race track, for the old gentleman was president of the local racing association, and looked on the youth as above the average of trainers in intelligence. Had it ever occurred to him that Vaughn was paying attention to his young, dark-eyed daughter there would have been claret on the phiz of Luna. Winnie was of medium height, with lustrous brown eyes, dark brown hair, rosy cheeks, a plump and shapely form, pretty teeth, a dimple in her chin and a wee mite of a foot. She was a famous horsewoman, and always carried off first honors in the equestrienne contests at the State Fair. She was amiable and pleasant in manner, but had a will of her own that had never as yet been held in check. She had fallen in love with Jim the first time she ever saw that strapping son of the Grand Old Commonwealth, and nothing could compare with the young Kentuckian's affection for the girl who held a position so far above him. Not a day passed that he did not meet his fiance, and all their plans were arranged against the time "when Lightning wins the Cup."

* * * * * * *

James Vaughn's father, "Colonel Jack," as he was known from New Orleans to New York, had departed this life less than two months before this story opens, feared by many, but revered by few outside of his only child. Colonel Vaughn's wife had been dead for a dozen years. He was a violent, impulsive man, good-hearted withal, but dissipation had cut him off in his forty-sixth year. When Colonel Jack was a very young man, his father, taken ill suddenly, sent him to Louisville to sell thirty or forty head of blooded cattle and a dozen yearling thoroughbreds by the stallion Peerless, famous at that time as the getter of game and speedy colts. It was the year's product of the beautiful bluegrass farm. Jack had minute instructions from the old gentleman as to the proper way to conduct the sale, and he was to proceed home as soon as the animals had found purchasers. The blooded stock was readily sold, and Jack felt as proud as a king. Just as he was to return he met an acquaintance a little older than himself on the street who was going to a faro bank.

"Won't you go up, Jack, and see me win a couple of thousand?" said his acquaintance. To make a long story short, Jack went, got infatuated with the game, put down a twenty-dollar piece himself timidly, lost it, got excited, vowed he'd have it back, and at length, about two in the morning, found himself stripped of the thousands he had realized on the stock, and was besides the betrayer of his father's trust. He dared not go home and face the old gentleman. Jack Vaughn was disowned and disgracsd. Besides, his brothers and sisters were ordered never again to mention the name of the scoundrel that had robbed his poor old father."

Naturally Jack Vaughn drifted toward the race track. He managed to reach New Orleans by borrowing from his faro-playing friend, and there got work as trainer of a small string of horses for a Louisiana gentleman who had taken a fancy to him. John Vaughn was a most successful trainer, and as the years rolled on, and he gained experience, he had a reputation second to no man in the South as a conditioner of horses.

He became ambitious, launched out for himself, and was always lucky in securing bread winners. No matter how much he won on the race course, however, the faro-bank tiger always got the best of him, and sometimes he had a hard struggle to get from one racing point to another with his horses. Vaughn was considered "a good fellow" so long as he kept sober, but once under liquor he was a perfect madman who would inflict injury on friend and foe alike who crossed him in the least, for he was a most powerful man. Colonel Jack's father died without ever forgiving his wayward son.

James Vaughn had been sent to school until his seventeenth year, at which time his father had such a run of bad luck that the tuition fee was no longer forthcoming. "Anyhow," his father said, "you have enough education—as much as I ever received."

And so James, or "Jim," as he was called by everyone except the stable boys and jockeys (to whom he was "Mass Jim"), joined his father and took up the business followed by his outcast parent for a livelioood. On his deathbed Colonel Jack preached a good sermon to his only loving relative in the world, advising him never to enter a faro bank or get a taste for liquor. "My boy," said he, "your father has made lots of money in his day, but he never had a faculty for holding on to it. All I have to leave you is the old horse, Danville, two two-year-old fillies and the three-year-old colt, Lightning. The fillies and the colt are well engaged. You will find a list of the stakes they are entered in in the top partition of my trunk. Lightning, as you well know, has never been started in a race, for he was an overgrown two-year-old. He's a great colt, boy, and nobody knows much about him except ourselves. If nothing happens you ought to capture the Tennessee Cup with him at Nashville. Lightning's bred to stay the route. Don't start him until you get to Nashville, and get a good boy to ride him. I've got enough to bury me decently when I die, don't owe a dollar on the horses, and have paid all the forfeits up to date. I'm getting weak now, Jim, and reckon I'd better take a little sleep."

It was an everlasting sleep, and Colonel Jack had paid the last forfeit of his earthly race. When Jim went to see how his father was early in the morning he found him apparently sleeping sweetly. But it was the sleep of death, and Jim was alone in the world without scarcely a dollar after paying the funeral expenses of his loving father.

However, the stable-boys were engaged by the year, and the old horse would win a purse or two at Lexington maybe. The boys were Pomp and Eli, who thought "Mass Jim" just the "bes' while man dat evah walk dis earf." He could get more work out of them than ever his father could, for Colonel Jack "dldn't believe in triflin' with niggahs nohow." James Vaughn believed in kind words, not kicks, and the result was that "his boys" would fight anyone that ever hinted that "Mass Jim" wasn't a great man.

* * * * * * *

"Well, boys, I reckon we're here in better shape than we thought we'd be," said "Mass Jim" to Pomp and Eli as they walked the horses from the cars to the Nashville race track on the afternoon of their arrival from Lexington.

"Yes, we is," said Jockey Pomp. "Old Danvul and Clarra Lou done theirselves proud at ole Lexington in them two puss races, and we got a pretty good start. Lightnin' looks tolable faih, and Lilly 'pears to like travelin'."

Reaching the race track, everything was full of life and bustling activity. Strings were coming from different parts of the country in a ceaseless stream almost. Touts were hanging around trying to "spot" the likely-looking new arrivals, stable boys were grouped here and there engaged in the game called craps, while the merry thrum-thrum of the festive banjo rang out cheerily on the air. Once in a while the player proved to be a singer of no ordinary ability, and the lay he warbled was suprisingly sweet in point of melody, even if the words were below par.

"Thar's a pow'ful sight o' hosses heah, Mass Jim," said the thoughtful Eli, looking about him, "and we're liable to strike a snag, I'm afeard:"

"Yes, Eli, there's lots of horses and heaps of folks pryin' around tryin' to find out what a fellow's got, and we can't be too careful. We will work Danville and the two-year-olds before all the touts they've got down here, for our wins at Lexington has given them a line on 'em anyhow. But we're kept ahead of them as far as Lightning is concerned, and we'll have to watch our chance to work him out."

"That we have fooled 'em on Lightnin', Mass Jim, and me an' Pomp'll pester 'em a heap yit wif the co't befo' dey finds out what he kin' do, dat we will."

Suitable stalls for the little string were provided, and soon Eli had supper cooking on the stove and everything in as good order as if he had lived there all his life.

The Cup was to be run for on the fourth day, and to-morrow Lightning must be given his last hard work-out. This would tell whether he was on edge and would stay the two-and-a-quarter-mile route. At daybreak Pomp was on the big colt's back with his orders from Mass Jim to "rate him the first mile in about '46, the mile and a half in 2:42, and then turn him loose." Pomp carried out his instructions as near as he could, and the colt finished strong in 3:59, or 1:17 for the last three-quarters. When the colt was cantered back to where Jim was standing the young trainer's face was radiant, and he said to Pomp:

"If they can beat that they can break me." To himself he said: "If Lightning don't fall down I can't lose, and Winnie will be my wife at last. We will have enough to set up housekeeping in style befitting her beauty and station, and her father will bless us after he sees how like a queen I will treat her."

* * * * * * * *

The day that meant to young Vaughn ruin and unhappiness or riches and bliss, dawned as cloudless as the most enthusiastic race-goer could wish, and early crowds commenced to wend their way in all sorts of vehicles toward the great race course.

Pools on the Cup had sold in the Maxwell House the night before as follows: Greenville, $800; Augusta, $650; Tom Johnson, $600; Emaline, $400; Torment, $250; the field (Piney, Black Gal and Lightning), $85, with few anxious for the "short end." Colonel Thompson, owner of the Columbia Stable, was very "sweet" on his horse, Greenville, winner of the Louisiana St. Leger, the Merchants' Stakes at Memphis, and other rich events, and bet his money as if coin grew on his stock farm like bluegrass; the Georgia mare, Augusta, had a large following, and Joe Hurt, the pool-seller did not have to look far for buyers on the game mare from the water-melon State; Louisville money said that Tom Johnson had the race won, while the Maryland mare, Emaline, and Torment, the Montana representative, were not lacking for admirers with coin to back their judgment. Piney and Black Gal had been beaten at both New Orleans and Memphis, and those who played the field did so with the idea that the "good things" might possibly crawl—or fall down. Not a person in the hotel outside of Vaughn and "his boys" knew anything about Lightning. Not a few sneered at the very name, and one fat bookmaker remarked that he thought that particular Lightning would about strike the three-quarter pole while Greenville was passing under the wire in a bleedin' walk. Another follower of the races declared that the owner of the horse should be fined for naming such a skate as this must be after the great gray son of Lexington and Blue Bonnet. Thousands of dollars were bet at about the odds quoted above, when Hurt annonnced that "his fellow-Democrats would rejourn till to-morrah aftahnoon at one o'clock."

The first two races were captured by the favorites, and then the dense crowd surged around the betting stands to plunge on the "race of the meeting." Never had there been a larger turnout at Nashville than on this fair day. The grand stands were packed to overflowing, while the enclosure was lined with the costliest equipages of the Nashville Four Hundred.

Presently the blackboard was run up with the names of the entries, weights and jockeys in the great event, third on the day's card. Ike Durphy, the famous colored jockey, had the mount on Greenville, Gallison sported silk on Augusta, while Oventon and Pike had weighed in as pilots on Emaline and Torment.

"P. Brown on Lightning." "Who is P. Brown and who is this Lightning?" said the blackboard-scanners. No one appeared to know anything of either jockey or horse.

"Come up! come up! I'll lay against any of 'em!" yelled the pencilers, hoarsely. "Two to one Greenville, three to one Aurora, a hundred to one the outsider—this Lightning feller! Who wants my money?"

Five minutes before the horses went up to the starting point a tall form might have been seen edging toward Bookmaker Number One. He planked down a fifty-dollar bill rather sheepishly, and when the card was returned to him it read: $5,000 to $50 Lightning." Wherever the young man could find 100 to 1 against this horse, down went $50. This was all he would bet with any bookmaker, for if he had laid any more the chances are there would have been a shortening of the odds at once. At length he reached into his pockets and found that he had bet all the money he had—$500—and hurried to the saddling paddock just as the last bell rang.

There was Durphy on the favorite, looking as happy as a lark and as confident of success as Carmencita before a New York audience. Gallison looked as grim and determined as any Roman gladiator ever did in the days of old, Oventon and Pike winked at their friends as if they were entirely satisfied with the outlook, while in the background sat Pomp on the big unknown colt, his black features showing a strange mixture of pride and worriment. He knew what defeat meant to his employer, and this was his first important mount, As far as that went, he had never sported silk in public but three times in his life before, and then on two-year-olds and old Danville.

"Pomp," said Vaughn, "if you win this race it means happiness forever for me and a thousand dollars to you. Lie away back in the bunch for a mile and a half, and then let him go. Do your best, and good luck be with you and Lightning this day!" So saying, Vaughn crossed the track and got as near the gate and fence as he could.

Out on the track went the little mare, Aurora, tossing her pretty head from side to side and displaying her ribboned mane with all the pride that a handsome female possesses when she knows she is beautiful and attracting attention. She seemed to enjoy immensely the applause which greeted her. Then came the favorite, Greenville, and the shouts that greeted him fairly shook the grand stand and echoed through the hills that abound in the proud capital of Tennessee. The appearance of the others was acknowledged with hearty shouts of admirers, and the unknown Lightning looked so powerful and racy that not a few ladies clapped their hands for him. One girl especially in the grand stand applauded the colt, but as the field neared the three-quarter pole, where the start was to be made, her face assumed an anxious, sad expression, and anyone watching her must have been impressed at once with the serious countanance of the pretty young lady.

After two or three breakaways the flag cleft the air in a downward sweep, and a hoarse roar denoted that the horses were off on their long journey. The cloud of dust moved swiftly toward the wire, and soon the colors of the jockeys were in plain view and the contestants clearly identified. Augusta's blaze face showed in front, at her throat-latch was Torment, while third, in the center of the track, half a length back, was the favorite, running with easy strides that greatly encouraged his backers. In a solid bunch, two lengths back, was a compact quintette, Lightning next to last. Augusta let out a link in the next quarter, and two lengths of daylight at this point lengthened into three as the field swept by the half-pole, Torment and Greenville being next, heads apart, in the order named, the rest still bunched. "First three-quarters in 1:17—too fast for a long race," said a keen-looking man standing near Vaughn. At the mile Augusta was four lengths from her nearest competitor, Greenville, who had passed Torment and was now quickening his stride. Tom Johnson now commenced to move up, and at the mile and a quarter he was at Greenville's saddle-girth and coming fast. "See him come!" shouted the Louisville contingent, and indeed he was coming fast. Augusta's lead was now less than three lengths, and still Johnson was creeping up. Less than a length behind him, however, was the favorite, who had not as yet extended himself, then Torment, four lengths away, Emaline and the rank outsider, Lightning, three parts of a length behind her. Few had any eyes for the 100 to 1 shot, but nevertheless he was in the hunt.

Now a mile and a half has been traversed, and the time has come for Lightning's move, if he is ever to make it. Augusta is falling back at every stride, and the favorite and Tom Johnson are having it hammer-and-tongs. First one and then the other shows in front. They reach the little mare, who falls back, and something big from the middle of the bunch comes out with giant strides, passes Torment, then Emaline, and is surely closing up on the prides of Louisiana and Kentucky, fighting there in front. Thousands of eyes are now taken from the leaders and rest upon the despised unknown. The head of the stretch is reached, and fiercer rages the battle. Durphy takes a quick glance at the rear column, sees the giant three-year-old moving up at a rate that fairly maddens him, and sits down to ride as he never did before. A cut of the cruel whip and a dig of the spurs, and Greenville leaves Tom Johnson at every bound. Something is closing on him, though, and Durphy feels certain that it is not Johnson coming again. He dares not look behind. Now the rival is at Greenville's flanks, now at his throat-latch, and the famous jockey can feel the hot breath of the challenger. Durphy feels that Greenville is beaten, for already they are but little over an eighth from home, and still the demon gains. He will make one last attempt—a bold stroke that may not be yet win the day. At the drawgate, striking with both whip and spur, Greenville darts ahead a trifle under the maddening punishment, and quick as a flash Durphy pulls his horse's head to the right, jostling his pursuer and throwing him off his stride. The demon behind is soon himself again and coming like a whirlwind, gaining at every stride. But the wire is reached, and Greenville is first by a neck, Lightning second, while four lengths away comes Emaline, then Johnson, then a straggling field, tired and fagged out.

Coming back to the wire, Pomp dismounts quickly and rushes up the stairs of the judges' stand. Thousands of ears are strained to hear what he is saying. The judges consult a moment, and then the presiding officer announces in a clear voice:

With a joyful shout a young man near the gate throws his hat far out into the track, runs rapidly up into the ladies' section of the grand stand and clasps a marble-pale but happy maiden to his heart, the band struck up a joyful air, and the crowd slowly depart for the City of Rocks.

The following morning there appeared in the papers details of a sensational elopement and marriage of a young lady moving in the highest social circles of Lexington, Ky., to the owner of the phenomenal race horse, Lightning. At first the proud father of the young lady swore that he would have Vaughn's life-blood, but thought better of the matter in less than a month, and gave the young couple his blessing. The $50,000-odd won on the race, minus the $1,000 that went to gladden the heart of the good jockey, Pomp, was placed in the bank in the name of the fair young bride, for whom the future presents a vista lit to an effulgent radiance, by reason of the smilings of a present love and hopes roseate for the future.

Battell's Discoveries.

The indefatigable pedigree hunter, Mr. James Battell, was in Boston last week, on a trip in search of matter for his forthcoming Morgan book, says the Horse Breeder. This work, by the way, while giving a complete history of the Morgans, will contain many interesting facts pertaining to pedigrees of animals outside the Morgan family. Speaking of the pedigree of Sunol's dam, which was lately investigated by the Board of Censors, Mr. Battell remarked that the pedigree as it now stands contains a glaring error on the dam's side, inasmuch as Rich's Hambletonian, grandsire of General Benton,is not a descendant either of Abdallah or Trustee. The pedigree given Rich's Hambletonian by Mr. Wallace it entirely fictitious.

One of the many interesting facts which Mr. Battell has unearthed is the breeding of the dam of the famous long-distance trotter, John Stewart, which trotted 20½ miles in 59 minutes, 31½ seconds, in an effort to make 21 miles in an hour. John Stewart was by Tom Wonder, and his dam has been given as by Harris' Hambletonian. Mr. Battell has traced her breeding. and finds that she was by Sherman Black Hawk, second dam by Vermont Black Hawk. Mr. Battell has also learned from Mr. Blinn that Kate, the second dam of the famous stallion Nelson (2:10), is a daughter of Vermont Black Hawk, as discovered by Mr. Levi S. Gould, and also that her dam was by Cock of the Rock, a thoroughbred son of Duroc, by imported Diomed; second dam by Sir Walter, a thoroughbred son of Hickory. This Sir Walter got North American, also known as the Bullock horse, whose cross is found in Rhode Island, sire of Gov. Sprague (2:20½), and also in Strathmore, one of the most successful sons of Rysdyk's Hambletonian of his age, and in the great broodmare Fannie Jack-Jackson.

One interesting fact which Mr. Battell learned concerning the dam and grandam of Kate is that one (if not both) of them was so highstrung that, like Green Mountain Maid, she was never broken to harness.

Mr. Battell has learned that Baker's Highlander which figures in the pedigree of Dolly Spanker, dam of George Wilkes, was owned in Boston about 1826, and thinks that some of the old-time horse lovers in this vicinity must remember him. The horse was then called Billy Morgan. If this should meet the eye of parties who remember this horse they will confer a great favor by communicating with us.

Mr. B. is strongly opposed to tin cup or time records. He would have no time records, except for such as have first obtained records of 2:30 or better in genuine contests with other horses. The match races as at present conducted are nearly, if not quite, as obnoxious. When the summary shows that a horse loses a heat in 2:35 and wins the next in 2:25, it shows that the match was a farce. Mr. B. believes with many others that whenever any horse is to trot for a record the event should be advertised a day or two in advance, and that at least three competent timing judges should be in the stand. The more good outside watches held on the horse by competent timers the better. Mr. Battell is doing a great work for breeders, and his book, when published, must be a valuable one for reference.

During the year 1891 the number of races run in the United States and Canada were 6861, against 6,208 for the preceding year, an increase of 653.

Humboldt Horse News.

[Correspondence of the Breeder and Sportsman.]

There are few counties isolated as Humboldt is that can lay claim to more zeal in the evolution of the trotter and to the improvement of stock generally. Fine Percherons draw the plow, swift roadsters frequent the more level highways, good broodmares are eagerly sought, and the sire must possess speed, pedigree, conformation, and must be a producer to satisfy the fastidious Humboldtiers. An additional impulse will be given to raising horses for the turf, as Rohnerville, Eureka and Ferndale will each have two meetings this year. Heretofore trainers have only had the fair races to look forward to.

Last year Ferndale formed an association and laid off an excellent half-mile track. Eureka made material improvement on theirs, and there is not the least doubt but Arcata will have a track before fall.

Eureka has already published stakes for three-year-olds, two-year-olds and yearlings to come off this fall. The Ninth District Agricultural Society will profit by their successful colt races of last year, and as Lake and Mendocino counties are admitted, what's the matter with a northwestern circuit. There is plenty of dormant material that awaits skillful trainers, and a little liberality on the part of owners in the way of giving their colts an opportunity to develop speed.

The pedigrees of many of our broodmares, in common with many great mares, can not be cleared up very far back, but that there are quite a few good mares in this county is well known to horsemen. These have been bred to good horses, and the best again to such sires as Grand Moor, Poscora Hayward, Ira, Antevolo, etc.; the best of these crosses to Waldstein, Wayland W., Dudley, Mustapha and other good horses. Native Son, 2:51½, is an example of a yearling from a Moor and Waldstein cross. Hogoboom has been working a Waldstein colt this week, dam by Poscora Hayward, that goes like a bullet.

Nellie Q., out of a John Bull mare, by Poscora (owned by Crippan & Davis), dropped a Wayland W. colt on the 23d. Nellie Q. has a record of 2:40½, lapped Steinway out in 2:39½, and has never had any training to speak of. Lady Macbeth, 2:26½, foaled a Poscora Hayward youngster on the 26th. A two-year-old this year by the same sire and dam could have been sold for $1,000.

The chances for a sire being a performer here is not so good, by any means, as in many places, but the pedigrees of Mustapha, Waldstein and Wayland W. are well-known and can be found in former issues of the Breeder. But perhaps that of Dudley's owned by B. H. McNeil, who has some of the most promising colts in the county, is not so well-known. Here it is. Will it bear inspection? Sire, Anteros, by Electioneer, first dam, Miss Trehern, by Nephew; second dam, Miss Dudley, by Gen. McClellan; third dam, Belle Mahone, by Norfolk; fourth dam, Maid of Oaks, by Jack Hawkins; fifth dam, by imported Glencoe.

The pedigrees of these horses are unexceptional. Of their performances, this year will tell much. In a few years there will be a strong infusion of the blood of the, Black Tornado, Electioneer, Piedmont, Guy Wilkes, The Moor, Woodnut and Steinway in this country.

Iora, the gamy Ira colt that won all the yearling races last year, could have gone in three minutes had it been necessary, and a score of others that space forbids to mention show that Humboldt breeders have been fortunate in their access to sires, and great hopes are entertained that more colts will be trained. There is every indication that such will be the case. Many farmers are ambitious of raising the best colt themselves—a laudable ambition and a fact that will materially aid in the development of stock.

The offers of H. S. Hogoboom and B. H. McNeil, the former of $200 for a colt sired by his horses that will beat 2:51½, Native Son's time, and the latter $200 for the Dudley colt that will win the yearling stake, is another important auxiliary to the encouragement of training.

Mr. Editor, we hope to be able to chronicle some remarkable race events this year, and shall keep you posted in all the turf events and the progress of the breeding interests of this county. Secretary.

The Trotting Market.

The Horseman in the following concise article expresses the opinion of the most observant of our horse-owners and breeders:

"A question that we often hear asked in these days in connection with the great winter sales of trotters is: "Will the bottom drop out?" There are not lacking those who are inclined to answer in the affirmative, believing that a break in prices will necessarily result from the throwing of so many horses on the market as will pass through the great sale marts between now and the spring. Our answer to the question is yes and no. That there has been a drop in prices for all but choice offerings there can be no doubt, and there will probably be a still further decline; but that the market for the cream of trotting stock is still strong and safe is demonstrated every time good and ultra-fashionable stuff is brought into the sale-ring.

It must not be forgotten that the last five or six years have been booming years in the trotting-horse business and prices have steadily and rapidly advanced, occasionally soaring so high as to resemble dangerous inflation. Indeed, at times the market took on wild-cat symptoms, and horses having neither first-class breeding, first-class individuality nor any marked turf capacity have sold for prices that only animals of first-class credentials in every respect should have brought. Naturally in the course of time the falsity of these prices become apparent, and the animals when resold brought nearer their true value. Then, again, it should be remembered that as we are advancing in breeding there is a corresponding advance in the public education on trotting blood and the essentials in animals designed for the stud, and hence the buyers are becoming more exacting in their requirements. They will pay far higher to-day than they would three years ago for what is first-class, but they judge by a higher standard than they did three years ago. The material that would have brought top prices three or five years ago will generally fall short of satisfying the judgement exercised by bidders to-day. Moreover, there are horses that will not bring $500 to-day that would probably have sold for $1,000 three or four years ago, for the simple reason that they were nearer the top of fashion then than now, and because blood and individuality are judged by higher standards now than then. Again, fashions shift. The public eye is ever watching for the rising star, and as soon as the rush sets in for a new and sensational strain of blood the market for the strains thus deposed from first choice in popular favor somewhat weakens. We can all remember when Volunteer blood was all the rage. Then Almont blood became the correct thing, and he in turn was eclipsed by George Wilkes. Almont and Volunteer blood is good, stout and prolific, but it does not rouse the spirit of hot competition in the sale-rings to-day, and even the blood of George Wilkes is beginning to feel the effect of the ascendancy of the Electioneer and other younger and rapidly-rising families.

But all this does not argue that the trotting market is unhealthy, but rather the reverse. The fact that that which brought the top prices in the past sells for moderate figures now does not necessarily signify a weakening of the market. The same and better prices are yet ready to be paid for the best material of to-day as were ever paid for the best material in the past, but we are progressing, and the best material of to-day is better than what was esteemed the best material of a few years ago. So we are brought back to the conclusion before advanced in these columns, that the market for the choicest blood is stronger and safer than ever before, while there has been and will be a decline in the monetary value of mediocre and ordinary trotting material.

But this is by no means a misfortune, because, to put the patent fact in other terms, $500 will buy better blood, or more good blood, than it would five years ago. Good blood is becoming commoner, and hence the horse stock of the country is being improved. In answer to the question recently as to whether there was not danger of an over-production of standard trotting blood, some one aptly remarked: "Not as long as there is a scrub mare or stallion in the country." Certainly the increasing, the spreading and as a natural result the cheapening of good trotting blood cannot but work benefit to the general horse stock, and to the farmers and small breeders of the nation.

The observing breeder will not misunderstand the mandate of the market. It is to keep close up to demonstrated merit, to delve into the blood that fashion demands, and to have individual capacity and elegance with it. Remember that every generation you are removed from blood that is fashionable, that has produced, and that has trotted, the value of what you have is lessened. The grandson of great parents no longer commands attention unless he prove himself worthy of his grandparents, and the same is true, though perhaps in less degree, of sons of great parents. The advanced public intelligence demands animals of rich, fashionable, producing blood that are themselves trotters, and only such will bring fancy prices.

Weights in Brooklyn and Suburban Handicaps.

Following are the weights announced last Sunday night in the two great handicaps at the far East, the distance in each being one and one-quarter miles:

Longstreet	128	Cassius	108
Tenny	127	Teuton	108
Kingston, aged	125	Reclare	108
Raceland, aged	120	San Juan	108
Eon	120	Castaway II	108
Loantaka	118	Madstone	108
Judge Morrow	116	Yosemite	106
Bermuda	116	Reporter	106
Pessara	115	Ja Ja	106
Clarendon	114	Newal	105
Strathmeath	114	Una Grande	105
Picknicker	114	Bolero	105
Terrifier	114	Lamplighter	105
Russell	114	Peter	105
Rey del Rey	114	Kimberly	100
Ban Chief	114	Owen Roberts	100
Portchester	112	Allan Bane	100
Montana	112	India Rubber	100
Reckon	112	George Beansey	100
Ambulance	112	Fairview	100
L'Intriguante	112	Vortex	100
Major Domo	112	Celia	98
Banquet	110	Kingmaker	97
Sir John	110	Seampost	90
His Highness	110	Alturus	90
Longford	108

The horses W. G. Morris and Kingman were handicapped, but being in the forfeit list their weights are withheld pending the action of the Board of Control.

THE SUBURBAN.

Longstreet	132	Madstone	111
Tenny	129	Yosemite	110
Kingston	129	Clarendon	110
Eon	124	Ban Chief	110
Raceland	123	Ambulance	110
La Tosca	120	Cassius	110
Tristan	120	Sir John	108
Judge Morrow	120	Chaos	106
Loantaka	120	Bolero	105
Demuth	118	Vortex	105
Bermuda	118	Una Grande	104
Strathmeath	118	Sallie McClelland	103
Poet Scout	118	Parn	103
Pessara	116	English Lady	103

Picknicker	115	Allan Bane	102
Reckon	115	Curt Gunn	102
L'Intriguante	115	Sleipner	100
Major Domo	115	Trinity	100
Montana	115	Lamplighter	100
Portchester	113	Nomad	100
Reclare	113	Reporter	100
Terrifier	113	May Win	100
San Juan	113	Longevity	95
Longford	113	Actor	90
Fairy	113	Fidelo	90
Tournament	112	King Cadmus	90
His Highness	112	Fairview	90
Kingman	112	War Pale	90
Teuton	112	George W	90
Banquet	112	White Rose	90

In the Suburban, taking the showing made last season into consideration, it looks as if Ban Chief, His Highness, Judge Morrow, Reclare and Bolero were treated very kindly by the handicapper, while Eon should carry his weight easily enough, and we look for the Suburban winner to turn up in Ban Chief, Eon or His Highness. Longstreet is a great horse, but it looks as if he is asked to give too much weight away to the horses we have named.

In the Brooklyn handicap better work has been done by the gentleman who set the weight figures. However, His Highness, Ban Chief, Nomad, Teuton and English Lady might have been given a larger impost without doing an injustice. If these horses strike the Coney Island track in good shape on Suburban Day, there ought to be a warm struggle between the four, with La Tosca "thar or tharabouts." Time will tell what sort of tipsters we are.

Ogden as a Racing Town.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Ogden, Utah, is a truly beautiful little city, situated at the terminus of the Central and Union Pacific railroad system. It ought to be quite a racing center, for it is so convenient for owners of race horses both going to and coming from the Eastern campaign. Ogden has its troubles, however, as many other cities have, on account of not having the proper men at the helm. But this I will say for Ogden—she has started in on very good principles in the face of opposition from an older organization at Salt Lake. Every year Ogden shows her older sister how to conduct herself in the proper manner, and shows the public that it is possible to have racing there carried on far above the average, and better than it is reputed to be.

There are two racing associations at Ogden. One has a half-mile track, the other a mile track. I had the pleasure of racing some of my horses over the mile track, and considered it a very fast and safe course, and well-conducted was the meeting, considering it was the first effort of the organization. I only hope they will continue the good work they have begun, and believe that their efforts will be eventually rewarded with the patronage of the horsemen of California and other sections of the country where the royal sport is conducted.

On my last visit to Ogden I ventured to suggest to one of the most enterprising and enthusiastic horsemen between San Francisco and Chicago (Mr. Will Helfrich, cashier of the Citizens' Bank at Ogden) that it would be of great benefit to the city if the associations amalgamated and formed a jockey club, giving two meetings every year—one in the spring, when the horses are going East, and another in the fall, when the horses are returning. Mr. Helfrich conceded that it could be done, and done easily—that is, if the associattons would take the matter under advisement, act harmoniously, and not pull against the other. I would also suggest to the members of the Ogden associations that they build a mile track where the half-mile track is, for it would be advantageous to the city and racing organizations as well as to the horsemen, for racing men always try to keep as clear as they possibly can of railroad crossings.

As long as I am about it, I may as well bring in a little incident that came under my notice at the spring meeting of the mile track association. It was so stupidly done that I cannot refrain from mentioning it, so as to give the public a little idea of how easy a damper can be thrown on a good, honest man and an honest horse, also on the meeting at which the fraud (so-called) might be perpetrated. The incident of which I speak occurred in this way: It was in a trotting race (I'm glad of that, for I'm a racing man from away back). The race was mile heats, three in five, free for all trotters, and I believe there were four or five entries, including Brignolia and Contractor. Brignolia won four heats according to the rules of trotting, but owing to the rascality (or stupidity) of one of the judges in the stand, one of the heats was taken from Brignolia, an honest trotter owned by Mr. John Garrity, as honest a man as ever held a line over a horse, and the heat given to Contractor, which, on the face of it, looked very bad, as a rumor went around that one of the judges was betting on Contractor. It was not Judge Swan, though, for he is too honorable a man for anything so low. I have a poor memory when it comes to names; only for that I would be pleased to give to the public the names of the other two judges. But to make a long story short, Mr. Garrity got very angry and refused to bring his horse on the track to contest for the remaining heats, as he did not know how many heats he would have to win in order to get the race. What do you think of the audacity of the offensive judge? He really had the presumption to send a marshal to take this honest man's horse away from him, stating that he was the property of the association while on the grounds of that august body. The honest man received that marshal loyally, and as a gentleman, and said: "Mr. Marshal, I am sorry that you are in the hands and the tool of a designing judge or judges. This horse is my property, and the man don't live that can take him from me—except by walking over my dead body. Go, Mr. Marshal, and tell the judges I said so. I am willing to take the consequences of their decision." So the poor, honest man got the worst of it. He lost his money and was beaten out of the race. What disposition was made of him I don't know. The Marshal did not take the horse.

Associations, be careful who you select to judge your races and start your fields of horses on their journey to defeat or victory.

MATT STORN.

Chicago Racing Association.

Truly Chicago is a great city, and the spirit of enterprise pervades everything. In the front rank of liberal racing organizations is the Chicago Racing Association, at the head of which is the noted Edward Corrigan, with the genial Secretary, Harry Kuhl, as a most admirable right bower. This association will have a meeting in 1892, commencing June 4th and ending June 23d, and owners of thoroughbreds should bear in mind that entries to the various rich stakes (minimum value $1,500) close on the first of March. The Hawthorne Stakes for two-year-olds, has $1,500 added; the Emulation Handicap, for two-year-olds, $1,500 added; the C. B. & Q. Stakes the same amount; Lassie Stakes, for two-year-old fillies, the same; the Chicago Horseman Stakes, for two-year-olds, $2,000 added; Speculation Handicap, for three-year-olds, $1,500; Competition Stakes, for three-year-old fillies, $1,500 added; Chicago Stakes for three-year-olds, $1,500 added; Spirit of the Times Stake, for horses of any age, $2,750 added; Ullman Handicap, for three-year-olds and upwards, $2,500 added; Exposition Stakes, for three-year-olds and upwards, $1,500 added; Selling Stakes, all ages, $1,500 added; Illinois Central Stakes, selling, three-year-olds and upwards, $1,500 added; Stock Yards Steeplechase, all ages, $1,500 added. A sensible feature we noted about the conditions is the two-payment system, $10 to accompany entries in the stake with $1,500 added, with $40 additional to start. In the larger stakes $15 accompanies the entry, with $50 and $60 additional to start. In all races geldings will be allowed three pounds. The stakes are all a long distance above the average in point of richness, and the conditions in them cannot but suit our turfmen. For further particulars, see the Chicago Racing Association's advertisement in another column of this paper.

Dead Horses.

The following, handed us by Mr. Robertson of the Pacific Coast Live Stock Owners' Mutual Protective Association at 112 Montgomery street, speaks volumes for itself of the solidity of this association and the wisdom of insuring risks in live stock.

MONTEREY, Cal., Feb. 2, 1892.

D. T. ROBERTSON, ESQ., General Agent, S. F., Cal.—DEAR SIR:—Inclosed herewith please find check for $375, payable to G. W. Emmons, San Francisco, for loss of his bay mare Kit, aged 7, and black mare Doll, aged 8, proof of death made January 5, 1892.

We note with pleasure the steady increase of business in your section and trust it may continue. Below you will find a list of claims paid during the present week:

Marcuse Bros, Marysville	$ 93.75
H. H. Strang, Pleasanton	225.00
M. Koopman	150.00
Jacob Johns, Livermore	66.66
E. H. Barry, Gonzales	33.33
S. B. Phares, Gonzales	33.33
G. W. Emmons, San Francisco	137.50
G. W. Emmons, San Francisco	187.50
Total	$977.07

Yours very truly,
[Signed] C. R. FEW, Secretary.

SCRUBS abound on every side, slab-sided, barrel-headed brutes, a mongrel animal, neither one thing nor the other, and they are there to stay. So long as farmers size a dollar as big as a grindstone, and patronize the eight or ten-dollar stallion, they deserve to have barnyards filled with unsalable brutes. Let them pay a decent fee for the service of a well-bred sire, and when they have a well-bred, sound young horse for sale, they won't require to drive every few days into a neighboring town, anxiously looking out for a buyer to come along. When they raise the right kind, the buyers will be perfectly willing to do all the hunting. The man who is satisfied to keep on walking in the old beaten path deserves bad luck in his horse-raising, and lots of it.

State Board of Agriculture's Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the directors of the State Board of Agriculture was to have been held Monday afternoon, but there was not a quorum present, owing to the illness of some of the members. The Executive Committee met, however, and in the report of the president and secretary the following article on the horse and on diseases among live stock was embodied:

THE HORSE.

At divers times much stress is laid by objectors in general to the attention we, as a society, give to the horse. Let us see if he is entitled to it. Let us think of his value to the human family. Let us look at him in a commercial sense and we will find him one of the component parts of husbandry and one that stands paramount to all others as a help, as a necessity and as a luxury to man. With the non-appreciative, after having been used as a drudge and worn out, he has been left to die by the wayside, while with the cunning Arab he has shared his master's tent, and in this day and generation he is treated with human consideration by those who know and appreciate his value.

As to his commercial value we have but to look at the assessment rolls, which fully present the increase of value this noble animal has made during the past ten years. By the roll of 1880 the total value of horses in California was $9,655,553. In 1891 their value by the same measure was $17,129,193.

Divided into classes the increase in value in thoroughbreds was nearly $600,000; in graded classes something more than that figure; in the common classes nearly $1,500,000; in colt classes nearly $1,250,000; in the "American" class, which embraces the American trotter (and which should be designated on our assessment rolls as "standard-bred"), the increase is nearly $3,000,000.

As a necessity, as a luxury, as a resource for the small breeder and as a profit the American trotter has come to stay, and California promises to be his home, where he will receive all visitors, and where the breeder of the future will locate for his own protection. Up to ten years ago $12,000 was a most phenomenal price for a trotting-bred animal. To-day we count by the dozen California-bred horses that have been sold for, or sums refused, double that figure.

As an introduction for the year 1892, a California-bred three-year-old sold for the highest figure ($125,000) ever paid for an animal of any age, size or breed in these United States, and that individual held in 1891 the world's record (2:10¾) for a two-year-old.

The purchaser of this animal came from east of the Rocky Mountains, from and across State after State that have had years, we might say ages, to accomplish what we have in this short time.

Who of California is not proud of her achievements, and haven't we, as an association, cause and justification in devoting attention to this great animal—the horse—which enables California to make the showing she has?

To the great States of the East went Arion, as did old Sultan, Alcazar, Mascot, Anteeo, Antevolo Bell Boy, St. Bel, Ansel and Woodnut at an average price of nearly $40,000 each, and of which to-day scarcely one could be repurchased for less than $50,000. What other State in aggregation of those formi g our Union can boast of having produced within its confines and sold such an array of stallions as are above presented? and further, we would say no State could part with such a princely lot without risk of disaster to its breeding interests. But to those of our Eastern brethren who think the cream is gone, and that our young produce have not the backing necessary, we point with pride to the stars yet with us, in whose veins the blood of mighty sires gone before still trickles. We have our Palo Alto, Stamboul, Guy Wilkes, Sable Wilkes, Director, Direct, Sidney, Eros, McKinney, Silas Skinner, Hawthorne, Amigo, Guide, Albert W., Advertiser, and many others, certainly the equals of those that have have gone from us for the benefit of the Eastern breeder.

In horse literature we have noticed at times a desire to speak lightly of our matrons, but it is a well-conceded fact among breeders that the dam of a great horse must have a merit, as he equally shows her blood with that of the sire, and if softness is on the dam's side, 'tis likely to be apparent in the produce, and from the showing made our State is as replete with great broodmares as she is with sires.

To California has fallen a lot of some moment in the breeding line, viz.: That one stock farm should produce and hold the record for a short space of time for the fastest one, two, three, four and five-year-olds, as well as the stallion trotting record of the world, and that subsequently another farm in the same State should wrest the laurel of the yearling record from the garlands of the first, and when the scythe-bearer of 1891 stepped off into oblivion California held the trotting and pacing records of the world.

Will any one deny the advantages of soil and climate in this showing? Can any one deny the liberal views, ideas and early encouragement of this great business was an unimportant factor in this result?

The continual accomplishment of our young produce in achieving records hovering around the 2:20 list is causing the breeders of the East some uneasiness, and they are put to their u most to keep abreast of us. Our advantages cause this. What single State, other than this, can boast of as many good race tracks to develop their young upon? What single State, other than this, can boast of daily jogging in open air the year through? But we must concede that thus far those of Eastern and Middle States are providing values for our stock in the way of purses and stakes to be contested for. This is no fault of our people or our State that they excel us in this respect; population and railway facilities alone are accountable for this showing. But in the encouragement of breeding in its earlier career, no State excelled California in premium money at exhibitions for its many classes of horses here bred.

The sales of our stock by auction in the East have shown greater averages than any other State, and as long as we have the corps of stallions and the stock of matrons we are now possessed of, we shall hold up the already achieved glory and fame of California horses, both in the hard-fought contests of the grand circuit of the East and as record-breakers over our own ground.

It has been the policy of the State Agricultural Society to watch over and encourage all her stock-breeding interests with equal vigilance. While some may think more attention is given the thoroughbred or trotter than is given the solid draft horse, or the useful roadster, or the broad-faced, honest cattle, or the rich Merino sheep, they will find, if trouble is taken to make a comparative estimate, that the trotter is the most abused animal that comes to make up our great annual agricultural exhibition, and he forms a considerable portion of interest in our exhibition both in speed and show rings. Our thoroughbreds are occupying a place of equal distinction with the light-harness horse in the great contests of the East and West, and the showing of winners are proportionately better than in any other State.

Additional value is now given to the thoroughbred by reason of the great success of his blood as an outcross for the trotter. Experiments made by one of our leading breeders removes all doubt as to the result on this score. The breeding of trotting-bred mares to thoroughbred sires, and re-crossing the female offspring of such with a trotting sire, has resulted most successfully. It has always been admitted that all the speed originally came from the thoroughbred, but it has been left to a Californian to make the success of extreme trotting action from this blood.

CONTAGION AMONG LIVE STOCK.

Stringent and operative laws should be formulated by our legislative department of Government for the suppression and extermination of contagious diseases among our live stock. This industry, as is shown, is of such benefit to our favored State that all safeguards necessary should be thrown around it for protection from these invading and devastating diseases. It should be a felony for an owner to have in his possession an animal afflicted with glanders. It should be a misdemeanor, punishable by heavy fine, for a stable-man to permit the use of his premises by animals afflicted with highly contagious and incurable diseases.

We cannot but admire the acumen and rigidness with which foreign countries handle cases of contagion that is liable te introduction among their valuable herds by importation of stock. It is but recently that Australia, a country that is alive to all progressive ideas, and which has been a most prominent and persistent advocate and patron of many modern American inventions, showed to the world her ability to effectually stamp out a threatened invasion of disease, where a well-known American circus combination that had traveled throughout the United States concluded to transport its entire exhibition to the colonies for show purposes. Upon the ship reporting that conveyed them thither a quarantine examiner of animals was sent on board to pass upon all live stock before permission to land could be given, and it was found that a number of aggravated cases of glanders were among the valuable trick horses of the combination, and their destruction was directed by the Government. All persuasive methods known were used to have this order rescinded, their great value and necessity in the business connected was argued, as well as the utter necessity of disbandment and breaking up of the show if the order was fulfilled. These arguments was met with a decisive refusal on the part of the authorities to rescind, and the order was carried out effectively. But the people responded nobly to the owners' appeal, and notwithstanding the absence of that chief feature of a circus—the horse—they patronized them in numbers sufficient to remunerate any financial loss occasioned by the enforcement of the law. What a grand example for America.

We hope the Executive will recommend the passage of such laws necessary to thoroughly eradicate all diseases injurious to our live stock interests.

Palo Alto, Arion and Advertiser.

It has been settled once for all that the price paid by J. Malcolm Forbes for Arion was in round numbers $125,000. Mr. F., tired of being interviewed, disliking distortions of the truth and absurd exaggerations, has at last declared that the amount mentioned above was the sum paid Senator Stanford for the great colt. On the heels of this we learned from a gentleman very close to the California railroad magnate and breeder in matters pertaining to "man's best friend" that, now Mr. Forbes had unbosomed himself, he felt at liberty to state that while $125,000 in round numbers was all right, $125,005 was the exact sum Arion cost the Bostonian. This is the largest amount ever paid for a horse to date, anyhow.

The refusal last week of $75,000 cash for Advertiser, 2:16, shows how the Senator regards the splendid son of Electioneer and Lulu Wilkes. The horse's record is 2:16, but those who should know tell us that 2:10 could have been his mark had his managers desired to hurry the colt in his work. Be that as it may, as great an individual and as royally-bred in trotting lines as Advertiser is, it is our firm belief, based on what we have recently heard from a good source, that if the figures were raised a few thousands Advertiser's stall at Palo Alto would be vacant as soon as his owner could give the matter proper consideration and sign a receipt for the money.

But with Palo Alto, king of trotting stallions, purchase is another matter. His sire was the most successful the world has ever see in the line of producing speed at the trotting gait and his dam is in the Great Broodmare table and leading all thoroughbred mares to date and 99 out of 100 of the trotting-bred as a producer of trotters, and although Advertiser is much more "fashionably bred" and has a faster record at three years old than had Palo Alto, not a man in the world to-day has enough money to purchase this ten year-old son of Electioneer and Dame Winnie. His owner thought considerable of Arion, as the sequel plainly showed, holds Advertiser high in his esteem, but that regard sinks into nothingness when compared to the Senator's adoration of Palo Alto.

Who will wear Electioneer's crown as king of Palo trotting stud? A glance at the lately-issued catalogue of that famous breeding establishment tells the tale. The horse that was mated with the choicest matrons there—Palo Alto, 2:08¾. The prices realized for this horse's progeny at the late New York sale must have been more than encouraging to his owner, and it shows plainer than any words that buyers of trotters are not swayed by the arguments against thoroughbred blood in the trotter as much as such theorists would have us believe.

That Palo Alto can not command as large a service fee as Arion can at this moment is true, but only time can tell whether the wonderful colt will make a greater sire then Palo Alto, in whose ability Senator Stanford's faith has never wavered for one moment. The senior California Senator is nothing if not consistent in his breeding theories, and he now shows plainly to what an extent he intends carrying out his ideas by the sale of Arion and the retention of Palo Alto as premier stallion. Breeders who have ever conversed with the owner of the famed farm by the towering tree know how he adores King Palo Alto, and therefore have refrained from making a princely offer for the "game, old cripple" who lowered Father Time's colors with three good legs and a lion heart.

Popular Movements.

It is with great pleasure that we observe the good sense displayed by the directors of the P. C. T. H. B. Association on several propositions at their last meeting. The first good move that we will mention is the one advocated by this paper on more than one occasion—the payment of a small sum to enter horses in stakes and the balance ten days before the horse starts. This cannot but be popular with the vast majority of horse-owners. There lives not on earth to-day the person who delights in making two or three payments, amounting to anything from $20 to $75, on a stake entry, and then have his horse go amiss and see the amount go glimmering. Now we can look for a larger number of entries in the stakes and a consequently greater quota of starters in the various events. This will spur horsemen on handsomely, and with good fields contending will come great crowds to see the racing, provided—the first-class attractions are properly divided up and by sensible, liberal advertising interest is not allowed to flag. "Boom" your meetings and "boom" yourselves at the same time by keeping your names and that of your horses before the public. Publish the additions to the various stakes every two or three weeks, together with the names of the owners of the trotters and pacers.

While the cat is away the mice should play right merrily; in other words, while the famous horses of California are absent, in the East, the smaller breeders and owners that have heretofore remained timidly in the corner should emerge from their secluded nooks and gather in the plums that are offered them this season. Among the new species of plums we wish particularly to call attention to are the Stallion Produce Stakes for two and three-year-olds, the get of stallions named on March 1, 1892, to be trotted at the fall meeting of the association, entrance fee to be the price of one service in 1892, or last season made; dead stallions at price of last season made; private stallions that have not been bred for pay, if with record of 2:30 or better, $100; others, $50; lowest entrance, $25. Nothing could have been devised that will encourage owners more than such a stake—where the breeder generally enters the stallion and the horse's get can be started at little or no cost. We may say with perfect safety that these stakes are bound to become popular. Then there are the Encouragement Purses for colts without records, with Palo Alto, San Mateo and Valensin Stock Farms barred. Then owners of trotters should not lose sight of the Free-for-All Stallion Purse, $2,000; 2:15 class stallion purse, $1,500; 2:25 class stallion purse, $1,000; 3:00 class stallion purse, $1,000, while gentlemen owning 2:25 pacing stallions are provided with an event worth $1,000. Other stakes are worthy of attention also, as will be seen by perusing the association's advertisement in another column.

If it is concluded to have paid presiding and starting judges, and proper care is taken in the selection of men with firmness, complete knowledge of the rules, and who will not allow their admiration for any man, horse or association to sway them in presiding over the destinies of the owners and drivers, we will hail that movement with delight and give credit where it is due in no unmistakable terms. And if betting on the result of heats is abolished on our race-courses we will herald that fact to the world with great pleasure. With the present lack of confidence in the betting public on this particular kind of speculation, that the receipts from the Paris mutuel box would be augmented if bets hinged on the result of the race alone we have not the shadow of a doubt.

The P. C. T. H. B. Association offer no purses with cables to them, and owners of trotters and pacers can count on getting every dollar they win. The conditions are so simplified that a ten-year-old boy can understand them, and the chances are that every stake will be well-filled. And now it remains but to advertise liberally and keep up the good work that has just begun, and when the season closes we hope and believe that we will have seen closer contests, better fields and larger audiences at our tracks and a more satisfactory state of affairs all around than ever before.

LACK of space forbids us from publishing in full the report of the State Agricultural Society. The success which has attended this society's efforts ever since its first meeting seems to hover over its annual gatherings. The two excerpts from this year's report which are published in another column are worthy of a careful perusal. The advice regarding the prevention of the spread of contagious diseases among live stock should be heeded by our statesmen, and at the next session of the Legislator, laws should be passed to carry out the ideas expressed therein. A board of qualified veterinarians should be appointed to prepare laws and see that they are fulfilled. Strong protective measures should be adopted in the interests of breeding as well as that of horticulture in this State. The farmers and breeders should combine to see that they are given the protection that they are justly entitled to.

IT IS currently rumored that Joseph Cairn Simpson, the veteran turfman, will be one of the judges presiding over the destinies of Garfield Park (Chicago) during the coming racing season. The selection will be appreciated by Californians, who know this gentleman's worth and fitness for the responsible position. Thoroughly acquainted with the gentlemen conducting this splendid place, and having for that matter hosts of friends in all sections of this great country, a selection more advantageous to them on this account could not have been made. Mr. Simpson's thirty years' connection with turf matters have been marked by the plumb-line of perfect squareness at all times, and no man in America possesses to a greater degree the confidence and esteem of racegoers or has a better technical knowledge of the duties of judge than he. We congratulate the club on its selection, and, if Mr. Simpson takes the position, he will be ever firm and fair, courteous and conscientious.

Miss Woodford, ex-queen of the American turf, foaled a bay filly by Salvator, ex-king of the turf, on the 27th of January. There will be great interest manifested all over the country in this royal miss's future.

IT WAS the first copy of Volume X—not Volume XI as incorrectly reported in another column—that Mrs. F. H. Burke brought to this city Wednesday.

Printers' Ink and Patronage.

The success that has been achieved by the leading merchants of the world in almost every point of view might well be followed by owners of stallions and small stock farms. The proprietors of large farms believe implicity in the value of printers' ink, and know that sooner or later they will profit thereby. The owner of a well-bred stallion that has achieved a local reputation as a sire, and is noted in his district for his individualiiy, wonders why it is that no one ever talks of his horse, outside of his little town or county. He never receives an application from the owner of a standard mare for the services of his stallion; consequently, he feels chagrined when this fact is told him by jealous rivals. His fine stallion has colts and fillies that may win the district races, and the summaries are printed in the sporting papers without any reference to the breeding of the sire, because reporters are not supposed to ask the owner all about his horse, and care less for a man who thinks the trotting horse critics should stand still while he parades his horse in front of them and tells of his great virtues. That man is forty years behind the age. He has not studied his interests as the years have rolled on, and no one marvels at his lack of prosperity. If his stallion succeeds, it is not to his credit as an owner.

Some people, who are almost as far behind the age as the one spoken of, claim that they cannot afford to advertise. Times are hard and there are so many other stallion advertisements appearing in the leading turf journals that their's would never be noticed. Such a declaration from any man blessed with his senses is hard to believe.

Every liberal-minded horseman likes to read of every well-bred horse, and he does not look at the town and county journals or walk around the livery stables and dead walls of the town to read the stallion cards. He knows that to gain celebrity the owner must advertise his sire in a turf journal, and although his breeding may not be fashionable, yet some one may have a mare whose blood lines would blend well with the stallion that is advertised, and if the terms are reasonable, forthwith he books his mare. The price for that service pays the cost of the advertisement.

The horse becomes known wherever horses are raised just as soon as the description and pedigree appears. His patronage in the past among the farmers and small breeders in his neighborhood has paved the way for his now exalted position, and every man who bred a mare to that horse feels an increasing interest and a growing pride in the success of the animal and the enterprise of his owner. In a few years some of the progeny of this horse "comes to the front," immediately the trotting horse journals' corps of reporters and editors publish the breeding in full of the progenitor of such speedy youngsters, and his history is copied from California to Maine and from Canada to Mexico.

Some time, in years to come, there may be a dispute regarding the pedigree of a colt or filly, and a slip of paper containing the advertisement of the stallion that appears as the youngster's great grandsire is heard of and coveted by everyone who is aware of its value.

The experience of all the owners of our large stock farms is well known and the time is ripe for the owners of stallions and small stock farms to emulate the example shown them and profit thereby. Do not wait until the stallion season is over, but attend to this at once. No one who ever advertised in this journal has had reason to regret it, and as the circulation of this paper has increased during the past year, our advertisers will find that our gain is theirs also.

P. C. T. H. B. A. Fall Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association the resignation of Mr. Wilfred Page, as a director, was tendered aud accepted, and resolutions of thanks to this indefatigable worker were unanimously adopted. Mr. Page was one of the charter members of this thriving organization, and acted as its first secretary. In the arduous duties that fell to his lot he showed the same efficiency and thoroughness that has always characterized his efforts as a zealous and enthusiastic worker in the upbuilding of the association, and in the dissemination of all ideas which had a tendency toward sustaining the trotting horse industry of the State. It is hoped that we shall often see him officiating in the judges' stand and at the helm whenever a guiding hand is needed.

Mr. John F. Boyd, proprietor of the Oakwood Park Stock Farm (formerly called the Cook Stock Farm), was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy. Mr. Boyd is one of our most progressive breeders, and has the fine sires, Steinway, Charles Derby and Prince Red, at the head of his large stock farm, on which some of the choicest bred mares in the State are to be seen.

The Committee on Programme presented an original programme for the colt and stallion stakes that is at once simple and comprehensive. The Encouragement, Aspirant, Pacing and Stallion Purses are worthy of the consideration of all trotting horse owners, while the Stallion Produce Stakes for the fall meeting should also receive the necessary recognition which their merits deserve. The balance of the programme for aged horses and class races will be hereafter announced.

No better programme for the benefit of all breeders was ever presented, and with the bright prospects before them there is no reason why success should not again crown the efforts of this organization.

The attention of all owners and breeders is called to the date of the closing of entries for the fall meeting, March 1st, and the small amount that is necessary to be paid in at that time. It will be to their interest to attend to this at once, and when the races take place let us see that the horsemen of this Coast are not behind their Eastern brethren in having good races and large crowds of interested spectators.

The association will, in due time, arrange a programme for a summer meeting, and announce through the press what they will offer.

Last Week's New York Sales.

The telegraphic reports of the auction sales of California horses last week were hardly as complete as they ought to be. Through the kindness of one who was present and brought out a correct list of the prices received we are enabled to present the following interesting tables of total amounts obtained; average price of each youngster; average age of the lot and the average price for each year of the colts' life. It will be seen that Sidney's average exceeds that of all the rest except Electioneer. Eros comes next only $100 less in average. From a business point of view we know of no better way of figuring out the profits on the sale of young stock and determining which particular breeding is most in demand, taking the pedigrees of the animals also into consideration:

PLEASANTON, Cal., Feb. 3, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Will you give me a little space to say a few words about the sale of my colts in New York on Jan. 28th?

The Associated Press states that twenty-one of my colts brought $14,595, averaging $695, still it only gives a list of twenty. This is all that was sold; and the difference materially changes the average. One of the twenty did not belong to me, but was put in there to oblige a friend. Thus my nineteen yearlings from six to ten months old brought $14,080, averaging $741. I feel confident that had Mr. Kellogg properly advertised and worked the sale the returns would have been still more satisfactory. Nevertheless I consider the prices obtained very good, several of the colts being foaled late in the month of August and as many as four non-standard. In looking over the list of the Highlawn Farm sale I notice that twelve yearlings, the get of Alcantara, out of superbly bred mares, average $679. In Mr. Steele's sale six of the same age, by Epaulet, out of very good mares, brought $1255, an average of $209. It can be easily seen that the prices paid for my stock are ahead of the others. Senator Stanford's lot of 105 brought $119,735. Amongst that number was a brother to the great Sunol and to the king of all trotters Arion, deducting the amount they produced $39,500, it leaves $80,235, an average of $779. Nothing in the Stanford consignment was less than two-year-olds and upward, while mine were only yearlings; the difference in the cost of keeping mine is much more than the difference in price obtained, and leaves me a much larger profit. All these reasons considered, I feel that the public has welcomed my offerings cordially.

The great importance of selecting brood mares with care in these days of progressive breeding is so plainly demonstrated by the following fact that I cannot refrain from relating it to you. In my sale of 1889, when Sidney had not obtained the position he now holds as a sire, I sold a non-standard filly by him out of a mare by Eugene Casserly for upward of $1,100; last week a full sister to the same filly who was larger, faster and better in every way only brought $300. This should be material for thought to all breeders.

I will close my letter by answering in a few words "A Fair Question" asked by "Query" in your last week's issue concerning the winnings achieved by the get of Electioneer and Sidney compared with those of Director's and other great stallions. Does the amount of the purse obtained make the horse's feat any greater? Does a horse who wins a race in three heats better than 2:20 for $5,000 deserve more credit than one who wins in the same time a purse of $500? Was any of Direct's efforts against time, when paid, more worthy of applause than his mile in 2:07 and repeat in 2:06 at Stockton where no money was paid for exhibition? I think not.

Five years ago I had a little yearling called George V. who won some $1,300 or $1,400 in stakes and never went a mile better shan 2:57½. Did he prove himself a better yearling than Frou-Frou, who went seven miles from 2:31½ to 2:25¼ because she got no pay? The amount of winnings which stands opposite a horse's name at the end of a season demonstrates in a certain way his merits as a racehorse, but the locality where he raced has a great deal to do with his winnings. No horse campaigned in California can earn the sum he would get if equally successful in the East. The age of performers has also a great deal to do with their winnings, for until now colts have been very sparsely rewarded for their achievements. Should a person want to analyze the campaigning ability of different stallions' get the only way would be to count up the number of their starts and the number of heats won, averaging the time, then deduct the conclusion. The amount of money in itself alone is no criterion to go by.

Yours truly,
G. VALENSIN.

PLEASANTON, CAL., February 2, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The most valuable carload of horses ever shipped from California left here this morning in the Pleasanton Stock Farm's horse car, consisting of Director, 2:17; Direct, 2:06; James Madison, 2:17¾; Erector, bay stallion, four-year-old, by Director, 2:17, out of Mollie D., by Mambrino Gift; May Day, the dam of Margaret S.; Nellie R., 2:17½; Roxana, by Gibraltar, dam May Day; two mares by Onward; Sunflower, 2:28, by Elmo, and her yearling filly by Director, and Margaret S., 2:12½. This valuable collection will go direct to Lexington, Ky. J. N.

A Rare Opportunity.

In another column will be found an advertisement telling of the intended sale of six splendid trotting matrons. Four are in foal to Sidney, 2:19¾, two to Simmocolon, 2:19. For further partilulars, address "W.," Postoffice Box 51, Oakland, Cal.

WM. CRAWFORD, of Vancouver, Wash., has arrived in this city from his Northern home. He came to take up the fine-looking Red Wilkes stallion, called Scarlet Letter, that arrived from Kentucky on Mr. F. D. Myers' car last Saturday. Scarlet Letter's dam is Abdelletta (dam of Geo. Stone's horse Illustrious; Mediator, three-years-old, 2:42, and Bannockburn, three-year-old record 2:30½), by C. M. Clay, 2:22; second dam, Laura Crockett, by Almont 33; third dam Luna, by Abdallah 15; fourth dam Kate Crockett, by imp. Hooton; Kate Crockett was the dam of Lula, 2:14¼; grandam of Advertiser, 2:16. Scarlet Letter is a fine-looking bay colt, two years old, and will make a very valuable addition to the stock interests of the North. Every horseman who has seen him pronounces him a model of a trotting horse. He is owned by Messrs. McFarland & Sperry, of Vancouver.

GEORGE F. FRINK, of San Luis Obispo, Cal., tells us that Hattie F., pacer, 2:18, is by Le Grande (instead of Altoona), dam Silver, by Silverthreads; second dam by The Moor, and that this good mare is owned by General P. W. Murphy, of San Luis Obispo. The dam of Estella C., 2:30 (by Director), is by Speculation, and is owned by E. W. Steele, of San Luis Obispo. We are indebted to Mr. F. for this information, and are glad to get the names of the owners of every good horse possible.

A. G. HAILES, "Smiler," a well-known turf and sporting authority from Australia, is to deliver a lecture on the sports of the turf and field in the antipodes next Thusday evening at Irving Hall.

Care of Brood Mares and Foals.

A veterinarian, in writing on this subject in the Kentucky Stock Farm, gives the following good advice: We will suppose you have a perfect mare selected, both in bodily conformation and in health, with plenty of life, and still gentle and kind, free from any fault or blemish. You are now ready to breed, and in selecting the stallion to breed from you should exercise the judgment and care as in the mare. Now we have found just the animal we wanted, and have our mares bred, and as a few weeks passed by we are anxious to know if she is in foal—so we conclude to consult a veterinarian on the subject. He tells us that a cessation of heat in a shorter time than usual, is a good symptom, that is if she was usually in heat for three days, and it had been cut short to a day and a half or two days, it was a good sign that she has caught. Again he said if she did not come in heat at the next regular period, which should be in from twenty-one to twenty-six days—and if there was a change in her disposition, if naturally a little cross and becomes quite docile, or vice versa, or if there was a refusal on the part of the horse to have anything to do with her, was a good sign. The latter is considered the best symptom of all given above. Although some mares may continue to come in heat, even after becoming pregnant, this is an exception, but not the rule.

We will suppose we have our mare with foal, and now how and what is the best way to treat her during her period of gestation? Again we go to our veterinarian for advice. He says as to work she should not have any heavy or hard pulling. No saddle work, but light every-day work is much better than no work at all when she would have to stay in the stable. Days that she has no work to do if she had pasture to run on would be well, but do not let her out on very hilly ground, for in running she is liable to injure herself or the fœtus and produce an abortion. As to food, frozen food or grasses that have ergot on it should not be fed, and large drinks of cold water should be avoided. While she is confined in the stable in bad weather she should be given a large, loose box-stall where she will have plenty of room, and left loose, so she can move around at her pleasure. The floor should be level, doors wide and sills low. Mares that are used around slaughter-houses frequently abort. This is possibly brought about by the sight and smell of blood or other foul smells. Kicks or blows over the abdomen and sides will frequently cause abortion. Avoid giving a strong dose of purgative medicine. If the bowels should becoms constipated, give oils and enemas of warm water soap suds, but by feeding soft feed and warm mashes the bowels can be kept in a good condition.

Should a miscarriage occur do not attempt to breed her until she has been in heat two or three times, as there is more or less inflammation of the organs, and by putting her to the horse now would only increase the irritation, and might cause chronic inflammation, and barrenness follows. As the time passes on and time draws near for the birth of the colt, she should now by all means have a good, roomy box-stall, as stated above, well-bedded, and she should be carefully watched, for when she begins to foal and everything coming right, she will foal in a very few moments. But if it be in some abnormal position and need assistance to make birth possible, she must have experienced and qualified help at once, for if not relieved inside of three or four hours the foal will die, as four hours is as long as a foal will live after expulsion has once set in. This is caused by the attachment of the placenta to the uterus giving away, and the foal suffocates. Again if the mare is tied up and no one present when she foals, and if the foal should be born in the membranes, as they frequently are, and no one present to liberate it, there is also danger of it suffocating, while if the mare were loose she would soon set him free by tearing the membranes open with her teeth.

After foaling the mare should be exercised every day, but no severe, hard work should be allowed. She will stand light work without injury to herself, and it would be a benefit to her if she cannot be turned out in pasture, but if this can be done it should be done by all means, and both would be much benefitted by it, provided grass is such as to support them and the foal comes at the time of year that this can be done. If not, they should be kept in a good warm place, well fed on good, nutritous food that will produce plenty of milk. The essential point in a good brood mare is the production of milk in abundance to supply the foal and contain all the constituents for healthy nutrition. This is one great cause of so many ailments and death of so many young foals. When the weather will permit let them out for exercise, and when grass comes turn them out and let them run. A good healthy mare will be able to produce a colt each year for years, but should you fail to breed her and let her miss a year, it might be impossible to get her with foal again. This is frequently the case with mares when they get up in years, so it is best to keep them going as long as they will. It is a very poor policy to work the mare hard and keep the colt tied up in the stable and only let him suck at such times as is convenient to you. The mare may be in a heated condition and the milk feverish, and the udder is apt to be over distended and liable to set up such trouble as mammitis, so it is much better to have them altogether, then he can suck at such times as he feels like it until he is able to take care of himself. Then he should be taken from the mare, which will probably be when he is six or seven months old. Care should be taken to milk the mare every day nearly dry, and bathe the udder well with spirits of camphor and fluid extract of belladonna of equal parts daily, and in a few days you will find that the milk supply has stopped. Now she can be used as stated above, provided she is expected to bring forth a colt next year.

In this short article I have endeavored to place before your readers a few hints that may be well for them to follow, and to show the folly of breeding from an unsound animal, as so many of the troubles that constitute the unsoundness are hereditary, and it would only be a matter of a short time until the offspring would develop the troubles of the mother in the majority of cases. It may cost a little more in the start, but pays better results in the end. Then you do not have to hunt for a market, but the market hunts for you.

Penny Wise, Pound Foolish.

Quite a number of gentlemen new to the turf have purchased horses with the intention of racing the coming season, and to such the importance of securing a competent trainer is a matter of vital importance. The number of tinkers and shoemakers who are foisting themselves upon unsuspecting owners as trainers is something startling. A season as rubber of selling platers of the forty shilling sort appears to furnish sufficient experience in the business to warrant these pretenders in setting up as full-fledged masters of a profession that competent men have devoted a lifetime in acquiring. We have in mind the case of a gentleman who last season paid many thousands of dollars for a single horse—and a good race horse, too—that not only failed to win, but failed to get a place as well. The peculiarity of this particular horse is that he does not come to hand early, as was evidenced by his previous training, but the incompetent that had him in charge was bound to win a race over a distance of ground early in the season. He failed to win at all, and it is more than doubtful if the horse is ever seen at the post again. We know of another gentleman who has a large number of two-year-olds that have cost a great deal of money, which are now in charge of a man who never in his lifetime has sent a horse to the post fit to race until the horse had raced himself into racing form. We are reliably informed that the owner of an expensive lot of youngsters last season entrusted their training to the family coachman. That he failed to win a dollar of any sort of money was a surprise to no one except the owner. Racing under any circumstances is attended with considerable risk, even when the most competent men are engaged, but when the management of a stable of horses is entrusted to those whose sole claim to skill in training is based upon a season or two with Winter peg-legs, it becomes an absolute certainty to end in disappointment. Employers of such people will chew the cud of sorrow and a long string of bills payable at the end of the season.

Prof. E. W. Stewart gives a ration for a thoroughbred horse than stands unused. He says: "The horse being without labor, should be given such a ration as will properly maintain his animal and masculine vigor. The following simple combination will do this: 5 lbs. coarse wheat bran, 4 lbs. oats, 2 lbs. old process linseed meal; let this be mixed together and divided into three feeds with what long hay he will eat besides. It would be slightly better if this feed were mixed with 2 lbs. of cut hay, but with the coarse bran this will not be material. This ration contains all the elements necessary to keep up his full animal vigor and keep his system healthy. The linseed meal will not give him a sleek coat, but will keep his digestive organs in the best condition. The bran is, perhaps, the best food to supply the waste of bone.

Richard Havey, the famous reinsman, has resigned his position of head trainer at the Hobart Stock Farm. It is not occasioned by any misunderstanding with Mr. Hobart, nor through any dissatisfaction concerning the colts at that great establishment, but through certain disagreeable features of the management that Mr. Havey would not put up with.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Answers for this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

W. J. J., Oakdale.—Please give the pedigree of Echo. Answer.—By Hambletonian 10, dam Fanny Felter, by Magnolis 68.

C. A. & W. R—Can anyone give us the pedigree of Montgomery's Black Hawk, who made a record of 2:40 on the Chico track?

To J. Q.—Please inform J. Q., Oakland, through the columns of your valuable paper that he can secure such information as he desires regarding the breeding of Sunday (trotter) and also see the horse by calling on me at address below. E. J. Osgood, 2203 Telegraph Ave, Oakland, Cal.

G.—I would like to get the pedigree of the horse Lodi, that ran with Norfolk. Could you tell me how to do it? Answer.—By imported Yorkshire, dam Topaz, by imported Glencoe; second dam Emerald, by imp. Leviathan, etc.

To Mrs. V. S., Humboldt.—We find a Comet that was by Ch ttenden Morgan, a son of Woodbury Morgan, son of Justin Morgan. As to his dam, we have not found that as yet. Yet this Comet was a Vermont horse, as has always been claimed about Ben Fish's Comet, and may be the same one, for he was in Vermont in 1856.

E. H., Quincy, Cal.—Will yon please give me the pedigree of Conductor, of this Coast? Answer—By Electioneer 125, dam Sontag Mohawk (dam of seven in the 2:30 list), by Mohawk Chief; second dam Sontag Nellie, by Toronto Sontag 307; third dam Nellie Gray, five-mile record 13:45), pedigree untraced.

G. M. F., San Luis Obispo, Cal.—Give the pedigree of Young Niagara and Niagara, also their records, if any. Answer—Please give all the information you can regarding Young Niagara, his dam, etc. No such horse is in the stud books. Old Niagara was s t b, by Washtenaw Chief. His pedigree has never been authenticated.

Subscriber, Ukiah, Cal.—Give us the breeding or pedigree of a mare imported to this country by a Mr. Simpson, formerly editor of the Breeder and Sportsman, said to be by Hock Hocking. As we have a colt from that mare foaled in '87, we would like to get his pedigree. Answer.—Mr. Simpson states that Hock-Hocking's first colts were foaled after he brought the horse to this Coast, consequently we cannot tell the breeding of this particular one.

G. M. F., San Luis Obispo, Cal.—About the 1st of February, 1890, the Tribune Printing Company, of this city, offered a stake of $500 for "mares covered in 1889, trotting foals of 1890." A question has arisen with reference to a colt that was duly entered to wit: The mare was covered in 1889, and due to foal on January 10, 1890. The colt was premature, and came on the 28th day of December, 1889. It was a weakly colt, and was raised by hand. Is this colt eligible to start in the above named race? Answer—We will decide thgt the colt is eligible to start for this stake, under the conditions and circumstances.

We would like to verify the pedigree given us of a black pacing mare, with four white feet, called Maudie, once owned by Judge O. R. Leonard, of the Supreme Court of Nevada. As given to us, her breeding was: Sired by Robert Bonner, son of General Knox and Polly by Hiram Drew (owned by Ben Palmer, of Carson, Nev.), dam Whipcracker Mare, by Belmont, which Belmont we do not know. This mare was owned by Captain Winney, of Carson, Nev., and the Whipcracker Mare also. Did Cracker, by Boston, figure in her pedigree? Any information about Maudie will be thankfully received.

Subscriber, Tulare, Cal.—There was a race for two-year-olds at this meeting, one and a half mile heats two in three. I will give the horses' names as one and two. Number one had second position on the first heat, and he won the heat easily without a skip, then number two took the second heat with several bad breaks, and number one took the pole. Before they reached the quarter pole in second heat (the turn at the head of the stretch is rather short), number one pulled out near the middle of the track to keep his horse on his feet, he said, but pulled in to the pole as soon as he could get his horse to going steady. Number two seeing this opening at head of stretch, pulled in and tried to take the pole, and kept on the inside to the wire, and number one crowded number two up on the bank. There being no fence at the pole, number two claimed a foul, and the judge gave number two the heat, race and first money. Was that a proper decision? Number one was a length ahead of number two in last heat. Please answer. Answer—We are of the opinion that any driver can go ahead and take the pole with his horse, provided he does not foul or interfere in any way with anyone. We should say that the judges saw a foul on the part of number one, and decided right in giving the race to number two. It appears to us as if number one pulled in deliberately—crossed and squeezed—keeping number two from winning by unfair methods.

Will some one please give us the breeeing of Carrie Miller, a good thoroughbred race mare of perhaps a dozen years ago? She is the dam of Black Willow, a daughter of Monday.

THOROUGHBRED MARES FOR SALE.

JOE VIVA, br., foaled 1886, by Joe Hooker, her dam Lady Viva, by Three Cheers.

From the tabulated pedigree appended, it will be seen that the breeding is of the best kind.

SANTA CRUZ has a remarkable pedigree, two Bonnie Scotland and three Lexington crosses. Her grandsire, Malcolm, is the grandsire of El Rio Rey, and as her dam is by Norfolk, the sire of El Rio Rey, she bears a close relationship to that invincible race horse, and so highly formed that she will serve as a model.

JOE VIVA, brown, 15½ hands high, of good form, and should prove a high-class broodmare. Her sire stands very high in the list of successful sires, and the sire of her dam, Three Cheers, is the sire of Acclaim, Almont, Cheerful, Applause and other good racehorses, and her grandam, Lady Amanda, one of the very fastest from half a mile to two miles, and she is a half-sister to Malcolm, Regent, Ontario et al., and a full sister to Lady Middleton.

These mares are at Gov. Stanford's Vina Ranch, have been stinted to Whips, and the prospective foals are reserved, and the purchaser will be required to take proper care of them and permit them to suck until five months old, when they will be taken away.

VOTER.

ELECT was sired by ELECTIONEER, dam INEZ, by NORDALE; second dam LIZZIE, by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT; third dam "THE THRIFT MARE," a thoroughbred brought from Kentucky.

NORDALE, by NORFOLK, dam BLUE DALE, by OWEN DALE; NORFOLK, by LEXINGTON, dam NOVICE, by IMP. GLENCOE; OWEN DALE by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT, dam MARIA DOWNING, by AMERICAN ECLIPSE. YOUNG TELESCOPE by IMP. TELESCOPE, dam by IMP. MESSENGER.

VOTER is a dark bay, solid color, with black points; foaled 1886; 15 hands 3 inches high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a horse of magnificent form, and is in every way a superior individual. In him is combined the HAMBLETONIAN, CLAY, MORGAN and thoroughbred blood. This horse was in Charles Marvin's care for about ten days during the record meeting at Stockton last fall—the only time he was ever on a track—and the first time he was speeded he showed Marvin an eighth of a mile in 19½ seconds. He was taken sick, and notwithstanding he showed such remarkable speed, had to be taken home.

VOTER will make the season from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

ANDY R.

(FULL BROTHER TO STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23.)

Sired by CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of STEVE WHIPPLE, four-year-old race record, 2:23, and KATE AGNEW, 2:28½), dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23, and VOTER), by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of 15 trotters in 2:30; of 9 sires of 12 2:30 trotters, and of 12 dams of 16 trotters in the list.)

CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN 10,178, by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of nine sires), dam FLORA (dam of three sires of 2:30 speed) by CHIEFTAIN 721; second dam a thoroughbred mare.

ANDY R. is a bright bay, with small star; foaled 1885; 15 hands 2½ inches high, and weighs 1,025 pounds. He is a beauty, and a perfect horse in every way. Will make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $40 FOR THE SEASON, FEBRUARY 1 TO JUNE 1.

PRINDEX.

PRINDEX is a dark brown horse, white hind feet; foaled 1888; 16 hands high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a good-sized, fine-styled and well-gaited colt, and will certainly make a trotter and sire of speed. He will also make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st.

AT $40 FOR THE SEASON.

The reader will perceive that the four stallions mentioned herein are all from the same mare. Four individually better or nicer-looking stallions can not be found on any stock farm in California. Horsemen are especially invited to inspect the horses, and I wish to call special attention to their feet and legs—better were never put under a horse. Their dam, TWIST, at sixteen years old, is as sound as the day she was foaled. Their second, third and fourth dams were used for all purposes of farm and road work, and all lived to be over thirty years old—their limbs, at the time of death, being as free of blemishes or of any marks of unsoundness as a suckling colt's.

The disposition of these stallions are of the very best, and their produce are all good size, of fine conformation, have perfect feet and legs, and all show speed to a remarkable degree.

I do not favor extremely high service fees, and the prices on these stallions for this year are placed comparatively very low; that of STEVE WHIPPLE in particular being much less than of any other stallion of equal value or merit in this State.

Mares sent to my address, care of WEBER STABLES, STOCKTON, CAL., will be taken to my ranch at BELLOTA free of charge, provided two or three days' notice be given me by letter.

Pasturage on mares to be bred to VOTER, ANDY R., or PRINDEX free for two months, after that $3 per month. All bills payable at time of service or before the mares are removed.

Usual return privileges, provided mare or horse does not change hands, or money refunded at my option. For further particulars, address

C. E. NEEDHAM, Bellota, San Joaquin Co., Cal.

DESCRIPTION.

BAY ROSE is a dark bay or brown, with black points, 16½ hands high, and weighs 1,150 pounds. He is remarkably intelligent, of good dispotition, and a pure-gaited trotter. He was foaled in 1881. His colts are large, stylish, rangy animals, and inherit his qualities of speed and endurance. He is the only horse that won a heat from Palo Alto in 1889.

TERMS, $200 FOR THE SEASON.

Return privileges 1893, provided neither the mare nor stallion change ownership. Good pasturage $3 per month. First-class care taken of mares in any manner that owners may desire, but no responsibility assumed for escapes or accidents.

Limited to a few approved mares.

Wilkes-Electioneer Stallion.

COMBINED BLOOD
— Of the Greatest Son of
GEO. WILKES
— And the Greatest Son of
ELECTIONEER,

ANTEEO WILKES.

Black horse, foaled May, 1889; sired by GUY WILKES, race-record fourth heat, 2:15¼.

First dam Amy Fay, by ANTEEO, race record 2:16¼, sire of Myrtle, three-year-old record 2:19½, Alfred G., four-year-old record 2:19¾, James Madison, record 2:17¾; second dam by Alexander, record 2:31¼, son of George M. Patchen Jr., record 2:27, and grandsire of Yolo Maid 2:12; third dam by Naubuc, son of Toronto Chief, record 2:24½ and Gypsy Queen, ten-mile record 28:39, and full brother to the famous trotter, Thomas Jefferson, record 2:23; fourth dam Sacramento Belle, ten-mile record 31.07, one-mile record 2:38.

Anteeo Wilkes as an individual is worthy of his great blood lines; he is 15.3 hands high and of perfect form. Although handled but little and never driven once by a professional driver he has trotted a mile in 2:52 quarters in forty seconds without shoes, as a two-year-old, with the marked purity of gait, for which the Guy Wilkes trotters are noted. At close of season will be trained for a great record.

SERVICE FEE $100.

Limited to twelve approved mares, season to end June 15th. Box stalls and corrals for mares. Address,
OSCAR MANSFELDT,
1163 Alice street, Oakland, or
723 Market street, San Francisco.

The Best Representatives of the Great Almont Family in California,

ALCONA 730.

Grandsire of SILAS SKINNER, record 2:17; DEL REY, record 2:29; MARK MEDIUM, record 2:24.

"LACONA" made a 2-year-old race record of 2:42½, with 17 days track work. Every one of the above descendants of ALCONA were trained by different men, in different parts of the country, and all made their records in races over regulation tracks. ALCONA is 14 years old and has already two producing sons and a producing daughter. TERMS, $75 FOR THE SEASON.

GRANDISSIMO 14,995. RECORD, 2:27 3-4. (FULL BROTHER TO GRANDEE, THREE-YEAR-OLD RECORD, 2:23½).

GRANDISSIMO got his first work last season better than 3 minutes November 11, 1891. Was worked out four times and trotted to a record of 2:27¾ in a race Thanksgiving Day at Napa, finishing the last quarter in 36 seconds. Fifteen days training,—certainly a remarkable showing. I expect him to get a low mark next season. His colts are fine lookers and natural trotters. He will be bred to a limited number of mares at the low price of $50 FOR THE SEASON.

ALCONEER 15120. (FULL BROTHER TO ALCONA JR., 2:24, SIRE OF SILAS SKINNER, 2:17). Sired by ALCONA 730, dam Madonna (dam of Alcona Jr., 2:24, Del Rey, 2:29), by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22); grandam by Joe Downing 710.

ALCONEER is a handsome, good-sized horse, and a natural trotter. With two months training last fall as a 3-year-old he trotted a mile in 2:41; last quarter in 37½ seconds. TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CADUCAS 10,840. Sired by ALMONT MEDIUM 2133, record 2:28½, dam Amelia T. (full sister to Prince Warwick, trial 2:18), by Alcona 730; grandam by Almont Mambrino 761; g g d by Delmonico 110; g g g d by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22. CADUCAS is a handsome individual, and will make a trotter. His pedigree is all one could desire. He will be bred to a few mares at the low price of $25 FOR THE SEASON.

KING WHIPPLETON (Standard). PRIVATE STALLION.

Sired by WHIPPLETON 1883, dam Kate Chapman, by Naubuc 504; grandam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31 g.g d by Ethan Allen 2903.

The season to commence February 1st. ALCONA'S season to close September 1st. GRANDISSIMO, ALCONEER and CADUCAS' season to close July 1st, as I expect to trot them during the circuit. Mares can be shipped by rail from any part of the State direct to St. Helena or by boat to Napa City, where they will be looked after. The very best of pasturage at $4 per month; hay and grain $8 per month for mares if necessary. Mares kept same as my own at $60 per year. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the following season free. Should any of my stallions die or be sold, mares will be returnable to any of my other stallions by paying difference in service, if any. For further particulars, address

FRED W. LOEBER, St. Helena, Cal.

CYRUS R., 2:17 3-4.

The Fastest Son of Nutwood, 2:18 3-4, now in California.

Will make the SEASON of 1892 at the stable of T. U. BARSTOW, San Jose, Cal,

TERMS, $75 FOR THE SEASON,

With the usual return privilege, providing the stallion or mare does not change ownership.

DESCRIPTION—Coal black horse, small star: stands 15¾ hands high; weighs 1,100 pounds; well-formed and of good disposition. This horse got a record of 2:17¾ with only four weeks' work; he can show a half-mile in 1:06½ and one-eighth in 16 seconds.

PEDIGREE—Got by Nutwood 600, first dam Belle, by Jack Roberts; second dam Young Nance, by Shakespeare, thoroughbred. Jack Roberts by Eclair, and he by old pacing Pilot; the dam of Jack Roberts was by Copperbottom. CYRUS R. has two crosses of the great Pilot blood, once through Nutwood and again through Belle, his dam.

SPECIAL NOTICE—No service fee if this horse does not trot in 2:12 or better in 1892, barring accidents.

ANTEROS NUTWOOD.

PEDIGREE—By Anteros 6020, full brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, Antevolo, 2:19½, by Electioneer, the greates sire the world has ever known. First dam Newark Belle, by Nutwood, 2:18¾, the greatest living sire; second dam Tillie, 2:40, by San Bruno, he by David Hill, and he by Vermont Black Hawk; third dam by Young Grey Eagle.

DESCRIPTION—ANTEROS NUTWOOD is a handsome bay horse with black points, no white; stands sixteen hands one inch high; weighs 1,150 pounds. He is a horse of immense power, and yet so highly finished as to give him the appearance of a thoroughbred. He gives promise of trotting as fast as the celebrated Arion 2:10¾, as he can show better than a 2:20 clip to a road cart without training, and is of the same blood as the phenomenal Arion, 2:10¾, two years old. No service fee will be charged if this horse does not secure a record of twenty-five or better in 1892, barring accidents.

LIMITED TO 20 OUTSIDE MARES AT $50 EACH FOR THE SEASON,

With the usual return privileges by paying difference in price if any. Season to commence February 1st and end June 1st, 1892.

For further particulars, apply to or address

T. W. BARSTOW,
56 Wilson Avenue, San Jose, Cal.

THE MAGNIFICENT TROTTING STALLION

MARKS L.

Will make the Season of 1892, ending July 1st,

AT THE BAY DISTRICT TRACK.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

MARKS L. was foaled 1888; he is a handsome bay in color; stands 16.2 hands; weighs 1,150. He is a remarkably well-muscled, heavy-boned, clean-limbed horse, and a more perfect-formed or a more promising one is not standing for public service. In action he is a perfect line trotter, and although never having been handled for speed, there is little doubt but that he will trot close to 2:20 this fall.

MARKS L. was sired by Antevolo, 2:19½, out of Maggie L., by Grand Duke Alexis; second dam Vashti, by Chieftain 721; third dam by Nena Sahib (thoroughbred). Antevolo, by Electioneer 125. Grand Duke Alexis was by Stephen A. Douglas 422, out of Black Bessie, by Blucher. Stephen A. Douglas was by Hambletonian 10, out of Kate, by Balsora 1024; second dam Neva, by Vincente Nolte, etc. Chieftain 721 was by Hiatoga, out of a daughter of Trimble's Eclipse. Terms, $50 for the season. For further particulars, address

The Thoroughbred Stallion

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1892 at

WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,

715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

THREE CHEERS

Young Fashion — Fashion — Bonnie d'Ecosse / Trentola (imp.) — Monarch — Delphine / Prism
Hurrah (imp.) — Jovial — Sister to Grey Momus / Bay Middleton — Newminster — Beeswing / Touchstone

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEL, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS.

Seventy-five Dollars for the Season.

Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

NUTWOOD WILKES is a handsome chestnut in color, stands 15½ hands high, is level-headed, kind and intelligent.

RAPID TRANSIT,

Limited to Fifteen approved outside mares at $75 for the season.

RAPID TRANSIT is a fine-looking bay horse, stands 15½ hands high. He is by DIRECTOR 1989, 2:17; dam Lida W., record 2:18¼, dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½ at 3 years. (See above tabulated pedigree.) He is a horse of splendid individuality and excellent blood lines.

LONG BRANCH.

Limited to Fifteen outside mares at $50 for the season.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¾ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, sire of seven with records from 2:17¾ to 2:30), by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Zola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25¾ (sire of seven with records from 2:10 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty outside mares at $50 for the season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19, Annie C., 2:25, Albert H., 2:27¾, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¾ (sire of 77 with records from 2:11½ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11½ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track); dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30; the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23½, made in 1860; the fastest and gamest representative of the Clay family). This pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great broodmares. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains—the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race-horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and nineteen others from 2:18¼ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or ten per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

YOUNG STOCK FOR SALE.

Visitors welcome any day.

Delwin, 14,681, record 2:26 1-2, will, if he has no setbacks, pace in 2:15 or better, and beat 2:30 trotting over the fast Stockton kite track this fall. Delwin is one of the handsomest grandsons of the great Moor; in color, he is a dark dapple bay, sound as a dollar, outside of his broken hind leg, and the best of feet and legs; 15.1½ hands high, and weighs 1,000 pounds; he is one of the finest-formed horses for great speed in the land; has the same level head and intelligence that his half-brother, Guide, 2:16¼, has; in color and form he resembles Harry Clay 45 (sire of the dam of Electioneer and George Wilkes, 2:22), more than any horse that we ever saw. Delwin has the same blood lines as the handsome grandson of The Moor, Stamboul, 2:11; he has two crosses of American Star 14, also of Clay, one of Hambletonian 10, sire of the dam of Stamboul, 2:11; one to Mambrino Chief, sire of the dam of Director, 2:17, and two of the great Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Nutwood, 2:18¾, combining altogether the same blood lines that lay in the grandest stallions, living or dead—Arion, 2:10¾, Stamboul, 2:11; also the first yearling to beat 2:30, and who trotted the fastest last quarter in that mile than was ever trotted by any yearling, 34 seconds—Freedom, 2:29¼.

Del Sur, 2:24, sire of Don Tomas, 2:20, and Cousin Joe, 2:20¼, being a full brother to the dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, sire of Freedom, 2:29¾, and two others better than 2:28. Delwin's colts all show the trot out of any kind of mares.

Terms, $40, with usual return privilege.

Good water and pasturage at $5 per month, but will not be responsible for accidents or escapes. Mares can be shipped to the farm and home of Delwin, the Meese Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County, Cal., per S. P R. R., via Martinez. For further particulars, address,

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

THE BEST-BRED AND FINEST-LOOKING WILKES STALLION IN THE STATE.

No. 8707. BILLY THORNHILL Rec. 2:24 1-2

By BEVERLY WILKES, Brother of
PROSPECT MAID, 2:23½, WALSINGHAM, 2166 (sire of LATITUDE, 2:19¾ at 4 years), GEORGIA WILKES, sire of VALENTINE, 2:18¾, BAS BLEN WILKES, 2:24½, BILLY WILKES, 2:29½, BESSIE WILKES, 2:31½.

By GEORGE WILKES, Sire of
GUY WILKES, 2:15½, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-four others in the 2:30 list, and seventy-five sires of 249 trotters.

Dam EMILY, Dam of
FORTUNA, 2:22, BILLY THORNHILL, 2:24½, COL. YOUNG, 2:30.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of
Seventy-five producing sons and forty-six producing daughters.

Second dam SUE STOUT,

By ASHLAND 47, Son of
MAMBRINO CHIEF 11 and sire of HIGHLAND WIN 1226, and others in list and the dams of EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¾, and others.

Third dam LEAR MARE, Dam of
JIM IRVING, 2:23, and YOUNG JIM, sire of BUTTERFLY, 2:19¾, GARNETT, 2:19, and twelve other performers.

By LEAR'S SIR WILLIAM, Son of
HOWARD'S SIR CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES (who died when but three years of age) was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot 2:27½ (sire of Hannis, 2:17½, and others), out of Juliett, by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2½ hands, and weighs 1,080 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well-built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well-shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:40 without boots of any kind. His first colt showed trials last fall in 2:20 in his 3-year-old form, and all of his 2-year-olds that have been handled any show lots of speed and a nice way of going. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

TERMS, $75 WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGE.

I have a good pasture to turn mares in at $5 each per month. The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18¼, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:24½ and 2:24½. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. WILLIAM CORBITT,
San Mateo Stock Farm, San Mateo, Cal.

No. 4,541. WILKESDALE Rec'rd 2:29.

By ALCANTARA, 2:23, Sire of
MISS ALICE, 2:17½, AUTOGRAPH, 2:18¼, NIGHTINGALE, 2:13½, LIGHTNING, 2:19¼, and forty-three others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of PRINCE REGENT, five years, 2:16½, and ÆGON, three years, 2:18¼.

Dam ALMA MATER, Dam of
ALCANTARA, 2:23; ALCYONE, 2:27; ALMATER, 2:29½; ALICIA, 2:30; ARBITER, 2:22½; ALMETA, 2 32¾; ALLINE, five years old (trial), 2:25.

Wilkesdale's dam THORNDALE MAID, 2:30, Dam of
MISS ALICE, 2:17¼, THORNTON, 2:26½, WILKESDALE, 2:29.

Second dam BRIDESMAID, Dam of
THORNDALE MAID, 2:30, and TRIXIE, (trial), 2:25½.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of
GUY WILKES, 2:15½, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-five others in 2:30 list.

By MAMBRINO PATCHEN, Sire of
Eighteen in 2:30 list, and the dams of GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HOURI, 2:17, ASTRAL, 2:18, BARON WILKES, 2:18, and sixty others in 2:30 or better.

By THORNDALE, 2:24½, Sire of
EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, DAISYDALE, 2:19¾, and five others in 2:30 list, by ALEXANDER'S ABDALLAH, sire of GOLDSMITH MAID, 2:14, ALMONT, etc., out of DOLLY, dam of DIRECTOR, 2:17, ONWARD, 2:25¼. THORNDALE, 2:24¼, and CZARINA, 2:21, by MAMBRINO CHIEF.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five producing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12¾, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼ (who was shown trials the past season in 2:14); Thornton, 2:26½, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:24½, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12½, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, (the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams, Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, soft and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29½. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

*Balkan.

BALKAN 8848

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14¼ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, 2:12, three years, and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¼. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Kremlin mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¼. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Dipsy, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Ida P., 2:29, Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:30 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan, it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000, and his service is offered at $200.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

Address this office till further notice.

    - Hambletonian 10
    - Lady Fallis, by American Star 14
  - Daughter of
    - American Star 14
    - Daughter of Harry Clay 45

The attention of breeders is called to the above pedigree, which shows three crosses of American Star, embracing also the following great broodmares: Imogene, Clara, Dolly, Lady Fallis and Gretchen.

GUIDE'S sire has a record of 2:17, made in a five-heat race, and he is also closely related to Phallas, record 2:13¾ fourth heat, Jay-Eye-See, record 2:10, and Clingstone, 2:14. Guide, with a record of 2:16¼, is the fastest trotting son of the "Black Tornado," showing himself to possess the greatest share of the best qualities of his sire and grandsire, which, with his three crosses of American Star blood, makes him the peer of any trotting sire in the world.

TERMS: $200 for the season, with usual return privileges. Excellent pasturage, $5 per month, and the best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently-formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better-bred stallion stands for public service in California to-day. He is only six years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON,

with the usual return privilege. Excellent care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

ABDOL

17,716.

RECORD, 2:28.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

Abdol was foaled in 1883, bred by John Watson, Oakland, and is one of the finest sons of the Grand Moor. He is a handsome black in color, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a horse of splendid proportions, exquisite style and perfect trotting action. He is remarkably level-headed, intelligent and of kind disposition, and possesses the qualities of speed and gameness to a remarkable degree. His record is no mark of his speed. When it was made it was the intention to keep him in the 2:30 class. He has shown in his work last quarters in 34 seconds—a 2:16 gait—and can get away equally fast.

Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¾; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

GLEN FORTUNE

(25 per cent. of the blood of Shanghai Mary; the exact amount carried by Electioneer himself.)

- ELECTIONEER 125 (Sunol, 2:08¾; Palo Alto, 2:08¾.)
  - HAMBLETONIAN 10 (His sons have produced nearly 1,000 in 2:30.)
    - ABDALLAH 1
    - CHAS. KENT MARE
  - GREEN MOUNTAIN MAID (8 in 2:30.)
    - HARRY CLAY 45
    - SHANGHAI MARY
- GLENNE (Out of a half-sister to Green Mountain Maid.)
  - MESSENGER DUROC 106 (20 in 2:30; dams of 19 in 2:30.)
    - HAMBLETONIAN 10
    - BY ROE'S ABDALLAH CHIEF
  - GLENELLA (Out of the dam of Green Mountain Maid.)
    - WOODWARD STAR
      Son of Seely's American Star.
    - SHANGHAI MARY
      Grandam of Electioneer.

$100 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

As the dam of Green Mountain Maid and grandam of Electioneer, Shanghai Mary may be called the foundation stone of the Electioneer family, which now holds practically every best on record. Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

Glen Fortune's oldest colts were foaled in 1891, and show up splendidly in the kindergarten, where they may be seen any week day.

OTHER BLOOD LINES, SAME RETURN AND KEEPING PRIVILEGES.

By Whipple's Hambletonian 725.

FIGARO (trial 2:32½), $75.

First dam Emblem.....by Tattler, 2:26
sister to Voltaire, 2:20¼, son of Pilot Jr.
Second dam Young Portia.....by Mambrino Chief 11.
dam of Voltaire, 2:20¼,
Childe Harold, two miles over an English course, 5:04, also two producing sons and two producing daughters.

By Almont 33.

JESTER D., $75.

First dam Hortense.....by Messenger Duroc 106
Twenty in 2:30, seventeen producing daughters.
Second dam Nelly McDonald (thoroughbred)....by Colossus thoroughbred son of imp. Sovereign.
Colossus sired Colossus Mambrino, who produced St. Louis, 2:25.
grandam of Prætor, 2:29½.
Fourth to fourteenth dams thoroughbred.

By The Grand Moor.

MOORLAND, $40.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¾.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

An entirely new and original system of balancing and conditioning will be shown in a few weeks. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU

That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is glori ously mistaken. However, don't point ou the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect be aring o both heels and the entire wearing surface.

TROTTING.

FREE-FOR-ALL STALLION PURSE	$2000
2:15 CLASS STALLION PURSE	$1500
2:25 CLASS STALLION PURSE	$1000
3:00 CLASS STALLION PURSE	$1000

PACING.

2:25 CLASS STALLION PURSE	$1000

CONDITIONS.

In all 3-in-5 races a horse not winning one heat in three shall be sent to the stable regardless of number of starters, but if eight or more start, no horse shall be sent to the stable if placed second in one of the first three heats.

In all races of mile heats, 2 in 3, a horse not winning a heat in two shall be sent to the stable, but if eight or more start, no horse shall be sent to the stable which has been placed second in one of the first two heats.

The right reserved to start each stake or purse in trial heats if more than nine declared to start, starters to be divided by the Board of Directors.

First payment, whether for purses payable in installments or for stakes, MUST ACCOMPANY NOMINATIONS, or they will not be considered.

Omission to make any payment as above stipulated, means forfeiture of any previous payments and of the right to start.

Horses and colts owned outside of the Pacific coast are eligible to all stakes and purses without requirement of membership; persons residing in States and Territories lying in whole or in part west of the Rocky Mountains, MUST become members of the P. C. T. H. B. A. to entitle them to make entries.

No added money will be paid for a walk-over. If only three horses start in a stake race, only first, second and third money shall be paid—if but two start, the Directors reserve the right to call it a walk-over and divide the stake money paid in; two-thirds to the winner, and one-third to the second horse. In case of a walk-over, only the moneys received from entries to said stake will be paid. In purse races, three horses will be required to start. The right is reserved to call two starters a walk-over.

A horse distancing the field shall only be entitled to first and third moneys.

The Directors reserve the right to change the hour and day of any race except when it becomes necessary to anti-date a race, in which instance the nominator will receive three days notice of change by mail to address of entry.

Entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race, shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the horse to be started must be named by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race.

Trotting and racing colors shall be named by six o'clock P. M. on the day preceding the race, and must be worn upon the track.

Otherwise than the above National Association Rules to govern.

Suspension and expulsions of the American Trotting Association will be recognized.

Persons desirous of making entries in the above purses and stakes, and who have not as yet joined the P. C. T. H. B. A. should make application for membership to the Secretary, and remit the sum of $25 to cover membership fee before March 1st, 1892.

Programme for Aged Horses, Trotters and Pacers, and for Special Events, will be announced at the proper time.

JAS. P. KERR, Secretary, 313 Bush Street, San Francisco.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON, President.

George Washington,

11,623.

2-year-old Record, 2:44;

3-year-old Record, 2:30;

4-year-old Record, 2:20.

GEORGE WASHINGTON is a handsome bay horse, hind feet white, foaled 1886, bred by Thomas Smith of Vallejo, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1200 pounds.

PEDIGREE:

GEORGE WASHINGTON, by Mambrino Chief, Jr., 11,622, record 2:24. George Washington's dam was Fanny Rose (full sister to Prince Allen, 2:27), by Ethan Allen, Jr., 2303 (sire of the dams of George Washington 2:20 and Bessie S., 2:20½, also of Lynwood, sire of Lynnette (three years old record 2:25) also sire of Prince Allen 2:27; second dam, Jenny Lind, thoroughbred, dam of Prince Allen 2:27.

GEORGE WASHINGTON has proven himself a great race horse, and would have been given a much lower mark last season had it not been for an accident. As an individual, he is all that can be asked, being perfect in form, intelligent and of kind disposition, and represents the highest type of a trotting sire. As he will be put in training for the campaign of 1892, he will be allowed to serve only a limited number of approved mares.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50.

FOR EVERYONE the "Switzerland of America," as Lake County is called, has a charm about it that language cannot express. Its wild and romantic scenery, comprising high mountains, fertile valleys and beautiful lakes, leave an impression on the mind of the traveler that is never forgotten. To the invalid no other spot becomes so dear; the rarity of its atmosphere, the total absence of fogs and heavy winds, the numerous medicinal springs, the virtues of which are recognized by all who have tasted of them, combine to give it the reputation it now enjoys. Most of the medicinal springs that have attracted the attention of the weak and afflicted in this world of ours are generally found in hot and arid locations, where the atmosphere is heavy and oppressive and where the strengthening ozone of the higher altitudes is absent. Here, amid the pictured crags or by the rippling waters of the rivulets at their base, in shady nooks and over moss-covered rocks, the mineral-laden waters flow. Sometimes at the fountain-head of a little stream the waters are so strongly impregnated with sodium, iron, manganese, sulphur, lime and soda that the discolorations are seen far down the stream, while the variations of temperature causes a smoky vapor to arise that seems to follow the tortuous windings of the stream until it joins another and is lost in the larger creeks that flow into the great Clear Lake.

But it is not of the waters of Lake County, nor of its great agricultural and mineral resourses, but of the foundations of a great stock farm for the breeding and raising of the "noblest of the equine race, the thoroughbred," we would speak, and that is at the Guenoc Stock Farm, owned by F. Gebhard and managed by Dr. C. W. Aby.

A long-standing invitation to "come and see the youngsters" was accepted by your representative, and on Friday morning, at eight o'clock, we boarded the train for Calistoga, and rode through the far-famed Napa Valley, with its wealth of vineyards, orchards and grain fields that seemed to be waiting for the coming rain. The plowed fields, the pruned vines, the bare limbs of the fruit trees and the cattle and horses around the large stacks of hay were evidences of the wintry season, the dullest period of the year.

At Calistoga the stage was in waiting, and beside that "Knight of the Whip," A. R. Palmer, we were soon leaving the dark looking soil of the valley and climbing the red-colored and green-bordered road to the summit of St. Helena, whose snow-capped peak could be seen far above us, a little halt to take a look at the panoramic view we were leaving behind, and then the four horses were allowed to dash along the timber-shaded road to Middletown. The Bradford quicksilver mine was passed, and down the gorge where the St. Helena creek—now filled to overflowing—we dashed along over the narrow roadway past clearings, where vines have replaced oaks and chapparel; around cornfields and orchards. Over bridges and through creeks, the horses were carefully guided, until we arrived at our destination. Howard Fraser, one of our old-time Lake county acquaintances, smilingly greeted us as the Boniface of the Middletown Hotel, where the traveler and the health seeker are most cordially welcomed. Dr. C. W. Aby did not wait long for us to exchange greetings, for his cheery voice was heard outside, and with a prancing team of horses which seemed to keep him very busy, we found we were to ride behind them. Bidding our host good bye, and with no little fear and trepidation, we sat beside the delicate form of the doctor. Once on the road and away from town, the team became quiet, and before we had ridden the five miles over the smooth road and then through the gate of the Langtry farm and across the two miles of road that had to be traversed before we reached the Guenoc Stock Farm, the "edge was taken off" a little from our prancing, dancing team.

The Guenoc farm contains some 3,300 acres of hill and valley land. It is situated in what was once known as the Coyote Valley. The changes that have been wrought since the last time we rode across the chapparel-covered hillsides and over its level valley were almost incomprensible; but "time, money and knowledge worketh wonders everywhere," it seems. At that time the whole valley was nothing but a sheep and cattle range. An Indian rancherie occupied the upper end of the valley, and its dusky inhabitants subsisted on the pinenuts, wild oats, fruits and berries that grew in profusion around them.

The sun was going down behind the mountain as we drove into the large barn, so we decided to wait until daylight before we started on our tour of inspection among the barns and paddocks. The cottage which is now occupied by Dr. Aby was built about eleven years ago but we doubt if its former occupant would recognize its interior.

The walls are covered with oil paintings, photographs and steel engravings of thoroughbreds and racing scenes, many of them rare old prints that have been selected by this connoisseur in his wanderings. Plates and horseshoes from the fleetest thoroughbreds that made themselves famous on the turf; bric-a-brac that is at once curious and interesting to lovers of horses were everywhere seen. The large bookcase is filled with the choicest of England's and America's contributions to the literature of the turf, medical and scientific works occupying some of the shelves. The big, open fire place with the immense oak logs blazing and crackling; beside our genial companion, Dr. Aby, who is also one of the most entertaining of hosts, settled down in easy chairs, we talked horse, a subject that always contributes to make one feel at home and loath to retire.

In the morning the large deer hounds, retrievers and spaniels collected around us as we wended our way toward the big barn, which can be seen from all parts of the large park-like valley. It is about 100 long by 75 feet wide, and is some 45 feet in height, with a gable roof and three cupolas. It contains some twenty large box stalls, driveway, carriage room, harness room and granary. The loft has a capacity of 150 tons of loose hay. In the center of the building a kindergarten track is built on which the colts can be exercised in inclement weather. The turns are well thrown up, and here the youngsters gallop around as if they enjoyed it. Well equipped blacksmith and carpenter shops are also among the new improvements; these are some sixty yards from the barns. Behind them the pine and mesquite-covered mountains form a most charming as well as a sheltering background. Around the base of these mountains Doctor Aby has had a large ditch made three feet deep and six feet wide, extending some 2000 feet up a ravine to a large, never-failing spring. There are some thirty-three springs of beautiful water on the place besides as pretty a lake as one would wish to see, covering about 200 acres. This lake is fed by the streams that traverse the farm from these never-failing springs, and is literally alive with large carp.

The soil of the valley, which includes the greater portion of the Guenoc Farm, is rich and fertile. All kinds of cereals grow to perfection; the crops of grasses, wild oats and clover that are harvested on the sloping hillsides are surprisingly large, while farther up, amid the pines and oaks, the madrones and manzanita trees, are little clearings on which some 250 head of fine Durham cattle thrive. The valley has been entirely cleared of underbrush since Dr. Aby's advent, and the yield of grain last year averaged some forty-five bushels to the acre. This year a greater acreage is being cultivated, and a large number of horses and plows are breaking virgin soil near the lake, which has heretofore been used as meadow or grass lands.

The new mile race track is a credit to the builder; it is a regulation course some thirty feet wide and shaded in places by majestic oak trees that seemed to have been set out to make this place the most beautiful of Nature's parks. Miles of new wooden fencing have replaced the barbed fence that surrounded the place; paddocks and graveled roads are newly made, and in every direction the evidences of progressive improvement are seen; yet there is much that is contemplated and will be finished in a few years. The view of the place from any point on the surrounding hills is one that never can be forgotten. The snow-capped peak of Cobb Mountain looks down upon the dark and light shadings of emerald hue of the hillside and valleys, the blue sky, the pictured rocks, the beautiful lake, the mountain streams, and withal the presence of the neat-looking cottage surrounded by locust trees, near the red-roofed barn and adjacent buildings just at the base of the mountain, complete the picture.

Crossing on the gravelled walk from the barn toward the place where the stallions were kept, we thought of an opinion expressed in the editorial room by a leading horseman and authority on all equine matters before we left the city, which was:

"I want to make a prediction, and that is this—that horse Greenback will be considered as the leading sire of racehorses in California, and that means the whole United States, before many years, if he gets any show. In England and France his sire, Dollar, is noted for the high class of racehorses he sires, and Greenback was from one of the best mares he was ever bred to." Of course, hearing this frank, unsolicited declaration from such a gentleman, made us more than anxious to see the horse, and when we visited the neat and well-fitted stallion barn, beneath the shade of the gigantic oak trees where we saw the horse, we were impressed with his individuality as much as we were with the recommendation we had heard of him. If appearances are any criterion, he certainly should become all that is prophesied.

Before leading him out we looked at St. Saviour and Owass and frankly confessed that these grand looking horses were perfect representatives of three distinct types of thoroughbreds; and it would be a difficult matter to see such a trinity on any other place in the United States. In color, style, carriage, conformation and action they were indeed kings among the "Children of the Winds."

Greenback is, barring Rayon d'Or, the most magnificent specimen of a thoroughbred ever imported. He is seventeen years old, a solid brown in color, with broad, flat legs, short back and great length; broad hips and heavy loins and every evidence of great constitution and animal vigor. About the head and neck he is much the type of Stockwell, but bodily he is much different, having much of the quality of the Leamingtons, only more substantial than they, inheriting this probably from his grandsire, The Flying Dutchman. Walked around the little exercising circle by Mr. Johnson, his groom, he is like an eel, as he moves about with a quick sinuous glide. He is a superbly-coated horse, and is similar in the color and texture of skin to our great Stamboul. In breeding, Greenback's blood is as high as his conformation. He is a son of the French sire, Dollar, who was by Flying Dutchman, out of Payment, by Slave; Dollar's dam was the dam of Florin, the sire of Florentin, winner of the French Derby in 1886, out of Mantilla, the champion French two-year-old of 1878. Dollar's merit as a sire is famous, as he got Salvator, St. Cyr, Peria, Almanza, Nethan, Fontainebleau, Salvanos, Torrent and Androcles. Salvator won the Grand Prix de Paris and the French Derby in 1875, and Salvanos won the Cæsarwitch in 1872. On the side of his dam Greenback is "also bred in the purple." His dam was the Duke of Hamilton's great mare Music, the best broodmare in Europe. She has foaled Ossian, Fiddler, Song, Songstress, Nina and Poetry. Nina and Ossian have achieved celebrity for being winners of important races. Music is by Stockwell, out of the invincible One Act, by Annandale by Touchstone. The third dam was Extravaganza by Voltaire, etc. This gives Greenback an infusion of Blacklock blood so highly prized in Europe. Greenback was a great racehorse, winning the Stetchford Stakes at Newmarket as a two-year-old and the Earl Spencer Plate at Northampton as a three-year-old; the Peel handicap, the Queen's Plate at Ayr; the Caledonia Cup at the same place also fell to his share. He has got several winners, having sired Greenlight, Greenjacket, Greenhawk, Greenwave, Greenhorn, etc. He is the only direct representative of Bay Middleton's male line in America, and will ere many years be known far and near through the performances of his progeny as one of the greatest sires, for both on his maternal and paternal sides he is bred in the speediest, stoutest and most fashionable families. His disposition is perfection, and as his progeny inherit his "level head" and good sense there can be no doubt of what they will do when called to the post and sent away to win laurels for their handsome sire's crown.

St. Saviour is a bright bay horse, foaled 1881, by Eolus (he by imp. Leamington), dam War Song, by War Dance, out of Eliza Davis, by imp. Knight of St. George; third dam Melrose, by Melbourne, etc. St. Saviour is full brother to the mighty Eole, a winner at all distances. But it is as an individual we would rather speak of him. He has been a sensational horse from the hour of his birth, as Mr. Gebhard, after seeing him, paid $12,000 for the then three-day-old colt. After a most brilliant career on the turf he retired with only one defeat, by that good horse Rataplan, to whom "The Saint" was conceding four pounds in the Emporium Stakes. In 1888 he was one of two horses saved from the fearful wreck at Shohola Glen, Pa., where the train was dashed down a precipice 186 feet while running at the rate of forty-five miles an hour. It seemed, however, that his star was in the ascendant, as he arrived late in February, 1889, at his present beautiful home, only in time to cover a few mares. Anyone who saw the lithograph of him in the Breeder and Sportsman of October 14, 1889, will remember this grand-looking thoroughbred stallion, but no one could realize into what a splendid and magnificently beautiful horse he has developed. He was but seven years old when he reached California. During his four years' stay in Lake County he has spread and filled out most wonderfully, being scant seventeen hands high, a bright bay with three white feet, star and snip on nose; as he walks out of his stall one involuntary lifts his hat to the lordly, high-crested and stately equine king. That he transmits his speed has been demonstrated in his two-year-olds; and that he will be a shining light in one of the most successful strains of thoroughbred blood ever brought to this country, more especially as he represents the direct male line of imp. Leamington through his best son is a certainty.

Owass is the peculiar name of one of the three stallions here. He is a bay in color and a horse of great beauty, style and conformation. He is unlike his two stable companions, Greenback and St. Saviour, and, although his light is somewhat dimmed by the brightness of these stars, yet he may some day be heard of as a sire of fast ones,should he ever have the opportunity. There are few better bred sires than he. Owass is brother in blood to the mighty Iroquois, Francesca and Harold, he being by Reform, a son of Leamington, out of Maggie B. B., the dam of these famous race horses, and they were by Leamington. Reform's dam was imp. Stolen Kisses, by the Knight of Kars, son of Nutwith, out of Defamation, by Iago. Defamation, his grandam, was the dam of Sacchramoter, winner of the Newmarket, the July stakes and Chesterfield Stakes, and was second to the great Macaroni for the 2,000 guineas. Reform was a great race horse, and won many hard-fought races in most excellent company. Maggie B. B., the dam of Owass, was one of the greatest broodmares in America. She has, through the performances of nearly all her produce, become famous. She was the dam of Lord Clive, Pera, Magnum Bonum, Jaconet, Harold, Iroquois (the great American winner of the English Derby, the St. Leger and the Prince of Wales Stakes, etc). Maggie B. B. was by imp. Australian, out of Madeline, by Boston; second dam Magnolia (dam of Kentucky), by imp. Glencoe, etc. As Owass is only eight years old and has had no chances yet as a sire, it would not be surprising if he should come to the front. He is a good individual in every respect, and is a credit to the person who selected him to cross on the Greenback and St. Saviour fillies, and, in fact, the get of any of the celebrated sires that have made California famous.

THE BROODMARES.

The broodmares in the large broodmare barn were looking very well; all of them were strong and healthy, and a more uniform lot of animals one would not see outside of the Blue Grass region. Whoever selected them must have used great judgment, for they all seem to be of the same model, except one, and she was inclined to be "leggy." To dilate upon the qualities of each would take up too much space, but a perusal of their pedigrees will prove conclusively that they are royally bred, and every one is a credit to her breeding:

Sardonyx, by Sir Bevys, out of Onyx, by Oxford, sire of Sterling, Isonomy's sire, second dam Tourmalin, by King Tom, third dam, Flash of Lightning, by Velocipede, fourth dam, Dido, by Whisker, is a fine bay mare; stinted to St. Saviour.

Half Sister is a bay in color, and is a half sister to Jim Gore, by Hindoo or Spendthrift, out of Katy, by Phaeton.

Lottie C., bay mare, by imp. Glenelg, out of Minx, dam of Monitor and Magnet, by Lexington; second dam, Mildred, by Glencoe; third dam, Levity, by imp. Trustee.

Glen Queen, chestnut mare, by imp. King Ban, out of Glenlva, by Glencoe Jr.; second dam, Maggie, by Lexington; stinted to St. Saviour.

Wahtawah, bay mare, by War Dance, out of Date Tree, by imp. Mickey Free; stinted to Greenback.

Proserpine, by Daniel Boone, own brother to Gilroy, by Lexington, out of Anna H., by Lee Paul; stinted to Greenback.

Leverett, a fine-looking chestnut mare by Lever, out of a daughter of Captain Beard; second dam by imp. Envoy; third dam by imp. Tramby; stinted to Greenback.

Another good-looking mare is called Negress. She is by Plebian, out of Feodorowna; second dam, Klarnet (dam of imp. Blairgowerie), and she was also sister to Klarnska the dam of Polonaise, etc.; third dam, Wiasma, by Hetman Platoff; fourth dam, Mickleton Maid, by Velocipede; fifth dam, Gibside Fairy, by Hermes, etc.; stinted to St. Saviour.

Diana, chestnut mare (sister to Bushwhacker), by imp. Glenelg, out of Annie Bush, by Lexington; second dam, Banner, by Albion; stinted to St. Saviour.

Bad Lassie, brown mare, by imp. King Ban, out of Elysian Lass, by Austerlitz; stinted to Greenback.

Pink, chestnut mare, by Turco, out of Moss Rose, by the Ill-Used; second dam, Scarlet, by Kentucky.

Una, brown mare, by Daniel Boone, out of a daughter of Beacon; second dam by Roger Hanson; stinted to Greenback.

Racemede, chestnut mare, by Hindoo, out of Calomel (Raceland's dam), by imp. Canwell; second dam, Dora, by imp. Australian; third dam, Lindora, by Lexington; stinted to Greenback.

Australian mare, Fleetwing, by Maribyrnong, out of Fleetwing, by Lord Lynn; second dam, Hebe, by Magsus, out of Lalla Rookh, etc., is a fine chestnut mare, purchased from an importer of Australian thoroughbreds.

Her Lilyship, gray mare, by Wildidle; out of Frolic, by Thunder (sister to Oriflamme); stinted to Greenback.

Mineral is the peculiar name of the good-looking thoroughbred that was saved from the railroad smashup in which Eole was killed. She is brown in color, and is by Spendthrift, out of Potash II, by Lord Clifden; second dam, Potash, by Voltigeur; third dam, Alkali, by Slane; fourth dam, Sea Kale, by Camel, etc.; stinted to St. Saviour. Mineral was reported killed in the Eastern papers and stud book. She is the dam of the fast filly Courant d'Air.

Elmina (imported), bay mare, by Old Calibar, out of Dynamite, by Lord Lyon, he by Stockwell, out of Paradigm, by Paragon, son of Touchstone; second dam of Elmina was Potomac, by Newminster; third dam, Tasmania, by Melbourne etc.; stinted to St. Saviour.

Miss Hooker, by Joe Hooker, out of Napa Queen (dam of Night Hawk); stinted to Greenback.

Glitter, by imp. Stylites, out of Gleam (full sister to dam of Dew Drop), by Hampton Court; second dam, Coimbra, by Kingston, etc.; stinted to St. Saviour.

Alice T., bay mare, by Young Haddington, out of Una, by Daniel Boone, by Lexington; stinted to St. Saviour.

Moonlight, bay mare, by Princeton, out of Simoon, by War Dance; stinted to Greenback. Moonlight is the dam of Dandy Dinmont, that the wealthy New York brewers, Rupert and Ehret, had the controversy over a few weeks ago.

Lillie D., chestnut mare with white foot and blaze, by imp. Kingfisher, out of Nina, by Kentucky. This mare is in foal to Greenback.

The two-year-olds received a terrible set-back about a year ago. Dr. Aby was in the East some five months, and on his return he found that they were all suffering from distemper in its worst form, and it was only by the most careful nursing and skill that they were saved. They did not begin to gain flesh and strength until lately. The following five will be sent East soon:

Guenoc, bay colt, Greenback—Wahtawah; Leonie, brown colt Greenback—Una; Golden Lily, black filly, Greenback—Her Lilyship; Lake County, chestnut filly, Greenback—Leverette; St. Peter, bay colt, St. Saviour—Glen Queen.

The yearlings are a very racy-looking lot of youngsters, and from their breeding and present healthy appearance, if nothing happens, will make a great string of speedy two-year-olds:

The bay colt Cinnabar, by St. Saviour, out of Mineral, is the first choice, and a perfect Leamington. Chestnut colt, St. Saviour—Glen Queen; bay colt, St. Saviour—Alice T.; chestnut filly, Greenback—Proserpine; bay filly, Greenback—Wahtawah; bay colt, Greenback—Miss Hooker; black colt, Greenback—Her Lilyship; bay filly, imp. Pirate of Penzance—Racemede; bay filly, imp. Kingston—Lottie C.; brown filly, Tom Martin—Half Sister. Tom Martin is by Longfellow, out of Athalarie, by Gilroy; and the last of the bunch, but not the least, is called Pronto, he is by Greenback, out of Leverette.

To the student of breeding there can be no better place to go to than to this farm, for here are gathered the choicest models in conformation, whose breeding will suit the most critical. The foundation for a great stock farm is laid, and now that the hardest part of such an undertaking has been overcome and all the young stock are being prepared for their appearance on the turf, the future looks indeed bright for the Guenoc Stock Farm and its able superintendent. To all who call at this beautiful place we bespeak a cordial welcome, and know that they will thereafter look upon that visit as a green spot in the meadow of their lives.

The Breeders' Purses, Stakes and Conditions Criticised.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—I trust my late fellow-directors in the P. C. T. H. B. A. will not object to a little well-meant criticism of the card they offer for the next fall meeting of the association. For my part, I believe newspaper criticism, if conducted in a fair spirit and gentlemanly way, will conduce to the benefit of the society. Our members are so widely spread that it seems impossible even to get a quorum at the annual meetings, and if the break I am now making will induce others also to make known their views through your columns, we shall all better understand each other, and the Board of Directors, who hold no sinecure, will be better able to learn and meet the views and desires of the association or a majority thereof.

The Stallion Produce Stakes are an innovation. They are offered for two and three-year-olds, and are to be trotted for at the coming fall meeting. To make colts eligible thereto on July 1st, their sires must have been entered on March 1st, the latter paying the price of one service in 1892 as entrance fee; one-half of this entrance to go to the two-year-old stakes; the other half to the three-year-old. Private stallions that have not been bred for pay, if with record of 2:30 or better, $100 entrance; others, $50 entrance; lowest entrance, $25; dead stallions at price of last season made.

Electioneer was a private stallion, I believe, for a good many years, if, indeed, it can be said that he ever did "make a season for pay." I understand some farms have paid $500 to $1,000 for his services, and one was refused them, although offering $2,500 per mare. Electioneer never got a record of 2:30. Now, where is he to come in? It's a long way from $25 to $1,000 (to say nothing of $2,500). But Electioneer has at least both two-year-old and three-year-old living colts.

Now, let me come nearer home. My stallion stands at $200, and that is the sum I should have to pay if I entered him, because he is neither a private nor a dead stallion, and the figure named is "the price of one service in 1892." One hundred of that sum will be added to the two-year-old stakes, and for those stakes my colts are eligible. The other hundred will be added to the three-year-old stakes, and to the latter my stallion's colts are also eligible if they exist. But they do not exist. Should I and others similarly situated then be asked to contribute to the added money of the latter stake without a chance to compete for any part of it? Is it to be taxation without representation with us also? On the other hand we cannot be expected to contribute the whole fee to one of the stakes, for we should have only one chance to even up against the others' double opportunities.

A similar objection may apply to dead stallions whose youngest living colts are now over two years old. But even supposing the obstacle I have designated did not exist, is it correct, is it fair to rate stallions according to their price of their service fees? Are not the fees generally rated by the circumstances, the necessities and the prejudices or beliefs of the owner, and by the locality in which the stallion stands? If an owner, for instance, have nearly sufficient mares of his own, will he stand his stallion at as low a figure as though he had none, and depend entirely on public patronage? Would Arion, owned by some poor devil residing in Siskiyou county, and whose bread and butter depended on that horse's services, command $2,500? On the other hand, don't most of us know a wealthy gentleman owning stallions and lots of mares, who will let his friends use his stallion's services, yet will not "take pay" for them? Should then the present owner of Arion be mulcted $2,500, whilst the latter, nearly as wealthy and with well-bred and possibly (?) just as good and fast stallions, can come in at $25?

If Mr. A. has the hardihood to pay or to hold a $50,000 stallion and charges a larger fee for his services, is it good policy to "bleed him" if he desires to prove that his horse gets as good or better colts than those sired by Mr. B.'s, that cost $1,000, and would not to-day sell for a cent over that sum? Is it good policy to discriminate against the man who is believed, or believes himself, to be buying of the best, and to favor the man who simply buys because he "can make the stallion's price in a season?"

The Champion Stakes' added moneys, I regret to acknowledge, are as liberal as the patronage of the trotting turf on this Coast will, or is likely to admit, whilst long-drawn-out heat races are persisted in; but the purses for the Encouragement (?) and Aspirant Trotting Colt Classes are so unutterably weak that it seems as though our Board were somewhat of the opinion that the offering of any purses at all for colts whose sires have not already proved themselves "producers" should be accompanied by an apology. The value of the purses hung up seemingly constituted a protest against the recognition of "non-producers."

With the inducement of only $5 risked until ten days before the meeting, purses for the classes named, if fairly liberal, should have induced a large, a very large number of entries; if they do not come in this instance, I shall attribute the lack of entries to the paucity of the prizes offered. I would suggest that the Board might yet be so liberal to the great majority of its members to offer as an extra inducement that to these purses there will be added all entrance moneys, if any, received in excess of sixty per cent. of the advertised value of the purse.

This being the opening of the stud season accounts, I presume, for the generous (?) acknowledgement made by the Board, that this State is pre-eminently a stud centre; five stallion purses and one stallion produce stake smells too rankly unto a desire to take advantage of the fears of stallion owners that if they do not enter in one or other of the purses offered they will handicap their stallions in the filling of their books. If large entries in numerous stallion purses and few or no starters in any be the object of the association, then we must acknowledge the move, whether intentional or not, a "right smart" one, but it looks—well, it looks very suspicious. A few of those stallion purses would keep until it was known how better to classify them.

Now, let me refer to the conditions and their wording. A good friend then, a good friend then and also now, but not then an officer of the association, accused a previous board of indulging in superfluous, unmeaning or misleading verbosity in its conditions.

If this friend was critical then, he can afford to be hypercritical now, as his name is attached to the advertisement (the conditions are a cairn of stumbling blocks):

1—"In all three in five races a horse not winning one heat in three shall be sent to the stable regardless of number of starters, but if eight or more start, no horse shall be sent to the stable if placed second in one of the first three heats.

A Philadelphia lawyer could scarcely unravel that.

2—In all races of mile heats, two in three, a horse not winning a heat in two shall be sent to the stable, but if eight or more start, no horse shall be sent to the stable which has been placed second in one of the first two heats.

Are the horses or the stalls expected to come up for the word? If the numbered stalls don't start, how is the stable which has been placed second to be known, so that no horse shall be sent to it?

3—"First payment, whether for purses payable in installments or for stakes, must accompany nominations,or they will not be considered.

Is it intended to pay the purses in instalments? Of course not. Does the instalments refer to payments on account of entrances or stakes? If so, is there not an omission of the words 'unless otherwise above provided?'

4—"If only three horses start in a stake race, only first, second and third money shall be paid." "No added money will be paid for a walk-over." "In case of a walk-over, only the money received from entries to said stake will be paid."

Lots of superfluous printer's ink; the rules provide as herein stated; still, these are trifles.

5—"In purse races, three horses will be required to start—the right is reserved to call two starters a 'walk-over.'"

A "walk-over" in a purse entitles the "walk-over horse" to his own entrance and one-half of the entrance money received from the other entries. How about two walking-over horses, and what and how is the money to be divided?

Respectfully yours, Wilfred Page.

Marysville's Fair.

The week preceding the State Fair has been seleceed as the time for holding the next District Fair in Marysville.

A meeting of the Directors of the Thirteenth District Agricultural Association was held in the private office of the Northern California Savings Bank last evening, and general plans were formed that should promise as a result one of the most successful fairs that the district has ever known.

An endeavor will be made to interest all classes in the undertaking. The best horses that can be secured will be entered on the racing programme; stockmen will be induced to make a showing that will be in every way creditable, and the display at the pavilion will not only be more diversified than formerly, but it will comprise the very best of everything that the district can produce. The arrangement of the exhibit will be somewhat different from what it has been in the past, and the directors confidently assert that it will be the most attractive ever held here.

Work is going ahead at the race track, and it may be said that it will be entirely remodeled. There will be a new grand stand and judges' stand, new stables, new sheds, new fences and many other comforts and conveniences that have been sorely needed.

At last night's meeting W. T. Ellis, Jr., was elected President of the Association, A. D. Cutts, Treasurer, and G. R. Eckart, Secretary. The election of a Vice-President was passed for the present, and the meeting adjourned to the call of the chair.—Marysville Appeal.

Garfield Park Stake Races.

Owners of thoroughbred horses should bear in mind that entries to the princely stakes offered by the Garfield Park Club of Chicago, Ill., close next Monday. This meeting begins on May 21st and ends June 24th. Entries in the Garfield Park Derby, Hesing Stakes and Grant Stakes for 1893 also close on February 15, 1892, and all communications should be addressed to Joseph Swigert, Secretary, 136 East Madison street, Chicago, Ill.

Among the rich stakes open until Monday next are the Garfield Park Derby, $20,000, of which $2,000 to second and $1,000 to third. Hesing Stakes, value $3,000; Jefferson Stakes, $1,500 added; Adams Handicap, $1,000 added; Washington Handicap, $1,500 added; Lincoln Handicap, $2,500 added; Martha Washington Stakes, value $3,000; Madison Stakes, value $3,000; Grant Stakes, value $1,000; Monroe Stakes, $1,000 added; Harrison Stakes, $1,000 added; Cleveland Stakes, $1,000 added; Van Buren Stakes, $1,000 added; Taylor Stakes, $1,000 added; Jackson Stakes, $1,000 added. If this is not rich enough for the most fastidious, it is only necessary to state that $714,000 in stakes and purses will be given out by this great organization. Letters containing entries, with postmark thereon as late as the hour of closing in Chicago, will be received, also telegrams describing entries and naming stakes, with letter following, will be accepted. Turfmen, do not forget to enter your horses at once in these events, the conditions of which will be found in another column of this paper.

Incompetent men in the stand is the cause of some annoyance to the owner of Roy Wilkes. The Express of Terre Haute seems perfectly willing to take the world of good horsemen who timed Roy at Evansville in 2:12½ as against the 2:10 announced by the Mayor of Evansville. We know nothing of the facts, but on general principles it is good policy to keep the Mayors et al. out of the stand unless they know their business.

Care and Management of Stallions.

As this is the period of the year called the stallion season among horsemen, it is of the utmost importance that every one who has a stallion should carefully read the following able article on this subject:

As this is not a paper upon the breaking and handling of colts, we will suppose you have a stallion broken to lead and drive, and that your purpose is to use him in the stud and on the track. Also, we will presume that the reader is somewhat familiar with the management of horses. Two things are absolutely necessary on the start, viz., a box stall and a paddock; but the details of these a little later. The first thing to learn about a horse is that he is half horse and half human. The first thing to learn about a stallion, is that, in addition to above, he is part tiger. There is an element of treachery, of bold wanton cruelty and murderous destructiveness, found in the stallion, that obtains but slightly, if at all, in the average mare or gelding. It is no argument against the above declaration, that some stallions never seem to display much, if any, of the tigerish disposition. My own observation, and the testimony of many men who have had an extended experience with stallions, has convinced me that all stallions have these characteristics a little, and some have an abundance of them. It is, therefore, highly essential that, in undertaking the care and management of a stallion, this knowledge should be in the possession of the groom. Never relax your watchfulness when about a stallion; treat him with the utmost kindness and consideration, but maintain a firmness quite unmistakable, and conduct yourself, always, in such a manner that he shall have the most unlimited confidence in you, and at the same time a wholesome respect for your powers and personality. Never play with a stallion in the least, for it brings you down on a level with him, in his estimation; the familiarity will breed contempt, and you will lose part of your influence and control over him.

THE BOX STALL.

Have your box stalls sixteen feet square, with one door four feet wide and eight feet high; made of double layers of flooring thoroughly riveted and hung on at least three strong hinges. Let there be one window, a single sash containing four 12x14 lights of glass. Set the window in the same side wall as the door, so that there shall be no draught of chill air to cause stiffness and congestions. Elevate the window just high enough so that the horse will have to stand gracefully high-headed to look out of it. This will develop the muscles used in holding the head up, and aid in giving him that nice up-headed carriage of the head and neck which is so desirable in the stallion.

It is the attention to little things which make great successes, so when you open the door to go in or out of the box stall always lock it, either open or shut. If your horse is inside and the door is ajar he may make a break for liberty and be half frightened to death before he gets through the door, or he may put his head out and the door swing shut and he break his neck struggling for freedom. If he is out in the paddock and the door is not locked, open or shut, he may be ruined by trying to go through a door which suddenly clutches him amidships. Round off the corners of the door jambs inside and out, it may save your horse from being hipped.

Don't let there be any perceptible stepdown from the floor of the stall into the paddock, and vice versa.

Have a cross-bar fitted snugly against the bottom of the door outside, and always put it in place at night so that the horse can not, by a slip, get his foot under the door and thus be ruined. If you put a plank floor, take a 2x4 scantling the length of the stall and nail down parallel with the side wall and about three feet therefrom, and fill the inclosure thus made with clean white sand to the depth of two inches; in the summer months wet this down daily with salt water, and you will prevent thrush and promote a healthy growth of hoof much like that resulting from a run in a soft pasture. The horse will soon learn to go there and stand. This serves for a cushion to prevent injurious results to the feet from constant and hard stamping.

To prevent tail rubbing, hock pounding, and to keep your horse from being hopelessly cast, run an inclined plane side wall all around the bottom of the stall, except at the door. Let it start at the bottom eighteen inches in from the side wall and bevel off to meet said wall wherever two 2x14 inch plank will carry it to at the top; brace it up by scantling five feet apart.

If you use a dirt floor, which is not necessary if one uses the moist sand attachment mentioned above, build up a wainscoting to reach eight inches below the croup and let it stand out at least six inches from the side wall. This will prevent tail rubbing but not hock pounding, nor will it prevent bad results from the horse being cast.

The feed box should be broad and flat so that the food may be spread thinly over it to prevent the ill conditions sure to result in the horse from too hasty eating.

THE PADDOCK.

The paddock should not be large, for a large paddock gives room for an amount of running and jumping that is apt to produce such injuries as dislocated stifle, slipping of the stifle cap (Patella), hock puffs, bog spavin, and many others; 50x100 feet is abundantly large, and 40x60 feet will many times be a better size. The fence should be seven feet high, at least, and if the stallion is inclined to break out it must be higher. It should be a tight board fence reaching quite down to the ground, to prevent the animal's feet from slipping under it, and should be nailed from within against stringers and posts that are without, for a horse will sometimes climb upon the stringers to look over the fence and remain there a long time to the injury of tendons and general conformation.

FOOD.

Feed a stallion according to his form, appetite and condition. Oats and bran are the principal grains to be fed; corn and barley are sometimes fed, but are not desirable as a steady diet. Plain timothy and marsh or prairie hay, fed on the ground or floor, is the best thing in that line; while cornstalks, grass, potatoes, carrots, sweet turnips, and apples are all admissible in small quantities for the purpose of pleasing the appetite and loosening the bowels. Feed salt every day. The process of feeding in detail is something that is highly important and which requires the greatest degree of skill and watchfulness.

To no other part of our general subject can the old proverb, "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," be so truthfully and aptly applied. Study your stallion's droppings every day. Note whether they are frequent enough, whether too dry, or too wet, whether the food is perfectly digested as well as perfectly masticated, and whether they contain worms. If you find them too dry or too infrequently voided, you must correct it by giving less grain and more bran, bran mashes, roots, carrots, potatoes, turnips, apples or grass, and if his exercise has been too little increase it. If the bowels are too loose feed less hay, less feed of all kinds, and mix half a pint or a pint of wheat flour, which has been scorched to a coffee brown, in each feed of oats for a day or two; very little drugging is necessary at any stage of a horse's existence. If you find that the food comes through the horse imperfectly masticated and undigested, look at the animal's teeth and if wrong, have them fixed. A tooth may be loose, decayed, split, inflamed, too long, too sharp or what not. It is also important to know that the teeth are shed in season. The horse may bolt his food, and thus produce indigestion and its attendant results. A flat feed box, so broad that the food does not cover it to a greater depth than one-half or three-quarters of an inch, is a very good form of a box to prevent bolting of the food; another is to put four or five cobble stones as large as an orange into the common-sized feed box, and still another, a device of my own, is made as follows: A square, flat-bottomed feed box, any size you like; a false bottom made of wire with the meshes about an inch and a half in diameter; put in your feed and drop down your wire bottom on top of the feed; press it down to start the feed through the meshes, and the horse will do the rest. Patent boxes with the "feed" regulated, are in market and are very good.

A horse should be watered either half an hour before meals or two hours after, and during hot weather should have half a pailful midway between meals.

DISEASES.

If his urine becomes thick, and the remedy hereafter given for worms does not corrrect it, give a teaspoonful of nitrate of potash in his drinking water morning and night for two or three days. If his water is scant or bloody, or if the act of urinating is painful, he must have ten drops of tincture of cantharides in his drinking water three times a day for three days. If the trouble results from a cold give also ten drops of the tincture of aconite in the same way, in addition to the above.

The most common disorders which come to a stallion are, first; Colic, which is most always a result of indigestion. The REMEDY PAR EXCELLENCE is: Fluid extract of nux vomica; fluid extract of colocynthis; Fowler's solution of arsenic; of each one ounce; mix. Dose: Ten or fifteen drops in a couple of ounces of HOT WATER every fifteen minutes, for three to six doses. Relief will follow in a short time almost certainly. Continue the medicine, one dose after each meal, for three or four days. Injections of hot water, hot as the hand can bear it, and hot applications to the bowels are useful adjuncts in colic. Do not let a horse feed at all for several hours after a spell of indigestion.

The remedy given above is one of the best in the world to prevent and cure (when curable) heaves.

Next in frequency and importance comes worms, and the affections resulting from their presence in the ailmentary tract. They are successfully treated by feeding, two or three times a day in the feed, two teaspoonfuls of the following: Powdered areca nut, one pound; powdered copperas, one pound; tartar emetic, three ounces; mix.

For the removal of pin worms make an infusion of Quassia chips, two ounces to a quart of boiling water; simmer for half hour and cool. Inject half a pint or a pint every morning into the rectum. While the worm powder is being fed (and it should be fed thirty to sixty days), a physic should follow a good bran mash about once in ten days: One ounce of good barbadoes aloes in powder, with one drachm of ginger in a ball, is a good physic. The above treatment is a good one for blood disorders, and surfeit, too, only that, in the latter case, less feed and more exercise must obtain, and thirty drops of Fowler's solution of arsenic must be given in his drinking water three times a day for three weeks in addition.

Thrush in the fect is a very common and annoying disease in stallions in stud service. The remedy is to prevent it by constant cleanliness and watchfulness. If any sign of thrush appear, pour into the spaces and cleft of the frog once a day, a spoonful or two of a six per cent. solution of chloride of zinc. This will cure it, if properly done; as the foot improves use the solution less frequently.

If a horse rubs his tail or mane, he is surfeited, has worms, or is lousey. The remedy for the first two is given above, for the latter, apply once a day to the affected surface a mixture of kerosene oil and lard, one teaspoonful of the oil to each ounce of lard.

Influenza, distemper and strangles are, practically speaking, members of the same family, and require pretty much the same treatment. I have had splendid success from the following treatment: At the onset of the disease give ten drops of the tincture of aconite in a little water every two hours, for two days. Then follow with ten drop doses of the following: Iodide of arsenic, two drachms; fluid extract of bryonia alba, two drachms; alcohol, four ounces; mix. A dose of ten to twenty drops in a little water every two or three hours, for several days, will surely modify most cases and will abort and cure many times. At such times one of the first things is to open up the bowels with bran mashes and a dose of an ounce of pulverized aloes, to which a drachm of ginger has been added, is just the thing.

If the stallion shows signs of becoming impotent, see to it that he does not masturbate, give him plenty of work, attend to his blood, teeth, and general condition, and give the following mixture: Fluid extract nux vomica, twenty drops; fluid extract damiana, two drachms; Merrill's tincture of phosphorous, ten drops, Give this amount in an ounce or two of water, at one dose, three times a day, for two or three months. If not very bad he can have a mare a week; if quite bad, none at all for the season, and only one or two a week the next season.

EXERCISE.

A stallion kept for stud purposes should have regular road work every day. Let him be hardened gradually and then give him from ten to fourteen miles a day, over road or track, or both. Drive him on a walk the first mile out of the barn, then jog and walk alternately the balance of the route; give him no hard speeding, but a little brush, two-thirds his speed rate, is allowable. Let him sweat a little coming home. After his exercise see to it that he is protected from draughts of cold air, and give no grain for an hour and a half. He may have three or four swallows of water as he comes into the barn, but no more until half an hour before feeding.

GROOMING.

An old dull curry comb, a root brush, and a bristle brush, followed by a flannel cloth, are the things to use in cleaning and polishing his coat; use them in the order in which they are mentioned, and use them liberally every day.

SERVING MARES.

In serving a mare, having her securely hoppled, lead the stallion up towards her flank, with his hind quarters a little nearer her nead than her tail. When he is ready let him approach her flank, when he will whirl and mount all right. The mare's tail must be bandaged well, for the hairs might easily ruin a stallion's yard by cutting if allowed to be crowded in ahead of the same.

Stallions often come off "proud," that is to say, they do not eject their seed. In such cases see to it that he does not masturbate, and give him more exercise and less feed.

It is easy to detect the passage of the seed during the act by putting the fore finger against the under side of the yard; if a cover has been properly made the impulse throb will be plainly felt This is a certain and easy test.

If a stallion comes off "proud," lead him away and let him walk around for ten or fifteen minutes and try again.

In teasing a mare compel your stallion to keep within the limits between her hips and shoulders, his nose has no business in front of the shoulders nor behind her coupling. After the horse has covered the mare and is about to dismount, a good groom in charge of the mare will quickly turn the mare a step or two toward the left (toward the stallion groom); this facilitates the dismounting very much.

AMOUNT OF DAILY SERVICE.

No stallion of two years of age should serve more than one mare per week, and ten mares during the season. A stallion of three years may have twenty mares, well scattered, through a three-months' season. A four-year-old may serve forty mares, but should not cover but one mare a day. An aged stallion can take care of a mare every day during a three-months' season, and under pressure may make two covers a day occasionally, but the less of double daily-covers the better.

If a stallion masturbates he must have a shield on night and day. A good root brush fastened to a surcingle and buckled loosely about the loins makes a cheap and satisfactory shield. There are, however, many shields in the market. I like the all-rubber ones best.

Be very regular and methodical in all your dealings with the stallion. Do not jerk, swear at, or excite him.

If you whip at all, do it without anger or loud voice; do it to teach him, not to punish. When you lead him through a gate or door, precede him, otherwise he will soon learn to go in or through with a rush.

Treat your stallion like your younger brother; set him a good example and you'll find him pretty nearly as good a Christian as most people are.—C. M. BABCOCK, M. D., in Clark's Horse Review.

Tangential Records.

"McGinty," in the last issue of the Kentucky Stock Farm, pours melted lead down the backs of the scoffers at the thoroughbred-blood-in-the-trotter idea when he says:

The kind of breeding which has produced the only trotting horses with records better than 2:09 is called by Iconoclast "tangential breeding." It matters nothing what any man calls the kind of breeding which produced Sunol, Maud S. and Palo Alto, the fact remains that they have the best records—ARE ON TOP—and the trotting-bred trotter for the present must be content to "play second fiddle." The tangential records are held by the representatives of "tangential breeding," which is eminently proper.

I don't mean to say that no trotting-bred horse will ever beat 2:09, but I do mean to say they have had plenty of time, and the fact that none have yet done so is conclusive proof that there is "a screw loose somewhere." Outnumbering, as they do, the "tangential-bred" record holders more than ten thousand to one, isn't it rather strange that the astute breeder has not discovered the two short words, PLUG BLOOD, which completely and satisfactorily "accounts for the milk (or the absence of milk) in the cocoanut?" If like effects produce like causes, or, in other words, if "like produces like," it needs no argument to prove that the same kind of breeding which produced the record-holders will produce others just as good, or better. This is a fact plain as daylight, and no man can controvert it; it is what Mr. S. Weller called a "self-evident proposition."

Taking into account the great disproportion in the number of trotting-bred mares and mares of half or more thoroughbred blood, it can be safely asserted that the production of such horses as Palo Alto, Sunol and Maud S. is the rule, the production of such as Allerton and Nelson the exception. Allerton is plainly an accident, a sport, a freak; for, in point of speed, he is not the likeness of either sire or dam, nor of any ancestor, near or remote.

Iconoclast attempts to prove that the trotter is a stouter and gamer horse than the thoroughbred, because no thoroughbred has ever done, even at the running gait, what Gen. Taylor, Black Jake, and Conqueror did at trotting. Well, if he has proved anything at all, he has also proved that Gen. Taylor was a better horse than Arion; Black Jake a greater than Nelson, and Conqueror much superior to Nancy Hanks. In short, he has proved too much, viz., that the three prehistoric plugs he mentions were the brightest stars in the trotting firmament, and that no other trotter ever foaled could hold a candle to them. It seems as if Iconoclast is hankering after a return to the methods of breeding in vogue in "our grandfathers' days." Just think what a sensation the wonderful flight of speed shown by Conqueror in his great feat would create in our time, if exhibited a mile in something over five minutes—think of it, ye instinct theorists, and weep! The kind of argument Iconoclast uses might perhaps be called an alleged argument, and might have great influence over a small boy whose reasoning powers were as yet undeveloped, but can have no weight with the average student of the breeding problem. Why, the very fact that the three greatest trotters, by the records, ever foaled have from twenty-five to fifty per cent. of thorough blood conclusively proves that the thoroughbred is a stouter and gamer animal than the trotter, and no other argument is needed; the records are argument enough for the present.

Iconoclast kindly offers to find twenty trotters having the blood of Diomed that can't beat 2:30 for every one having this blood that can beat 2:20. This is a very kind offer, but I will go him a few better. For every horse of "tangential breeding" that has beaten 2:09, I can find him ten thousand trotting-bred ones that can't beat 2:20 to save their lives.

Granting that Allerton might sell for more money than Palo Alto and command a greater patronage in the stud, as the little boy said, "that don't spell anything;" for Pancoast sold for more than Nutwood, but that did not make him a better sire. The man who, knowing of the success of Anteeo in the stud and of Alma Mater as a great broodmare, will yet try to prove in advance that Palo Alto must of necessity prove a failure as a sire, is simply trying to prove that like will not produce like. That is exactly what he is trying to prove, and nothing else. The fact is, there are thousands of trotting-bred mares in the country—lunk-headed, loose-jointed, cold-blooded, lazy brutes—that never have produced a respectable trotter, and never will unless bred to Palo Alto or some horse of similar breeding. The talk about "introducing alien blood" is the veriest bosh that ever was used in sober argument. The American trotter owes such merit as he has to the thoroughbred, and to no other horse on this earth. If some plug blood is good in a trotter, more would be better still. It is indeed a "poor rule that won't work both ways." It has never yet been proved, however, that some plug blood was a good thing for a trotting horse, and I don't think Iconoclast will ever succeed in proving it.

It is said that Manette, the dam of Arion, would run and wouldn't trot, and that she could run like a "whitehead." Now, here is a fair issue. Was it her "wonderful instinct" or "running foolishness" that made Arion the great colt he really is? Can it be that Manette was a reversion to Sally Russell, and thus was enabled to transmit more nerve force to Arion than her breeding would seem to warrant? Well, "to a man up a tree" it most decidedly "looks that way," and unless Manette's trotting sister should produce something that can touch Arion with a "forty-foot pole" this will probably become the accepted view of the case. "Like produces like is no theory." True for you, Iconoclast. But that is only half a truth; it should be, "like produces like or the likeness of SOME ancestor." Here we have two incontrovertible but opposing laws of nature, one not more certain in its operations than the other. For example, if you breed a plug mare to a plug horse, the colt, though it may not resemble either parent, is certain to be a plug. So, too, with thoroughbreds; the colt, while perhaps not resembling either parent, will still be thoroughbred, and most probably the likeness of some ancestor. If a trotting-bred mare, with many plug ancestors close up is bred to a trotting horse in the same fix as to pedigree, it is quite as likely the colt will be the likeness of some plug ancestor as not.

Iconoclast, my friend, if you can controvert this view of the breeding theory, I should be happy to have you do so. The writer is not too proud or too old to learn from others. I believe a properly shaped, thoroughly well-bred horse can trot a mile in 2:10 easier than a plug can trot a mile in 2:40, and that when the breeders breed out the plug blood, the curse and detriment of the American trotter, we shall have hundreds of horses able to trot heats in 2:10 or better. MCGINTY.

About Scoring Horses.

After the disposal of the Cynthiana consignment of the Kellogg sale was over a representative of The Spirit came across the veteran W. H. Wilson, and interviewed him on the result of the sale and his ideas with regard to the coming congress. "Well," said Mr. Wilson, "I must say I thought the average would have been a little higher, but on the whole I am perfectly satisfied. It did a great deal of good bringing Sultan here. He made a host of friends and I booked several mares to him, which I take back with me to Kentucky. Sultan has a grand list of mares booked to him already and his book will soon be filled.

Talking of the approaching congress, I don't think they need alter the rules much. What the congress wants to do is to impress upon members the necessity of living up to the rules and of putting men in the judges' stand who understand the rules and will administer them firmly and promptly. That reminds me that before the National Association was formed I wrote a letter, signed "Kentuckian," which was published in The Spirit about the beginning of January, 1870, in which I suggested a rule to regulate scoring and also the desirability of defined rules with regard to breaking. The letter will be found in The Spirit of January 1, 1870, and as it is as pertinent to-day as it was then, we reprint it. Unlimited scoring is the great drawback of trotting sport, while the penalties for breaking are still an indefinite quantity, sometimes too severe and sometimes none at all. The letter is as follows:

DEAR SPIRIT: Having noticed in different numbers of your valuable paper many articles and suggestions by parties to the coming Trotting Convention, and more especially those of "Larkin" in that of December 11th, and that of "Western New York," of December 4th, I would say that I think their points are well taken. "Larkin's," in particular, are such that no trotting horse man who intends to trot his horse on his merits alone can reasonably complain of. But there is a point to which I wish to draw the attention of the coming Trotting Convention not mentioned by any person, nor is it in our present rules.

I think there is nothing so annoying to a crowd of people as to see the drivers score their horses, each trying to get the advantage of the start in the race, and especially if the green one is in the race, he is generally worried nearly to death by the time a start is effected, which renders him unfit for anything. While so excited the horse is sometimes distanced, no matter if he may have been much faster than his opponents.

I think nearly every trotting horseman in America has, in his life, seen instances where trotters—and good ones, too—that could out-trot their opponents from one to three seconds, lost the race because in our present rules the judges have no other alternative but to bring them to a standing start, when an even start cannot be effected any other way—that being what those old and cunning drivers generally resort to when they cannot out-trot an excitable and slow-scoring horse on the square. Then they laugh as they see the red flag drop in his face and say among themselves: "We got in our work at last."

The colt is probably not a swift-scoring horse, but very able to contest well in the race which he is entered. His owner has paid his entrance and has a right to an equal start. After several attempts to get off, the judges see that the colt is always behind, and cannot get under headway so quick as the other horses, and they wish to deal honestly. They finally send him off, perhaps a few lengths in the rear, feeling that it was about the best could be done. The colt acts badly after being so excited, and trying to come really faster than he ought to be sent away, and not trotting quite level, just saves his distance by closing up a tremendous gap at the end of the heat. The other drivers see that he can easily foot faster than any horse in the race. It is plain that they must beat him in the start if at all. When they go to work to get off for the second heat the judges see that it is worse than before, and are forced to bring them to a standing start. In this heat the colt is so excited and gets so far behind that it is beyond his power, with all his superior speed, to get inside the flag, and he is distanced. The association gets the blame from the class of people who do not understand the rules of trotting, and sympathy naturally being with the colt, they declare that it was not managed honestly. The owner goes home and says he was swindled out of the race—that his horse could out-trot the party, and the judges were not dealing in good faith with him. He thinks that he is telling the truth, and sometimes goes so far as to cause the same to be put in print, and may state that the judges had money in the pool-box on the winning horse.

Now, Mr. Editor, I suggest the following for a rule to cover such cases, and hope it may meet with your views, also the views of the coming Trotting Convention:

"When the judges are satisfied that any horse cannot trot up to the score as fast as his opponents it shall be their duty to notify each of the other drivers of the facts, and said drivers shall go back and turn with said horse, and keep their horses to his pace, and shall not reach the score in advance of said horse, under penalty of being ruled off; and in such case another driver shall be substituted, unless the offending party is the controller or owner of said horse, in which case the horse shall also be ruled off."

There is another point to which I would call the attention of the coming convention, but do not feel myself competent to suggest a rule, as it is a fine point, viz., that of horses skipping and running. Although it may not be discernible that said horse has gained thereby, all men familiar with trotting must know that it rests them and gives them a decided advantage over the honest trotter.—"KENTUCKY," in New York Spirit of the Times.

They Talk For Themselves

And do it well. In fact this is only one of the many letters we are receiving every day from every part of the United States.

TURF AND TRACK.

What about that proposed race track at Baden? Is it ever to be built?

Before purchasing a horse examine his feet and legs carefully. They are the parts that bear the strain.

Yo Tambien, whose feet are not of the best, pulled up quite lame at West Side Park, Nashville, Tenn., last week.

Horses for light driving receive entirely too much care in this country. They are kept too fine and "babied" too much.

Many horses like the company of their stable companions; others rest better when in retirement, and quiet should be given them.

Longfellow never got a chestnut or sorrel colt in all his long career in the stud, and Ten Broeck never produced but one chestnut.

Stephen Treffry, of Sacramento, has a four-year-old Dexter Prince that he bought from Willard Gardner that has shown a 2:20 gait.

Drivers should know that the region over the kidneys should be kept cool rather than warm. Don't put a double-ply blanket over the kidneys.

Chesapeake (full brother to Potomac), for whom $14,000 were refused last year, is reported as being ruined by a recent accident at Sheepshead Bay.

Robert Brown, of Petaluma, sold this week a six-year-old Fallis mare to J. McCoy. Time and again the mare has shown a 2:30 gait in the road.

John A. Cody has in Winwood one of the purest-gaited young stallions in the State. He will trot him in all the fall races and give him a low record.

Morea, 2:24½, bay mare by Electioneer, dam Maria Pilot, has been sold by John Madden, of Lexington, Ky., to George Ketcham, of Toledo, O., for $4,000.

The epidemic that played sad havoc with the mares, colts and fillies at the Hobart Stock Farm has about subsided, and all of the invalids are convalescing.

Thomas L. Sellers, Lexington Ky., has sold his one-quarter interest in the stallion, imp. Deceiver, to the Edgewater Stud, Cynthiana, Ky., for $4,500.

Cy. Mulkey is now in Washoe, Nev., with the Winters string, and will train the Nevada horses and his old favorite, Tim Murphy, during the racing season.

Reed & Lynch have purchased from E. Leonard the bay colt Sir Rae, foaled 1888, by Alta, dam Constellation by St. George, her dam, Planette, by Planet, etc.

A visiting horseman from Oregon was over at the Talbot Stock Farm last week, and is enthusiastic over Mount Hood and the youngsters by this splendid stallion there.

More than a dozen of the mares booked to Direct this season are dams of 2:30 performers, so that the little black fellow will have a big chance to show what stuff he is made of.

A misunderstanding in regard to Allerton's service fee may result in Lady Pepper (dam of Clorine, 3, 2:23¼, and Gamaleon, 3, 2:25¼), being bred to Director, 2:17, this year.

Charles Chase and John Boggs were re-elected members of the State Board of Agriculture, but H. M. La Rue, whose term expired, has been succeeded by E. Dennison, of Oakland.

The English and European Governments will not buy a horse for cavalry purposes which has been docked, and officers are not allowed to ride them on parade, even if they be private property.

Prof. E. P. Heald's beautiful Sidney colt out of the dam of Direct, fell down while playing in the paddock in Napa Valley last week, and when found it was ascertained that he was hipped.

R. E. Bybee will train the coming season Broadchurch, six years; Misty Morn, four years; Tacoma, Patricia and Kohinoor, three years; Wyanashott and Rosebud, two years; also several yearlings.

Thomas H. Tongue, of Hillsdale, Or., has engaged Lou Childs to train and drive for him this year, beginning February 10th. Mr. Childs gave both Almont Medium and Mark Medium their records.

The talk around the stove in Tennessee this winter has drifted into a match race to wagon between the grey Guy 2:11¾ and Roy Wilkes. The wager is $1,000 on Guy to $700 on the Chicago horse.

A pony (12 hands 2 inches) was recently matched in England to trot fifteen miles in an hour. The little fellow won with eighteen seconds to spare, and without making one break in the whole journey.

The young broodmare Linda Wilkes, by Guy Wilkes, dam Atlanta, sister to Beautiful Bells, by The Moor, died last Monday at Abdallah Park, the home of her owner, W. H. Wilson. She was valued at $10,000.

Never start a horse with a whip. The horse is as susceptible to kind words and kind treatment as any animal. A good and careful driver will never start a horse with a whip. Teach him to start with the word.

A large number of horsemen are seen daily at the Bay District track looking at the various stallions and trotters there. Lee Shaner's string seems to have had quite a magnetic influence upon the visitors.

Fred Loeber has a filly by Grandissimo, out of a Whippleton mare, that will prove a "cracker-jack" in the races whenever she is named. She is a good one, and will trot fast unless some accident befalls her.

Seventy horses are wintering at Lodi, Cal. The track there has been extremely good and safe for this season of the year. Dan McCarty shipped Dexter Prince and eight broodmares from Lodi to Pleasanton last Monday.

M. J. Streining, of Santa Rosa, has purchased of Pierce Bros., same place, the fine four-year-old mare Rose Bay, by Bay Rose, 2:20½, dam by Norfolk, second dam by Algona, sire of Addie E., 2:22½.

Dr. McCallum, the well-known Sacramento veterinarian, has changed the gait of his fast mare by Killarney, 2:20½, from pacing to trotting. At the former she had gone trial miles in 2:20, and last week trotted under 2:40.

All the horses at Sacramento are in perfect health. None are effected either with coughs or colds, nor have they been all winter. In fact, the Capital City has the most perfect climate for horse and man to be found anywhere.

Cockrill & Dwain, of Salinas, rcently sold to H. Nathan, agent for Euseblio Boronda, the black trotting stallion Alta, 6 years old, by Altoona 8,350, dam Clarissa by General McClellan. The horse will go to Central America.

Jim R., the speedy son of Connor, raised in Lake County, Oregon, was not sold to Mr. Leihy, of Chicago, after all, for $4,000. The horse is now owned by B. F. Sprague, of Lodi, Cal., who purchased him of Russell Bros., of Oregon.

George Crippen, of Rohnerville, Cal., has purchased a colt by Wayland W. The get of the last-named horse is highly-prized in Humboldt and adjoining counties, and gentlemen possessing youngsters by him are all as happy as clams at high tide.

The topic of conversation among horsemen at present is the Palo Alto sale of mares, which takes place on February 24th, as per advertisement. Some of the these are grand individuals, and stinted to splendid sons of the dead hero of Palo Alto.

A horse and colt show is on the tapis, and as soon as the weather clears up the local horsemen will exhibit their colts, fillies and stallions over at Agricultural park, Petaluma. Several colt races will be arranged to show off the speed of the youngsters.

English Auctioneer.—"With my 'ammer in my 'and, this 'ere 'oss is put hup for sale and without hany guarantee. With your heyes hopen you buy 'im. I am bid two quid for a twenty-quid 'oss. Three quid is it? 'Is 'ide and bones are worth that."

It has been frequently stated in reply to inquiries that a horse can acquire a record, if the conditions and requirements of the National rules are observed, on any track, no matter what shape it is. Time made on a kite-shape track is a record if the rules are observed.

Fewer animals and better quality seems to be the motto of the day among breeders. It is a good motto too. It is better to make sacrifices in selling than to hold on to animals year after year that will never appreciate in value; better sell out and start again.

The San Martine ranch of 3,000 acres, between San Jose and Gilroy, belonging to D. M. Murphy, was sold on the 2nd inst. to C. H. Phillips, for $400,000. It is understood that he represents an English syndicate, and the property is to be divided into small tracts.

William & Morehouse, of Silver Bow Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal., have purchased of W. H. Raymond, Belmont Park, Montana, the gray filly Nicondra, by Doncaster, dam Isola, by Tempest, and the bay filly Nantura, by Doncaster, dam Heroine, by Tempest.

Do not forget to read the advertisement of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association. and make your entries accordingly. From present indications the probabilities are that this will be the most successful meeting ever held by this live and progressive organization.

As will be seen by advertisement in our columns, the services of the great stallion Balkan, 2:15, are now offered to owners of approved mares at $100, which, considering Balkan's ability as a race horse, his splendid breeding and individuality, is an extremly low figure.

Some men are said to be born with an eye for a horse, some to have an instinctive idea of shape, but this is an exception, and, as a rule, study is necessary to all in order to acquire sufficient judgment to be relied on. Experience is often bought by loss and disappointment.

The race horse Annie Rooney was gored by a bull on Sunday afternoon and died from the effects of the wound. The mare was by a Nick of the Woods colt and belonged to J. F. Benoit. She was a very fast runner, and gave great promise for the future.—Grass Valley Telegraph.

The Trotting Register Association has issued a circular to the stockholders of the association asking their opinion of the rule which admits pacers to standard registry as trotters on a basis of a pacing record of 2:25 or better, and also asking whether the rule should be retained or not.

Lee Shaner, the well-known horseman, while exercising a young horse one day last week, was accidentally kicked in the leg. It was lucky that he was not far enough away to receive the full force of the blow, for instead of a severe cut the probabilities are that the limb would have been fractured.

Doncaster, who died recently at Wein, was by Stockwell, and won the English Derby in 1873. He was the sire of Ben d'Or and the grandsire of Ormonde. Doncaster was bought by the Duke of Westminster for $50,000 and afterwards passed to the Hungarian government for a much smaller sum.

Michael Denzer, of Davisville, has brought suit in the Superior Court at Sacramento against the Directors of the State Agricultural Society for $50,000 damages. He was injured by the collapse of some seats during the last Fair, and claims to have been permanently crippled about the legs and back.

Arion was accompanied to his Eastern home by a royally-bred filly named Rachael, which Mr. Forbes bought of Mr. Ariel Lathrop, of San Francisco, on his recent trip to see what kind of a horse he was getting in Arion. She is a brown filly, by Electricity, dam Eva W., 2:25½, by Nutwood, etc.

James Hayes, of Harbin Springs, Lake County, has a brown colt by the thoroughbred Greenback, out of a Milton Medium mare, that will make it very interesting for the 2:30 performers at the Lake and Mendocino County fairs this fall. Mr. Hayes may rely upon this fellow if ever the heats are split.

Charles H. Gilman, of Sacramento, has purchased an exceedingly promising colt by Antevolo. It is claimed that $1,800 was the consideration, and that the horse will get into the 2:30 list early this season. C. F. Taylor will take the horse to Glenbrook, Nevada county, where he will be kept until fall.

Joseph Cairn Simpson has sold to W. O'B. MacDonough, of this city, the royally-bred young thoroughbred matron, Santa Cruz, by Double Cross (sire of Guido), dam Eliza, by Norfolk; second dam, Mary Wade, by Woodburn; third dam, Viola, by imp. Knight of St. Georges, etc. Mr. MacDonough is getting together a choice lot of mares for his Menlo Stock Farm, surely.

An Eastern turfman says that the get of no other son of Electioneer is establishing itself more firmly in the estimation of horse-breeders and trainers than that of Eros. Whoever purchased colts and fillies by this sire consider that they have bargains, and are anxious for the fall campaign to open to see them enter the races.

Major A. P. Waugh has been appointed a member of the Board of Agriculture, vice W. M. Kent, term expired. Everyone will be pleased to hear of his appointment, for in all that pertains to the turf no better-posted man in this State is to be found than our friend "Grim," who was formerly editor of the Breeder and Sportsman.

Nomenclature is, perhaps, the least considered of turf matters, one name, in the minds of some, serving as well as another; and perhaps any name is better than none. But a breeder or owner is always more satisfied if he can hit on some happy titles for his yearlings, especially if those titles give a hint of the pedigree on both sides.

Last Monday a dispatch came from Lexington, Ky., as follows: "Dr. W. E. Galbreath sold Ralph Wilkes (two-year-old, 2:18) to-day to George Leavitt, of Boston, Mass., for a fancy price. The Doctor stated the price was larger than that paid for Constantine. Constantine sold for $27,000. It is understood the sum was $30,000.

The trainers and drivers at the Oakland track have contributed quite a sum of money to keep the course in good order. John Codey can be seen acting as superintendent and track-builder. A number of Oakland's most prominent horsemen are taking an active interest in the work and have also contributed their share toward making it passable.

The Buffalo Jockey Club is in course of formation, with a capital stock of $150,000. Among the parties interested are C. J. Hamlin, Gerhard Lang, the Engemans, and other well-known horsemen. The club will own its own track and build an imposing grand stand and club house. It is said the club will be in a position to hold a meeting in the summer.

The great Maxim has entirely recovered from his recent attack of pneumonia. He was a very sick horse ten days ago, but thanks to skillful care and a favoring climate he pulled through and is himself once again. He is rounding out into his old form and it will be but a few days until he will look as he no doubt looked when he left his Australian home.

The following is from an English exchange: "Bob Johnson, who looked after and rode the famous Beeswing, perhaps one of the best staying mares ever seen on the turf, must have been a dry fish, and certainly his letters to his master, Mr. Ord, were very concise. Here is a typical one: "Sir, the meer's weel, I'm weel; were a' weel.—Robert Johnson."

Now that Richard Havey has left the Hobart Stock Farm, it would not surprise horsemen if he was to be seen at Palo Alto. He was very happy last fall over the success he was having with the youngsters at San Mateo, and had no hesitancy in saying that he "considered them unequalled, for their number, by these on any other stock farm he had ever seen or heard of."

W. O'B. MacDonough, of this city, will have a string this season that should carry off some of the stake plums at our meetings, and the debut of his youngsters will be watched with considerable interest. This recent acquisition to the ranks of California turfmen is an important one, for the young gentleman is a close student of blood lines and has the wealth to carry out all his ideas.

The Madisonian says: W. H. Raymond, of Belmont Park, last week sold to Marcus Daly the noted bay mare, Carrie Bell, record 2:23½, with her weanling filly, Opal, for $4,500. Also Halleen, by Tempest, dam by Commodore Belmont; Jetta, by Tempest, dam by Commodore Belmont; Nightingale, by Doncaster, record 2:28¼, dam by Tempest; Norma, by Doncaster, dam by Tempest.

D. R. Mills, Des Moines, Ia., has sold to J. R. Perry, Lexington, Ky., the bay colt San Mateo, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, dam Libbie B., by Winthrop; second dam Fanny Fern (dam of Balkan, 2:15; Mollie Drew, 2:27 (the dam of Alanna, 2:18, and Laura Drew, 2:36, the dam of Freedom, yearling record 2:29¾; Fred Arnold, 2:33), by Jack Hawkins, sire of the dam of Echora, 2:23½, dam of Direct, 2:06.

Harry Agnew, of Hillsdale, called in to see us last week. He reports all the colts and mares looking well. He has a number of Mambrino Wilkes mares; among them is the great mare, Clara P., that was reported owned in the East. He says if she is owned in the East he does not know it. The prospects for a good year are very bright and he expects to have a good string of trotters on the circuit this fall.

Dr. George W. Stout, of Ukiah, Cal., has secured that good race horse and grand individual, St. Patrick, 2:26½, for service in Mendocino county. This horse, who is by Carr's Mambrino 1789, dam Flora, by Dan Voorhees, is sure to improve the trotting stock of Mendocino county. As there is registered in the American Register, another St. Patrick his name will be changed to Salinas, in honor of the place of the horse's nativity.

Wilfred Page's catalogue for 1892 is now in the hands of the printers, who claim they will turn out the neatest job yet executed in this line in California. There is a good deal of curiosity to learn the breeding of the mares to which Eclectic, the brother of Arion 2:10¾, was bred last year. The pedigrees, we understand, are extended in a novel form—simpler, plainer and more satisfactory than the more elaborate tabulations heretofore used.

IT IS reported that a peculiar disease has broken out among the horses in La Salle county, Illinois. Nine horses have died upon one farm, five upon another, and the death of one or two on a farm is general. The disease first manifests itself in the frogs of the horse's feet, the frogs swelling and becoming much inflamed. The disorder then travels up the legs, which swell as it advances, and when it reaches the body the animal dies in great agony.

APTOS WILKES, the magnificent Guy Wilkes stallion owned by A. Spreckles, is to make a short season at Aptos. He will be taken up as soon as the season ends and given a low record. Mr. Hickok considers him one of the most promising of the Guy Wilkes family. His full sister is the pet of the stable, and he looks forward to the time when he will lead some of the prominent trotters that have been attracting attention during the past year.

THE people in and around Ferndale, Humboldt county, are greatly pleased at the coming of the fine young stallion Charley R., by Anteeo, 2:16¼, dam by Robert Bonner, to that part of the country, and there is at present a decided boom in the horse industry there. Charley R. was recently purchased of G. E. Guerne, Santa Rosa, by W. A. Alford, of Ferndale. That this horse will improve the trotting stock of Humboldt is certain, for he is a fine individual.

IT IS a remarkable thing that in the large number of fashionably-bred stock owned and catalogued by Messrs. H. L. and F. D. Stout there is not a single mare, filly or colt, whose first, second, third, fourth, fifth or any other dam is by Hambletonian 10; indeed, the stallion Robert Lee,2:23, is the only animal in the catalogue which shows Hambletonian 10's name in the column of sires of dams, and we have to travel down to the third dam to get him then.

MR. AUGUST BELMONT, New York City,lost at the Nursery Stud, Lexington, Ky., on January 24th, the famous broodmare imp. Toucques, chestnut, foaled 1868, bred by M. Montgomery, imported in 1873 by the late Hon. August Belmont, by Monarque, dam La Tocque, by The Baron, second dam Tapestry by Melbourne, third dam Stitch by Hornsea, out of Industry by Priam, etc. Tocques was the dam of the flying filly La Tosca, Turco, Turk and Tarbouche.

THE Allen Farm has sold to Colonel Henry Exall, proprietor of Lomo Alto Stock Farm, Dallas, Texas, the four-year-old stallion Electrite, full brother to Sphinx, 2:20½, and Egotist, 2:22½, by Electioneer, sire of the great Arion, two-year-old record, 2:10¾, dam Sprite, dam of three in 2:30 class, by Belmont, second dam Waterwitch, dam of five with records better than 2:25, by Pilot Jr. Electrite has shown phenominal speed, and is expected to beat 2:20 this season. Price private.

L. J. SMITH, of Oakland, has only a small string at the Oakland track at present. The best ones in it are Sunrise, 2:25½, a brown gelding by Abbotsford out of a daughter of Signal. He belongs to Brown & McKinney, of Oakland. Addie is a fine-looking four-year-old by Admiral, that will be heard of this fall; she belongs to District Attorney George G. Reed. Then he has Kate Campbell, by a son of Hambletonian 725, and a pacer called Robin, by Little Rex, that just came from New York.

THE State Fair has pushed its dates a week earlier into the summer, thereby forcing the district fairs preceding it to also open a week earlier than usual. The latter and the horsemen have already complained that the circuit commenced too early as it was, and forced the clashing of dates and spoiling the circuit by lack of horses to fill the classes at the several fairs. The State Fair has committed a blunder. On the bay circuit the farmers were in the midst of harvest almost, as it was, and now it will be worse.

THE developed sire and dam theorists seem to be rather hard-pressed of late. Axtell's 2:12 at three years was the exception that proves the rule; but Alix's 2:16¼ put an interrogation on that, whilst Arion's two-year-old mark of 2:10¾ proved a squelcher. Shall we, indeed, have to come round to old Wallace's dictum that "the ability to trot fast is inherited, and that this inheritance may be improved and the instinct to stick to the trot intensified by selection and development in successive generations?"

THE Spirit of the Times says: "TheWinter tracks in New Jersey have brought the sports of the turf into disrepute. One of these tracks is backed and heeled by a few German politicians and Celtic heelers who openly boast that they are above and beyond the law. They have demonstrated that the much-vaunted 'Jersey justice' is a mockery and a sham. The daily routine at the Gut is not racing. Hardly anybody outside of its paid retainers pretends that it is. Nevertheless, it serves the purposes of the 'Hungry Joes' and the camp followers."

THE second day of the Brasfield sale at Lexington, Ky., was exceedingly good. Thirty-eight horses were sold for over $80,000. The stallion Constantine, four-year-old record 2:19¾, by Wilkes Boy, dam Kincora, by Mambrino Patchen, second dam Betty Brown, was sold to Graham Conly of the Briar Hill Stock Farm, Ky., for $27,000. W. H. Crawford bought Constantine as a two-year-old for $20,000, after he had shown a trial of 2:26. His sire and dam are owned by T. C. Anglin, of Lexington, who has farmed his dam to Gerhard Lang of Buffalo.

SPEED is not the only thing that is wanted in a trotter, for if you follow the sale ring for a time you will find that soundness, style and finish is asked for, and that it brings big money. A flat-sided horse, with a rat tail and a ewe neck with a record of 2:10 will sell for racing purposes, but give the same horse a mark between 2:30 and 2:40, and no one wants him, and there are more 2:40 horses produced than any other kind. See that the qualities wanted in the produce exist in the parents, and also see that they are not overshadowed by other defects.

IT HAS been frequently asserted that only millionaires can afford to engage in the business of breeding the trotting horse. The same could be said, and with equal truth, about any other business that requires capital to establish, yet actual facts go to show that many of our most successful breeders commenced breeding with only a limited amount of capital, from which substantial fortunes have been made. The business of breeding the trotter, when carried on under intelligent business methods, is one of the most profitable industries in which a man can invest his money, provided his natural love for the horse is strong enough to lead him to master every detail of the business. This condition complied with, the business becomes one of both pleasure and profit.

THE horse world is never still. This is the day of early speed. The day when men were satisfied to wait five or seven years to show how to bring out the merits of a trotter has gone by forever—or until it has been proved that early training is a great mistake. We are no longer content to breed animals that may by training be made trotters. We aim to breed horses that are trotters by nature. There is now neither glory nor money in breeding horses in which high trotting capacity is only developed through the maturing course of years.

WHEN Elaine was brought to Palo Alto from Charles Backman's Stony Ford, New York, Governor Stanford was very proud of her, as he had reason to be, for a handsomer filly would be hard to find. Chief Justice Stephen J. Field was visiting the large stock farm, and the Governor was taking pride in showing different stallions and mares to him. When Elaine was brought out for inspection, the learned jurist astounded his host by saying, "She is pretty, but tell me, who rides her?" It is needless to say that the Governor's descriptions of the balance were very brief.

IT HAS been learned that of the fillies J. Malcolm Forbes has just bought for Senator Stanford for $25,000, one is Mont Rose who last year trotted in 2:18 as a three-year-old. She is by Electioneer, dam Rosemont, by Piedmont, 2:17¼; second dam Beautiful Bells, dam of Bell Bird, Bell Boy, Hinda Rose and others. The other is the three-year-old Starlight, by Eleetioneer, dam Sally Benton, who once held the world's four-year-old record of 2:17¾, second dam Sontag Mohawk, the dam of seven in the 2:30 list. Starlight made a two-year-old record of 2:26½. Mont Rose will be trained this year.

THOMAS MURPHY, or "Gloster Tom," as he is everywhere known, dropped in to see us last Saturday. He reports every thing in the way of news at the Petaluma race track very quiet. He says he never saw such promising trotters as the young Eclectics, and added: "You know there are some colts that are great lot trotters and are very promising until they get the harness on, and then they do not seem to move along so freely, but the youngsters by Eclectic act as if it made no difference. They are level-headed, pure-gaited and fast movers."

AT THE meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders in New York on the 4th inst., it was unanimously decided to establish a new stud book for the registration of high-class trotters exclusively. This movement is a sequel to recent action of the register company of Chicago in admitting pacers to their register on an equality with trotters. The sentiment among Eastern breeders is almost a unit against the admission of the pacer to trotting standards. The headquarters will be located at New York, with G. C. Gue, now of Des Moines, Iowa, as recording secretary.

DAN MILLER, of this city, has just purchased of J. B. Haggin a royally-bred bay two-year-old filly, with four white legs, by Tyrant (son of Great Tom and Moselle), dam Unit, by Onondaga; second dam Una, by War Dance; third dam Georgia Wood, by Knight of St. George; fourth dam Margaret Wood, by imp. Priam. Splendid as this pedigree is, in the words of Mr. Miller the filly looks better than her breeding, which is saying a good deal. The filly girths five feet nine and one-half inches and is fourteen hands three and one-half inches, has a good, long body, and is exceedingly racy-looking.

THE Blood Horse Association met in their rooms at 313 Bush street last Monday morning. Dates for their spring meeting were set—April 9th to May 7th. There will be racing four days per week—Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. A Track Committee, consisting of Charles S. Wieland, P. B. Quinlan and P. A. Finegan, was appointed. The outlook for a grand meeting is excellent, as our cracks will not have departed for the East when the racing begins here. It is not as yet settled where the racing will take place. If any city ever needed a first-class track and grand stands it is San Francisco.

THE Merced Express printed the following interesting item: "We have been reliably informed that there is an active movement on foot to form a joint stock company for the purpose of purchasing land on which to build a race course and establish fair grounds. It is to be hoped that the parties who have the proposed enterprise in charge will never let up until they accomplish their object. The citizens of Merced county should give the enterprise every encouragement, which can be done by subscribing for one or more shares of the stock. This stock will not pay a dividend at first, but it will in the course of time."

WHEN an animal shows a tendency to shy at anything he should be held in by a firm and gentle hand and spoken kindly to. If possible, hold his head directly toward the object and let him look at it as long as he will. Then move him toward it. If the object is stationary, let him get acquainted with it, let him smell it, touch it with his sensitive upper lip and look closely at it. The moment a horse becomes familiar with the things that alarm him and knows what they are he grows indifferent to them. This is the only way to break a horse of shying at everything he meets on the road. The man who uses the whip when the horse shies only aggravates the evil.

D. G. HAWKINS, of Vacaville, Cal., has in Bikal a grand colt. He is a three-year-old, a bright bay in color, with well-turned limbs, is showing a world of speed, and will doubtless be quite a figure on our tracks this fall. In the words of his proud owner, "I shall start him this fall, and I think if the best of them beat him they will know they have been to a horse race." Bikal is not only a race horse, but is full brother to a great one—Balkan, 2:15—being by Mambrino Wilkes out of Fanny Fern, by Jack Hawkins. Mr. Hawkins has a few good mares from the Santa Claus, Almont, Ironwood, Norfolk and Steinway families, and will breed only these to Bikal this year.

W. J. WHITE, proprietor of the Two-Minute Stock Farm, Rockport, Ohio, sent over $400 worth of entries to the Independence Association, and does not intend to start a horse simply making the entries because he believes that associations offering large stakes should be encouraged. If there were more men in the trotting horse business pursuing the liberal policy of Mr. White, the earning capacity of the trotter could be made to equal that of the thoroughbred. All breeders are very anxious to see the earning capacity of the trotter increased, but many seem to forget that each one must do his share in order to bring about this "consummation devoutedly to be wished."

THE turfmen of France have recently had some experience with the "ringer." A group of American sharpers with one or two French confederates recently perpetuated a "ringing" trick in the trotting line at the Neully-Lavallors meeting near Paris, November 28th. An American gelding was entered as Black Jim in a 3,500 metre (two miles, one and one-half furlongs) race for the 2:42 class. Black Jim was the winner over nineteen horses, among them the American horses Alectra, Patchwork and Fanny. Black Jim was an easy winner by eighteen seconds in 5:56½, with Alectra second. The purse was for $500, and Jim's backers succeeded in placing on some $2,500 at the average odds of twelve to one, landing $30,000 on the race. His American driver had $400 in mutuals. It was discovered later that Black Jim was Frank T., 2:23, who was sold at auction in New York last winter.

IT APPEARS that breeders in New York and neighborhood intend to start a trotting register, pure and simple, i. e., admitting no pacers under the standard. There are trotting horse breeders on this Coast and several of them, too, who, although scarcely likely to abandon registration in the American Trotting Register, will also help to support the new register unless the pacer is knocked out of "The Standard" of the parent organization. They want the breed of trotting horses built up, i. e., "established on a firmer basis," and admitting pacing bred sires of pacers they claim is not building up, but pulling down. We notice that the Cleveland Bay Society will no longer "register animals whose sire or dam is sired by a thoroughbred horse;" they maintain that selection among the stock already registered is more likely to establish the breed on a firmer basis than constant or even occasional outcrosses of other blood. The reasoning is pretty stout, and should apply to trotters as well as to any other breed.

THE well-known face and figure of A. L. Hinds is seen around the stalls where his string of trotters are stabled at the Oakland track. The veteran has reason to take a justifiable pride in the game Mambrino Wilkes filly, Hera. Her dam is by Conductor. This promising trotter has developed into a fine-looking animal. She has lost the "leggy" appearance she had last Spring, and has become more like a substantial trotter than one would hope to expect. She trotted twenty-two heats last fall as a two-year-old. None of them were slower than 2:45, and she won a six-heat race against aged horses and got a record of 2:40. Clara B, by Mambrino Wilkes out of a Black Hawk mare, and Tannis, a rangy filly by Mortimer out of a Mambrino Wilkes mare, second dam by Corsican, complete his list at present. This filly Tannis is far better than she looks, and is one of the speediest, gamest fillies that ever was driven on the Oakland track.

A KENTUCKY writer, in telling of the sale of Matadon, the sire of the great yearling, Athadon, 2:27, at a public sale when he was a colt, says: "Matadon had shown speed to halter before leaving home, and his owners, Bowen & Holton, expected him to sell readily at a good figure. When the colt was led into the ring he was shy of the crowd, and did not show better than a 3:00 gait, and a poor way of doing it at that. As he was passing the auctioneer's stand for about the fifth time Matadon interrupted the progress across the ring of a gentleman who carried an umbrella in his hand and several glasses of Bourbon under his vest. The gentleman resented being delayed, and as the colt passed him brought the umbrella down across Matadon's rump. The blow was heard and seen by every one. The effect was electrical. From an indifferent 3:00 gait the youngster struck into a clean, open trot, showing not slower than a 2:40 rate of going. The effect on the bidders was magical. One man went $300 a bid, and from a dragging $600 or $700, the now great Matadon was knocked down at, we think, $1,700, and all on account of the man and the umbrella, also the Bourbon."

THE noted stallion Flaxtail, whose pedigree figures in some very fast ones, was by Bull Pup, a son of old pacing Pilot. It is conceded that the dam of Flaxtail, like that of Pilot Jr., was very strong in thoroughbred lines. Bull Pup is registered as from a dam said to be Canadian. The same registrar who gave him this pedigree at one time contended sharply that imported Bellfounder was a Canadian, and he would have so appeared in the register to-day had it not been for the efforts of Mr. Levi S. Gould. Now that the Ameircan Register Association is in good working order, it should investigate quite a number of Mr. Wallace's pedigrees, says the Horse-Breeder. That of Pilot Jr. should be overhauled and dissected carefully. The Bullock Horse, or North American, is another that should receive attention. The dam of Vermont Black Hawk is now represented in the register as a pacer, which is a glaring error. Mr. Shaddock Seavey, who had charge of this mare for years, and knows more about her than any other man living, informed us that she never paced a step while he knew her. Mr. Seavey also informed us several years ago that no other person excepting ourself had ever interviewed him to learn the facts concerning the history of this mare or that of the early life of her distinguished son, Vermont Black Hawk, which was owned by Mr. Seavy until he was five years old. It is a small matter, but it is best to have a register correct even in minute details.

Next to J. Malcolm Forbes, owner of Nancy Hanks (2:09) and Arion (2:10¾), Andy Welch of Hartford, Ct., is probably the most courageous horseman in New England. On Monday, the 25th inst., Mr. Welch booked four mares to Arion (2:10¾) at $10,000 the lot. These mares are Directress (2:28¾) by Director (2:18): a full sister to Directress; Alahoa, the dam of the two mares above mentioned, and Lurline, by Red Wilkes. Alahoa is by A. W. Richmond, and is full sister to the pacers Arrow (2:13¼) and Ellwood (2:17¾), her dam being by the thoroughbred Crichton, son of imported Glencoe. Besides Directress (which is expected to take a record of 2:20 or better this season) and Fay M., Mr. Welch has a yearling filly by Patron (2:14) from her, and she is now in foal to Wild Rake (2:22¼.) Lurline is a four-year-old. She could have beaten 2:30 last season, and will be given a mark after being bred. Her dam was by Hambrino (2:22½), sire of Delmarch (2:11½); second dam, a daughter of Sentinel (2:29¾), from a thoroughbred. Mr. Welch expects to get race horse qualities as well as speed in the foals of the mares he breeds to Arion. It looks now as though Mr. Forbes would be compelled to turn away a large number of applications for Arion's services this season. It would not surprise us if Mrs. C. R. Noyes, the only lady in Now England who has shown courage enough to pay $4,000 for a filly, should send her elegant mare Marinette, by Director (2:17), to Arion. Marinette produced a magnificent filly by Axtell (2:12) last season, and is expected to produce a foal by Nelson (2:10) next Summer. A foal by Arion from her would sell for a small fortune.

THE GUN.

On the Western Plain.

The morning after Cooper's purchase of the Doctor's dog everybody slept late and the sun had climed high up from eastern verge of the azure vault before any one was aroused by the guards. One of them called out, "Rouse, boys, and get breakfast, we are hungry." The guards were seated around the camp-fire, which they had kept replenished with fuel duriug the night, and were patiently waiting for breaklast, smoking their pipes to assuage the gnawings of hunger. Since daylight there had been no need of guarding the stock, as the only enemy from whom a predatory attack was apprehended was wolves, and, unless half starved they seldom attack in the daytime and are dangerous only at night; daylight disperses them. All sprang up at the call, and I noticed that Cooper had slept with his new purchase tied to his wrist by a cord; he was determined that York should have no intercourse with his former master. It was a useless precaution for York evinced no inclination to return to the Doctor, just the reverse. He fawned upon and leaped around his new master, looking joyously, and wagged his tail with such vigor that the hinder half of him wagged in unison; and expressed, in most convincing dog language, his delight in the change of ownership. He appeared to understand the situation and to be thankful for it, and a new dignity was taken on by him which was becoming, and from that time he clung to Cooper as long as he remained with him, which was but a few days, however. He paid no attention to the Doctor except to growl and snap at him when approached too closely by him. He evidently remembered old scores and had a realizing sense of former ill-treatment, and of his present condition, brought about by the kindly interposition of his new-found friend, and resentful of the old, and grateful for the new. Sometimes he would look askance at the Doctor with a low growl as if to say, "Touch me if you dare, I have a protector now," and I think a little encouragement would have caused him to fly at his old master's throat. After breakfast our little party began to talk of resuming our journey, of moving on toward the Rockies, but Captain Clark and his party wouldn't listen to it. They said that they intended camping where they were for a week or ten days, to give the cows a chance to recruit where the grass was good, and the calves an opportunity to become habituated to their new mode of life and to grow strong. "The grass," they said, "will be short and poor between here and Omaha, bacause the cattle of passing trains have grazed it down; it is a long way from here to the Missouri, and we want our stock in prime condition when we start on the home journey. Each one of these calves is worth a pile of money, and it is to our interest that we take them through safe, sound and healthy. Why not stay with us until we are ready to move? We have plenty to eat and drink and to spare, and you are more than welcome to share it with us. Stay and enjoy yourselves, and let your horses recruit on the good grass here; and rest and enjoy yourselves. Besides, we want to do a little hunting for sport; to kill a few buffalo an l elk for their meat, which we intend to jerk and take with us. All that we don't need for use will sell readily, and at a good price, on the river. There are plenty of deer and antelope around here, too, and we will shoot some of them for fresh meat; they are a heap better than buffalo, especially the antelope; and we want to kill some of these pesky wolves for their pelts. Stay and hunt with us and we'll have gobs and slathers of sport."

Though we needed no rest, neither did our horses need recruiting, we could not find it in our hearts to decline the whole-souled invitation especially in view of the chances for sport offered, which was too tempting to be passed by. We also saw an opportunity of accomplishing something that had been talked over several times; that of relieving ourselves of the unwelcome presence of Dr. Thompson by sending him back to the settlement with Captain Clark's party. Also, the prospect of ten days sociable intercourse with men of such large practical experience in hunting and in mountain and plain craft, and of such perennial bon homme, was in itself irresistable; so we gladly accepted the invitation and tarried.

Speaking of the care of horses on such a trip, a man's horse is his comfort, his main-stay and his safety, and, if not properly cared for will soon fail him and leave him on foot. Therefore, for his own welfare, it behooves a man that his first thought and care should be for his horse, even if he have no higher regard for the noble animal than that dictated by self-interest. But self-interest will not always induce men to care for their horses, and I have seen men whom nothing could move to look to their comfort; riding them all day and tying them at night, to trees, or picketing them where there was nothing to eat; seemingly oblivious of the fact that to be strong and to endure, a horse must eat as well as a man. Many times I have got up in the night and removed the poor beasts to a place where they could find grass. Of course, under such treatment, a horse will break down and leave his owner on foot. On such men sympathy is wasted; they dereserve all of hardship and suffering, pertaining to such a condition, that may befal them. They are utterly selfish; careless of the rights, callous to the sufferings of others, whether beast or man, and care not what happens so long as every thing runs smoothly with them. But, "touch 'em on the raw" and they whimper and whine like whipped curs and expect assistance from others whom they would when not themselves needing help, pass by in distress with as much indifference as they would tread upon the worm in their path. A man who abuses his horse is like the man with no music in his soul, "Fit for statagems, treasons and spoils," and mean enough to "steal the coppers from a dead nigger's eyes."

There is no doubt that many men, on plain and in mountain, have lost their lives simply from the fact that they were too lazy, too indifferent or too ignorant to take proper care of their horses.

I said that all sprung up at the call of the guard, there was one exception; all of the spring had been knocked out of the Doctor by the whiskey he had drank during the night, and he lay in his blankets like a dead man; the price of his dog had been too much for him. York went over to him and smelt of him and growled and bared his teeth and snapped his jaws, and, probably, would have bitten him if Cooper had not called him off. The Doctor continued in his drunken stupor until supper time. He never got any more whiskey while he stayed with us and his moroseness increased, his resentfulness grew and deepened. As one of the hunters expressed it, "He is the most lovable coon I ever met—in a big horn."

The day was devoted to caring for the stock, which still felt the fatigue of the day before, and in maktng camp snug and comfortable: in eating and smoking, in lounging about and telling stories, and in planning hunting excursions. One of the hunters, whose name I have forgot, told the following Munchausian story: A few years ago I, with my partner, was trapping on one of the branches of the Wind River. We got out of meat and I shouldered my rifle and started out to kill something, it mattered not whether deer, antelope, elk or bear. We were beyond the range of buffalo, and didn't have any longing for bear, which was the most plentiful game in the vicinity, but it would be accept one in the absence of better game. In fact, there were more grizzlies than we cared to encounter. Well, after a long tramp, failing to find a thing to shoot, not so much as a rabbit or a bear, I became tired and discouraged and started to return to camp, taking a different route. Before traveling far I met with one of those curious natural formations sometimes seen in the Rockies. It was a spur of the mountains pushing out into the comparative level; a mass of solid black rock more than two hundred feet high, with perpendicular face and flanks, but sloping abruptly at the rear or mountain side. It was flat on the top, and while looking at it my eye caught the outline of some objects moving about on the top of it. Carefully concealing myself behind intervening objects so as not to be seen, I crept near enough to get a good view and discovered that the moving objects on the rock were big-horns, about twenty in number. The back or mountain side of the rock, though badly broken, was comparatively easy to climb. I crawled around to the back of the rock, all the time carefully concealing myself, for these big-horns have an eye like turkey buzzards, and the instant they see anything suspicious are off like a shot, I climbed up to the top of the rock, and, with cocked rifle, ready for instant use, cautiously raised my head above the level. What do you think I saw? Why, the tails ot those infernal big-horns just disappearing over the edge of the precipice. I was disappointed and much chagrined for I had counted on getting at least one of them. I thought that I had them in a trap, but the trap sprung the wrong way. They had discovered me and, in their alarm, had taken the only avenue of escape that seemed open to them and had leaped sheer two hundred feet over the precipice to the ground at its foot. I cautiously approached the edge of the cliff and peered over, expecting to see all of the big-horns stretched, mangled and dead, on the ground below. Instead, I saw them skurrying away with the fleetness of the wind, and before I could think, they had disappeared over the brow of a ridge half a mile away. To say that I was astonished would be to express my sensations very mildly. I was so amazed and bewildered that I was unconscious of where I was or how I got there. Recovering myself, I again started for camp. Though unsuccessful in the attempt to shoot a big-horn, I didn't return empty-handed to camp. When about half a mile from camp I run upon a big buck, the largest I ever saw. He saw me at the same moment that I saw him, and, with a snort, bounded away. I took a running shot at him and bored him through the heart and he fell dead. He was too big for me to pack—he must have weighed three hundred pounds—so I bled and eviscerated him and left him lying on the ground while I went to get my partner and one of the ponies to pack him into camp.

When we got back to where the deer was we saw an immense grizzly engaged in eating venison off my buck. He was so busy in eating that he didn't discover our approach. We didn't relish the idea of a thieving bear getting away with our meat, so we aimed at his heart and fired together. Luckily, we both hit the mark and the bear tumbled over dead, and we had meat for supper after all. Those big-horns had done what I had often before heard they could do but never believed, but now I was convinced of the truth of it. They can leap from almost any height and light without injury, striking on their horns, which are immense and powerful, and, by their spiral curvature, furnish an oval surface. which gives a rolling motion when they strike, that, in connection with the powerful and elastic muscles of the neck and the thick, strong, cervical vertebra, more cartilagenous than osseous, divides up the shock of lighting on their heads when they strike, even upon a rock, and enables them to escape from injury scott free."

Everybody listened with grave attention and respectful silence, puffing great volumes of smoke from their pipes with serene enjoyment, and, when the story was finished no comment was made; no expression either of skepticism or surprise.

All the hunters appeared to consider that the story was only a relation of matters of fact, presenting no features of the marvelous or wonderful, not specially new nor strange, and they smoked on with the contemplative air of one who has heard only another corroboration of a fact in the natural history of the big-horn that he had always known.

At that time, and even to the present day, the belief is entertained by the hunters in the mountains, that the big-horn, or mountain sheep, can throw himself from an eminence of great height, light upon his horns and escape without injury. It is a work of supererogation to try to prove to the intelligent reader that such is not the fact. The mountain sheep is very vigilant, always on the alert, and to get a shot at him is most difficult. His sudden disappearance over a precipice is, to the average hunter, most wonderful, and, to his untrained mind, partakes of the miraculous, but, the big-horn never precipitates himself from a cliff the face of which affords no projections for foot-holds whereby to break the force of his descent, any more than other animals. He is intelligent and wary, aud always looks out for a line of retreat, and, when alarmed will dash down the side of a precipice where neither hunter, wolf nor mountain lion can follow.

The next day about a dozen of the party started ou a buffalo hunt, not for calves but for young buffalo, which were wanted for meat. Horn and I went with them taking old Breck along to assist in packing the meat to camp. Cooper and the others remained in camp not appearing inclined for the chase. I was surprised at Cooper for he was an ardent sportsman and seldom let go by a chance to shoot big game and indulge his passion for the chase. I think he stayed to watch his dog and the Doctor, and see that the latter did not molest York nor try to win him over again, but, he said nothing of his motive. We rode over the ridge, lying to the north of us expecting to find game but when we came in sight of the plain beyond the ridge, not a buffalo was to be seen, and, with the exception of a few deer or antelope—they were so distant that we couldn't tell which—the scene was as desolate, and barren of life as the sandy desert. Captain Clark, who by common consent was leader in all expeditions, because of his superier knowledge of plain-craft, but who had only common interest in the outfit with the others, proposed to turn to the left and skirt the foot of the ridge which was done by all except Horn and I and one of the hunters who chose to turn to the right. We fully expected that old Breck would follow Horn's horse but were mistaken. When we separated the old hybrid looked, in a doubtful, uncertain way for a moment as if dazed and not thoroughly understanding the situation, brayed vociferously and—followed the other party. One of the hunters rode a magnificent bay mare, a Kentucky thoroughbred, whose wide nostrils, under excitement, contracted and dilated and vibrated with spasmodic action; with arching neck, and the small ears of the barb of the Arabian desert that appeared to be always in a quiver; with the nervous spring of an antelope and tbe soft, beaming eye of the gazelle; gentle as matron; spirited as is always the thoroughbred; with thews of steel, and ever eager to do and to dare. It had been noticed that old Breck had taken a great fancy to this charming mare, though she treated him with cool indifference, if not with scorn. He had not yet abandoned Horn's horse for the new love, dividing his attentions between the two, but, not the time for decisive choice had come; he was off with the old love and on with the new; he chose the mare. Alas, for mule constancy!

We rode on without any feeling of uneasiness on Breck's account; through thick and thin he would cling to his new love.

Bird Cramps.

The best shooting yarn of the season is one that reaches us from Mr. Ad. Pearson, of National City, near the Lower California line, says a valued correspondent. It is old but good.

Mr. Pearson is an enthusiastic sportsman, and owns some fine hunting dogs, among others, there being a thoroughbred pointer pup, which promises great things in the future, and it is of this pup the story is written.

The Constable relates the story in his own style. Says he: "You know Mr. Jones? Well, he came to me the other day, saying: "Pearson, I want to go hunting one of these days, and I wish you would loan me one of your dogs." Now I didn't want to do anything of the kind, but I couldn't very well refuse him, as I had heard him speak of his hunting a great deal, and hated to disoblige him, so I said: "All right, sir; you can have the pointer." And the next day he came around rigged out in hunting boots, leggings, hunting-coat and hat, and carrying a fine hammerless gun (borrowed plumes, as I afterwards found out), and I gave him the pointer and saw no more of him until about dark of that day, when he walked into my office, and said: "Say, what in thunder did you want to send me out shooting with a dead dog for?" Visions of a dead pointer shot across my brain, and I said: "What do you mean, man? Have you lost the dog?" "No, but the cussed dog is no good." "What's the matter with him?" I asked. "Well, the dog has St. Vitus' dance, or something worse. You had better have him looked after unless you want to lose him."

I knew the dog was in splendid health when he left home, and I was considerably puzzled to know what had happened to him, so I demanded an explanation, and he said:

"Well, I drove out about five miles, where I thought likely I could find some quail, and hitched the horse, loaded myself down with shells and started out with the dog.

I had travelled maybe half a mile when, looking around, I missed the pointer, and finally saw him off about a hundred yards. The dog looked so strange that I immediately knew there was something the matter with him, and I ran over to where he was. The dog looked like he had a terrible cramp in one of his hind legs, and he just stood there quivering all over, one hind leg stuck straight out behind, and his eyes seemed ready to start from his head. He looked in so much pain that I laid down my gun, went up to him and commenced to rub his leg, thinking maybe that it would relieve him. While I was working with him a quail flew out of a bush near him, and as I was busy with him, I, of course, lost a shot, but the dog seemed to get better, and as he could move his leg all right, I let him run. Well, sir, it wasn't a minute before that cussed dog got another cramp, only this time it was in one of his fore legs, and it was so severe that it twisted him clear around, so that his nose and tail nearly touched each other. I went up to him again and was repeating my rubbing when about a dozen birds jumped up all around us. As my gun was laying on the ground I lost another shot, and when I looked again at the dog, I'll be blamed if he wasn't all right. Well, sir, I will bet you that that infernal dog was taken with at least forty cramps that afternoon, and every time he had a cramp, and I attempted to doctor him, a bird would get up somewhere close by, and between watching the dog, and the noise of the bird, I lost my shot. I tell you, Pearson, I wouldn't be bothered with a dog like that out hunting for fifty dollars a day. He spoiled a whole afternoon's sport for me. I don't see what you want of a dog that can't hunt half an hour without getting sick. He don't have exercise enough."

"It is needless to say," continued Pearson, "that I was immensely relieved in my mind, and I assured Mr. Jones that the dog was all right, only those cramps he spoke of was a kind of a habit he had while hunting, but I had got so used to them that I paid very little attention to them; but he assured me he never wanted to take my dog out hunting again."

The Country Club.

The Country Club held its annual meeting on Thursday evening last at the Pacific-Union Club:

The first regular shoot of the Country Club, for the third season, will occur at its club house, Oakland Track, on Saturday, February 27, 1892. Members will take the 1 o'clock Berkeley train.

All regular monthly shoots will occur the last Saturday of each month till August, making seven shoots in all.

Five prizes will be given for the five highest scores made by the members contesting in five out of seven shoots, as per Rule 28.

A member may choose any five scores made by him. The first twelve birds shot at during a regular shoot only shall count, as per Rule 29.

The club will shoot under the new rules of the Country club of San Francisco, adopted January, 1891, which provides a handicap.

SAN FRANCISCO.

EDITOR BREEDDR AND SPORTSMAN:—I have just returned from another delightful outing, the second this season, in same locality, amongst the snip and quail, and although the rain interfered somewhat a part of the time,yet my companion and self managed to bag in the neighborhood of 125 head of game, principally quail. I used my 16 cylinder gun on this occasion and am more than ever satisfied with its performance and I predict sooner or later a more extensive use of the smaller bores than for many years. The tendency, as yon are aware, of most sportsmen has been toward the larger bores and heavier guns, within the past fifteen to twenty years, but even now the 10-bores are being largely discarded, and the more general and favorite size of 12, under eight pounds weight adopted as the general and all-round gun. For duck shooting even the majority of guns used by my shooting friends and companions this season have been 12 bores, and used with telling effect, and I have used nothing myself but a 12 7¼ lb. gun for ducks on the various occasions I have been on the marshes.

But for upland shooting I am satisfied the 16–6¼ to 6½ lb. gun is all the weapon required, and as nearly a cylinder as possibly, if any change then a slight choke in the second barrel used by the sportsman.

I write this advisedly, as some men use the left barrel first; the majority, however, use the right. With such a gun, for bore and weight, and a charge of 2¾ drams at utmost, of either black or nitro-powers for my choice. Nitro powder, and 7-8 oz. No. 9 shot, any of our smaller game, such as snipe, quail, etc., can be as readily brought to bag as with a 12-bore, if the gun is held as a gun should be—straight.

I have abundantly proved this the past season, and would not exchange my 16-gauge for any 12-gauge I know of for my purposes. As to the nitro-powder for sportsman's preference, I have given all the known varieties a test sufficient to satisfy myself.

The well known and tried Schultz still holds its own place as first in the list, but the new E. C. manufactured by an American company in New Jersey is rapidly coming to the front as a great favorite amongst sportsmen, particularly in the East.

In England, during the past pigeon shooting season, this powder had more winning events to its credit than any other nitro compound. The new (S. S.) Smokeless Sporting I have also given a brief trial, and find it most excellent powder, and on my recent trip I used it in about fifty cartridges and found it to kill clean and if anything, with a slightly closer pattern than those made by either Schultze or E. C. But for any of these powders, nothing but a first class shell should be used to prevent disappointment. In the majority of American cartridges, no matter how loud their claims are advertised as being certain of ignition with all nitro powders, my experience and that of other sportsmen with whom I have talked has certainly not proved this to be the case. On the contrary, missfires are too common to be pleasant.

For the use of American wood and all black powders they are everything to be desired, but for certain fire with the nitros the shells manufactured by the Eley's & Kynock companies of England are the only ones to be depended upon as far as I have yet tried them. No doubt, in time, equally certain fire cartridges will be manufactured in United States, and the sooner the better for all concerned.

Excusing myself for taking up so much of your valuable space, I remain Very truly yours,

TEN BORE.

The San Francisco Gun Club.

The San Francisco Gun Club met at the Occidental Hotel on the 5th inst., in annual session, Mr. Frank Swett presiding protem. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the choice of Mr. F. S. Butler for President; Mr. John O. Cadman, Vice-President; Mr. John K. Orr, Secretary. The club is in a flourishing condition and the outlook for the sport of the season all that could be desired.

The Executive Committee cousists of Messrs. R. A. Eddy, John O. Cadman and Howard Black.

The first shoot of the club for the season will take place on the 22nd, the sport opening at 10 o'clock A. M. There will doubtless be a large attendance and excellent sport at that time.

Paul H. Hacke, of Pittsburg, Pa., the well known fancier of the Borzois comes at the enemies or opponents of this breed with the following challenge which should settle, if accepted, the questions at issue regarding this splendid variety of the kennel world. He says:

"Self constituted authorities whose vaporings make them the laughing stock of the kennel world, have been trying to cast doubt upon the skill, courage, etc, of the Borzois, and have intimated that the tests in this country have proved nothing. Now, wishing no controversy. the undersigned respectfully makes the following proposition,

In order to demonstrate the superiority of the Borzois to all other dogs as wolf killers, the Hacke kennel of Borzois can be matched against any kennel of dogs (breed not restricted) in a wolf coursing contest, to take place on open prairie in the West on found wolves, the dogs to be slipped as the judges may order. The contest shall be for a cup, the value of which will be $100, and a stake. Each contestant shall deposit $100 to defray the costs of the cup and the expenses of the judges. The contest shall be decided by three judges on the basis of speed, courage and killing. The questions of time, place, judges, etc., shall be left to Dr. N. Rowe, who shall also be final stakeholder. In support of my final proposition I have placed my certified check for $100 in the hands of Dr. N. Rowe.

The coming Bench Show at Madison Square Garden will no doubt duplicate its former success, and the Westminister Kennel Club will again demonstrate the fact that America contains a few good dogs, and if the American public is not well versed in canine subjects, it, at least, shows its appreciation of the dog by flocking to the Show in goodly numbers.

Mr. Sears would sell any and all of his dogs. Sir Bediver and Hepsey are on the market but not to be given away. He insists on selling the two together. It would seem that the fancy is not so active as it was some months ago.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths, in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

A Prince of Newfonndland.

[BY CELIA THAXTER.]

The shower had ceased, but the city street
Was flooded still with the drenching rain,
Though men and horses with hurrying feet
Swept on their busy ways again.

The gutter ran like a river deep;
By the clean-washed pavement fast it rushed,
As out of the spouts with a dash and a leap
The singing, sparkling water rushed.

A little kitten with ribbon blue
Crossed over the way to the gutter's brink;
With many a wistful, plaintive mew,
She seemed at the edge to shudder and shrink.

And there she stood, while her piteous cries
Were all unheard by the heedless throng,
Looking across with such longing eyes;
But the torrent was all too swift and strong.

Up the street, over the pavement wide,
Wandered our Prince from Newfoundland,
Stately, and careless, and dignified,
Gazing about him on either hand.

The sun shone out on his glossy coat,
And his beautiful eyes so soft and brown
With quiet, observant glance took note
Of all that was passing him, up and down.

He heard the kitten that wailed and mewed,
Stopped to look and investigate,
The whole situation understood,
And went at once to the rescue straight.

Calmly out into the street walked he,
Up to the poor little trembling waif,
Lifted her gently and carefully,
And carried her over the water safe.

And set her down on the longed-for shore,
Licked her soft coat with a kind caress,
Left her and went on his way once more,
The picture of noble thoughtfulness.

Only a dog and a cat, you say?
Could a human being understand
And be more kind in a human way
Than this fine old Prince of Newfoundland?

Oh, children dear, 'tis a lesson sweet;
If a poor dumb dog so wise can be,
We should be gentle enough to treat
All creatures with kindness and courtesy.

For surely among us there is not one
Who such an example could withstand;
Who would wish in goodness to be outdone
By a princely dog from Newfoundland?

Mr. Mason's Views.

Mr. Charles H. Mason, the experienced kennel judge, takes umbrage at some remarks made by Mr. John Hawkes, and proceeds to vent his spleen and make himself more or less ridiculous in a letter to an eastern exchange. Men who arrogate so much of the wisdom of the age to themselves are sure to be considered by the world at large as being so small as to be readily disturbed by the criticism of an "unknown," as he denominates the object of his spleen. Men who are so liberal with advice are usually not strangers to egotism which has its root and growth in ignorance. We do not know Mr. John Hawkes, in fact never heard of him neither do we know Mr. Mason further than through the "uncertain and unreliable columns of the Kennel Press" as he is pleased to term all such issues. In this comment Mr. Mason has made quite an ass of himself allowing his supersensitive egotism to run away with his judgement. His letter closes with the following:

"I feel just in mind to give Mr. John Hawkes a word of friendly advice. Let him heed or disregard it as he may deem best. Never write on a subject you know nothing about. If you wish to become a dog-man try to rise to the position by merit and not by making a noise. Do not play the baby action removing your dogs from a show because they do not win. Never question a judge's decision or his motives until you have had ample opportunity to learn if they are good or bad. If you wish to make a match do not name all the judges yourself, but remember that the other side has a right to be heard. In selecting judges take only men that are known to be capable: if you choose those who are only dog-men on paper, you give the onlooker to understand that you do not wish the other dog to win. Do not suppose that every man that is asked to judge, or to report or write articles has ever owned, bred, exhibited, or even had anything to do with dogs. It is a fancy that is full of imposters and anything that wears breeches can judge at an American dog show. Do not be influenced too much by the press, because it is an undeniable, a positive and an air-tight fact that not a single paper in the United States can honestly lay claim to having a good all around judge in the kennel department. If you need information about field work, guns, shooting, &c., go to the press, but keep this side of Chicago.

If you know anything about dogs and wish to forget it, study carefully the dog show reports in the kennel papers. If you must write, if writing is essential to your peace of mind, or to your existence, remember that statements which cannot be supported by a grain of evidence will land you on your back. When you have been to one dog show and anticipate going to the second, you should not, like Mr. Mills and Mr. Lacy, proceed to knock the wrath out of us by offensive chatter about "our experience;" it is the nature of a boil to burst. Buy carefully if you must buy and be careful still in mating. Choose the society of a genuine dog fanciers. Keep your ears open and your mouth shut. If in ten years or so you have succeeded in breeding good dogs; if you have carefully studied all the dogs shown in that time. and if you have a natural love of dog, born in you, it is possible that you may be competent to buy dogs on your own judgement. The way to test your ability in this line is to buy on yonr own judgment for $5 or $5,000, dogs that have been shown without getting a card. If you can step and buy these dogs and then win with them in the best of company, under competent judgment, you may consider that you have learned something. So long as you are buying on the judgment of others, or on the strength of a record, you are not a judge of dogs. In from, say 10 to 12 or 15 years you should, if you have any natural ability, be beginning to have a good knowledge of dogs and a few years later your opinion may be sought for. If you wish to kuow how to keep dogs alive read 'Ashmont.' If you wish to know how to get rid of a dog read 'Mills.' For common sense and logic read 'William Wade.' If you need a bit of 'deadly rot' just for a change take 'Mount Royal.' If in addition to this you keep your head cool and feet warm and stick to facts I see no reason why you should not be a fairly good dog-man in the year 2012.

Names Claimed.

The imaculate gall shown by some men on the kennel question is enough to disgust the average man beyond measure. The idea that all of the knowledge regarding the subject is confined to this or that one individual is an accusation of ignorance on the part of the majority that is inexcusable. The practical knowledge of the dog, beside which all other knowledge, so called, is valueless, is but the demonstrated facts. True, a trainer may or may not know much of a special nature—knowledge which has come to him from his experience in handling and training, but this setting up a theory like that of those held and acted upon by numberless self-constituted and entitled judges of dogs is the veriest bosh and nonsense.

The absence of definite rule or explanation as to points claimed of superiority of breed; the general class of information given by them when solicited as to their wonderful wisdom, and as a rule, the lack of honesty and candor in their general treatment of the subject show many of these would be autocrats of the kennel to be arrogant assess possessing little to interest and much to disgust one with their supercilious pretentions. Brag, huncombe and bluster are not qualities which are in any sense conducive to the favorable consideration of the claims made by the parties who insist on playing the part of Falstaff on all occasions. A little sense introduced into their part would be refreshing.

Mr. James E. Watson states that it was not his intention to to convey the idea that he would run from four to eight black pointers against the field but that his offer to run the dogs was that the proposition be confined to any one man or kennel they to run any class or breed of dogs, or dogs of different varieties, setters or pointers as they may select. Mr. Watson's offer is one that should prove a drawing card. He has spent a great deal of money in his efforts to create an interest in dogs on this coast. His offer is purely one in which the test of the merits of the dogs is the only one at stake. There is not one cent of profit in the matter but as every sportsman knows to present eight dogs in condition for field work involves an expenditure of several hundreds of dollars. Mr. Watson means business in this proposition and if taken up will make it extremely interesting for his opponent whoever he may be.

A picture of the Sealyham Terrier, the new breed appearing in the current issue of the English Stock-Keeper presents a form not unlike the Foxterrier in general outline but with a head which appears abnormally large, long heavy jaws and broad skull. Nothing handsome about them and they should possess some marvelous qualities of worth in order to be tolerated. Mr. J. H. B. Cowley of Rickmansworth, England thinks them possessed of more terrier quality than any other known breed.

Thomas Higgs, Esq., the gentlemanly and courteous kennel man of this city, will shortly receive a fine stud dog of the Chesapeake variety. Having now one of the finest bitches of this class on this coast, it may be expected that he may in the future supply, in a measure, the increasing demand for these excellent water retrievers. This variety are the aquatic dogs beyond question for this section where the water is always chilly.

Lady Trippo, Thomas Higgs owner, the beautiful little bitch that won first at the recent field trials, was bred by Joseph E. Kime, Chatham, Ontario, Canada. She is litter sister to Mingo II, Lady Patch and Lady Spot, all of which have won honors in the field. Breeding, Mingo—Lady Thunder..

If you are all run down, fagged out, take Simmons Liver Regulator and be spry.

The Coming Bench Show.

The California Kennel Club which conducted so successfully the last bench show within this city, will hold its annual show from May 4th to 7th inclusive. It is to be hoped that there will be no lack of care in the preparation of this event. The knowledge required to conduct a bench show successfully and with satisfaction to both exhibitors and the public, requires special study and preparation. Aside from all this it is an entertainment of such a nature as to require the utmost courtesy and kindness both to exhibitor and the public. Men are peculiarly sensitive as to the treatment their dogs receive, and a great many pardonable errors have been and perhaps ever will be made at shows of this nature.

Aside from the important office of superintendent of the show, the secretary and ring steward should be men of peculiar fitness for the discharge of their duties. Much confusion and annoyance might be avoided by having as intelligent and thoroughly posted kennelman as possible for the position of ring steward. He can lighten, facilitate and make pleasant the duties of the judge as well as pointing out the duties of exhibitors, thereby causing the exhibition to run smoothly. The secretary, if qualified for his position, will see to it that due provision is made for the promulgation of awards as rapidly as made, and also to aid the daily papers and other publications in securing the official action as speedily as possible.

If the catalogues be properly arranged and the several classes duly provided for all specials could be awarded on the announcement of the awards by the judges.

Mr. Watson's Proposition.

San Francisco, Cal., February 9, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Dear Sir: In your editorial in the Breeder and Sportsman of 6th inst, page 143, about my proposition to run four, six or eight dogs against any other breeder's equal number of dogs, misinterprets my meaning. You say that "I go further in the present issue than in the former in my proposition to run black pointers against any or all other families of dogs,or in general parlance against the field."

In the first place, it was not my intention to run the dogs in the Derby and All-Aged stakes proper, but as a separate trial under the same rules as govern the field trials and before the same judges.

My proposition is to run four, six or eight dogs against any other individual breeder's equal number. All the dogs that come against mine in the side-show must be the property of one breeder. Of course he can run some pointers and some setters if he so desires, but mine will all be of the black pointer stock. I think a trial of this sort would be a drawing card for the field trials. Yours truly,

James E. Watson.

The Mascoutah Kennel Club.

The entries for the Mascoutah Kennel Club's bench show which opened at Chicago on Tuesday last and continued until Friday, numbered 953 and were distributed at follows:

The California Wing-Shot Club.

The California Wing-Shot Club will hold its initial meeting of the season at the trap to-morrow. The membership should take the 9 o'clock boat. A cordial invitation is extended to sportsmen generally to be present and participate in the sport on that occasion. Every facility for a splendid season of sport has been secured and there can be no doubt by that the season of this, the oldest wing-shooting organization on the Coast, will be opened with a splendid event.

The Selby Medal.

The opening match for the season for this well-known trophy will take place at Bird's Point on Sunday the 21st inst, at 10 o'clock A. M. An abundance of birds have been secured for this event and there is no question but that the contest will be largely attended.

A new order has been issued by the Treasury Department in regard to importations of animals for breeding purposes. On and after April 1, 1892, no animal which is brought into the United States from foreign countries for breeding purposes shall be admitted free of duty unless the importer furnishes a certificate which shall contain a pedigree showing that "all the ancestors have been recorded in a book of records established for that breed for five generations on the side of the sire and four on the side of the dam," together with the affidavit of the owner, agent or reporter that such animal is the identical animal described, etc. Should the necessary papers not be at hand when the animal arrives, but satisfactory evidence be produced thot they are entitled to free entry. a bond mny be accepted for double the value for the producduction of the proper certificates. This will create consternation among dog importers if the letter of the law is carried out. At present it is simply necessary that the dog itself should be registered.

The annual catalogue of the T. H. Chubb Rod Company for 1892 is one of the most practical and useful ever presented by the angling trade to the public. From it one may secure any and all information necessary or desirable for the enjoyment of sports in this line. The plates of flies are perfect in color and presentation.

Mr. Huber informs us that he found them doing finely and looking in the pink of condition. These puppies are in great demand since their dam appeared so favorably in the recent trials.

Some Little Things.

The Stock-Keeper (England) has the following to say on one of those disgusting and supercillous questions over which the Tittlebat Titmouses of the kennel world love to worry their liliputian intellects. Gods! but we do tremble at the awful results which must follow on the failure to decide this question properly! It says:

"Referring last week to the question respecting the color of the Irish Water Spaniel's eyes, we mentioned that the revised standard of points of the Spaniel Club describes the color as "dark brown." The Hon. Colonel W. Le Poer Trench observes, however, that the copies of the standard of points which have been issued were only proofs, and also states that he was not present when the amendment was moved at the Crystal Palace, neither did he know that the subject would be brought forward. The honorable gentleman considers that the subject is not finally settled, as the proceedings of that meeting have to be confirmed at the next one. It will, no doubt, interest Spaniel men that when the before-mentioned resolution comes up for confirmation the gallant gentleman intends proposing the following amendment:—"That the description of the eye adopted by the Irish Water-Spaniel Club, which was started in Ireland in 1689, be adopted." This is the rich amber-colored eye for which the honorable Colonel has beea fighting so gallantly."

We do trust that the honorable gentlemen having this question in charge will not permit the country to go to the damnation bow-wows on account of any lack of gallantry in their brilliant efforts in this behalf. Let the rich amber-colored eye, by all means, be chosen and let every Water-Spaniel that has it not be damned!

No question of the intelligence and quality of the dog that may shine through the eye but the color of the optic! Rats! say we on all such bosh and driveling idiocy as the color of a dog's eye being a standard of merit.

A more heathenish and senseless theory was never suggested by a set of narrow-minded nincompoops on any question than this. A white hair, a shade of color in the eye enough to disqualify a dog! The sooner such senseless matters are dispensed with the sooner will more sensible men take an interest in the breeding and exhibition of dogs.

We know that the views here expressed will cause many a supposedly wise "dog man" to break out in a torrent of invective and profanity against the writer, but we shall not be alarmed at the railings which such impractical theorists can muster.

The California Kennel Club.

The California Kennel Club met at its rooms, 436 Montgomery street, on Wednesday evening last, President E. P. Schell in the chair. The Southern California Kennel Club notified the club of its acceptance of the proposition of this club to secure the services of J. K. Mortimer, of New York, as judge for the coming shows.

The Club instructed a telegram to Mr. Mortimer offering him a certain sum for his services to judge at this point and Los Angeles.

The Treasurer reported $1,250 of monies in his hands belonging to the club.

The question of giving cash prizes was taken up and considered, but eventually laid over until next meeting, which will be held on the evening of the 17th inst.

The new Wigwam, corner Jones and Eddy, where the last show was held, was selected for the purposes of the coming show.

A regrettable episode occured at a recent exhibition, says the English Stock-Keeper which we should liked to overlook, but the strong views we entertain upon the need of preserving decorum in dog shows and upholding the dignity of the judge's office compel us to mention the matter in the hope that publicity will act as a deterrent to other offenders. The exhibitor who forgot what was due to the judge and to himself, we would remark, was Mr. Edward Taylor; who is well known in Bedlington circles, and is also president of his local canine society. Upon the occasion we refer to Mr. Taylor led his smooth Sheepdog Crossly Tyne into the ring, and being disappointed with the awards lost his temper, and describing the proceedings as a "—— swindle," took his dog out of the ring and the show, and was seen no more. Mr. Taylor is probably by this time thoroughly well ashamed of himself, so we refrain from saying more.

It would seem from the comments of the eastern press that the reports of the field trials of the Pacific Coast Field Trials Club that they are pleasantly surprised at the social features, in other words the spirit of genuine sport shown by the manner in which the trials were conducted. They find but little pleasure in the east in connection with field trials for there it is a matter of sordid business, each kennel striving to win solely for the dollars that may accrue to them on that account.

Mr. E. D. Fulford says that he is disgusted and deeply disappointed at the action of Chicago men and papers in their failure to make any definite arrangements for a match between he and George Klineman. There has been a great amount of bluster and assertion in the Chicago press about this matter to allow it to drop without an effective, definite challenge to Mr. Fulford.

Mr. John A. Logan Jr. has been very sick, seriously so and is far from being a well man yet, though it is to be hoped that he is very much better. His position in the kennel world has not been unimportant and we are sorry to learn of his contemplated retirement. His dogs are to be sold at the coming New York show.

Mr. D. M. Walters, the efficient and popular trainer of field dogs, located at Galt, called upon us on Tuesday last. The obedience and excellent work shown by the dogs handled by him in the recent field trials speaks volumes for his thorough methods of training.

F. W. Skaife, veterinary surgeon, formally of London, has located at 502 Taylor street. He paid this office a pleasant call last week. He seeks to come in touch with the kennel men of the city and vicinity as he pays special attention to canine diseases.

Mr. Henry Huber visited the kennels of Mr. George T. Allender, who has charge of the famous pointer puppies by Duke of Vernon out of Sally Brass II.

The total entries for the Liverpool bench show for this season numbers 5,780, an increase over that of last year of 620.

CAPITAL TURF AND DRIVING CLUB.

Entries for Some of the Spring Races at Sacramento.

The indications are that the coming spring meeting of the Capital Turf and Driving Club will undoubtedly be the most successful racing meeting ever held in this city, outside of those held under tho auspices of the State Agricultural Society each fall. Last year's spring meeting was a great success, and it left the club in a position, financially, to enable it to offer even better purses and stakes, and more of them, than ever before, and that, too, without calling upon citizens for donations.

The club held a meeting on Saturday evening for the purpose of opening and declaring the entries to such stakes as had alreadv closed, and the showing made is an excellent one.

Owing to various other meetings on that evening the number of members present was not large, and no busiuess of importance was transacted other than the announcement of the entries.

But two of the stakes failed to fill—those for the two and three-year-old pacers. It required five to fill in each case, while these had but three each. The others not only filled, but the number of entries were unusually large. They are as follows (for the spring meeting):

THREE-YEAR-OLD TROTTING STAKE.

B. C. Holly, of Vallejo, names ch f Extravagant, by Woodnut, dam Economy.

W. O. Bowers, of Sacramento, names Silver Bell, by Silver Bow, dam Belle Mac.—Sacramento Record-Union, February 8th.

J. Malcolm Forbes, in conversation with the editor of the Turf, Field and Farm to-day, said: "What do you think? There is a horse already registered as Arion,and I am told that I must surrender the name if I want the son of Electioneer with his name entered in the American register. What would you do about it?" The editor replied: "A colt which trots in 2:10¼ at two years old is greater than any register. In the eyes of the world there is but one Arion, and he sold for more money than any horse ever sold for. You might as well ask Mr. Bonner to surrender the name of Maud S. as to ask you to give up the name of Arion." "I agree with you," replied Mr. Forbes. "I shall hold on to the name. If he cannot be registered, why then he will have to stay out. I think he can stand it."

Captain Guy E. Grosse has given E. A. Hammond, of Fairfield, Solano county, a lease of his Anteeo trotting stallion Sunset, 2,29¾, for this season, with the privilege of buying him at the end of the year at a good, round figure. Sunset made a good record as a race horse last year and his breeding and good size make him a valuable horse in any community.

Prejudice and ignorance have given way to Simmons Liver Regulator. It has stood the test.

EQUINE STUDIES.

Study of Form—Increase of Muscular Activity—The Overcheck.

STUDY OF FORM.—One of the latest English fads is a lecture on "form" illustrated by a living specimen noted for the perfection of his physical development, women and girls being the pupils and forming the audience.

A nude figure, or so nearly nude that the costume adopted is decidedly of an African type, or that which is recorded as the first suit worn by our commou progenitor in the Garden of Eden, is paramount in importance, and the advantages of a living figure over a statue, however deftly executed, is manifest.

A member of the Royal College of Surgeons, distinguished as a lecturer on physiology, presents as an "object lesson" to the young ladies in a Mrs. Jopling's school the modern Hercules, Sandow. This is, by far, a superior method of imparting knowledge than presenting ideals in the shape of drawings or lay figures, as form can be studied from the truest standpoint. It is likely that the young women who composed the audience have witnessed the wonderful feats of Sandow, and when unclothed, with the exception of the garb worn by Juangs and other primitive tribes, can see in the volume and play of muscles the source of power which enables him to accomplish what he does.

But with all due respect to the high scientists, potential magnates and celebrated principals of academies where feminines are imbued with knowledge, and with the admission that "the proper study of mankind is man," can scarcely coincide in this part of the curriculum.

Were the object the perpetuation of men who had the brawn and muscle to rival the exploits of the crack athletes or that branch of them who can raise 280-pound dumb-bells as easily as an average dude can twirl his cane, or to impart to the young ladies an expertness which would enable them to choose a husband as far removed from the thin-limbed, narrow-chested, slender specimens of humanity which are so often found in their company good might come. But then again the average suitor who was aware of the course his choice had gone through, and that she was as fully posted on the form of man as she was accomplished in the belle arts, he would hesitate, as he would reasonably anticipate being stripped to the breech-clout, placed on a table and put through the evolutions she had witnessed when Sandow was the exemplar of manly proportion, and reasonably object.

And still again should he be accepted without being subjected to such a vigorous scrutiny, will he not dread the time, which must inevitably come, when a comparison is unavoidable, and if short of the model discarded with as little conpunction as other like changes are made.

But the student, male or female, of equine form, has a definite purpose in view and is not trammeled with any "false delicacy" in the pursuit of knowledge.

Within a few past weeks I have seen El Rio Rey the first time since he was a two-year-old, Salvator and Firenzi for the first time. The article descriptive of this latest English "fad" endorsed the views that I expressed when looking at these turf celebrities, viz., that in place of seeking after ideals careful study should be given to the form, which was one of the main factors in placing them in the very first rank of great racehorses.

From his capacity to out-do all competitors in feats which depended on power, muscular strength, etc., Sandow was selected, the plea being that the pupils in this way would secure a better knowledge of the sources of that power. Therefore, when it is the intention of the observer to breed horses as nearly as he possibly can to the highest class of race-horses he must follow the model before him.

While it cannot be controverted that the scrutiny, however close, of a horse at rest can not be depended upon to give a true line of ability, and that action is nearly as essential as form, configuration is surely the basis to commence with. Further than that high form and undeniably faultless action have to be supplemented with qualities, the possession of which can only be "guessed at" by the shrewdest of judges. Next is a high rate of speed and the faculty of keeping at a rapid pace over a "distance of ground." We are all prone to claim the power to discriminate between speed and endurance from ocular investigation of the animal when at rest.

Twenty-five years ago, and even at a later period, I felt a good deal of confidence in selecting one of two animals of equally good breeding, the victor in a long course, provided also that there was enough difference in shape to justify a preference, but yet so slight that there was a chance for argument.

I have far less confidence now and should hesitate to express a decided preference without the dividing line was plainly marked. This must not be construed to mean that form is of inferior importance in making a choice of a type to guide in breeding racehorses, or that form and action are minor qualities. To produce such horses as the trio mentioned there is soon to be a combination of all the qualities, form, action, speed and endurance, the three last named depending more or less on the first.

It is not my intention to bring in the qnestion of blood, breeding, inheritance or what may be termed ancestral influence, as that is so generally acknowledged to be potent that arguments are unnecessary. Neither shall I attempt a critical analysis of their points or a discussion on the variations exhibited, as that would be far beyond the scope of a short article, and require further study of the animals than was given. Although the generalcharacteristics of each were clearly remembered at the time of examination, there was no intention of minute description, the only measurement the girth of El Rio Rey. That was taken to see how much he fell short of Joe Hooker in the circumference of chest, and as I had a clear recollection that Joe showed 76 inches, I felt sure that El Rio Rey must fall below that by at least three inches, but the steel tape proved that he was fully as big "around the heart" as his stable companion.

There are differences in the forms of Salvator and El Rio Rey, and as I expected, quite a variation from them in that of Firenzi. I would not fancy a stallion which had a feminine appearance, or a mare which looked like a stallion.

Similarity of points there must be when the tests have been the same and equal excellence displayed, and though the difference of sex is not so marked as is found in the Apollo Belvidere and Aphrodite, there are the grand stallions on one side, the nearly faultlessly formed mare on the other. A great boon to the breeders of this coast that there are so many horses here which have gained so high a place in the calendars. Not only by the opportunity to obtain the blood which has gained glorious victories, but also lessons in form which will amply repay the time given to the study. Let the ideal be what it may, should it be much at variance with that which has endured the crucial test of the race course and established the purity of its metal, discard the image, replace fanciful visions with realities built on a sure foundation.

INCREASING MUSCULAR ACTIVITY.—The evening of the day that Arion made his wonderful mark on the Stockton track I was on the train bound for Sacramento. On an adjoining seat sat Professor M——, who has a high record in the musical world—inside of 2:10, to say the least. He had a board on his lap, and on that keys were arranged in the same manner as on the keyboard of a piano. He worked vigorously, rapidly, as though he was eager to emulate the clear action of the colt, swaying his head somewhat after the manner of the famous juvenile, in unison with the movements of the flying fingers. A slight click-click, click-click were the only audible sounds for a bar or two, and then came click, click, click, click—click, or something so nearly like that sound that it appeared as if the fast trot and the flying gallop were the inspiration. It was in the smoking car, and, consequently, the company consisted of the rougher sex, not one of them in all probability conversant with musical matters. I was in the same boat, but, being well acquainted with the professor and his standing in musical circles, it did not take long to realize that he was "working out," preparatory to his labors in the evening at Sacramento, "warming up" for the 3 in 5 race a few hours later. Inquiries proved this to be correct, and when he paused after a rapid brush, answered questions as readily—far more readily, and, I can add, far more intelligently—than the average horse-professor would do under like circumstances. Grotesque and senseless it must have seemed to the lookers-on to see a man laboring with such persistency, and as, at times, enthusiasm flushed from his dark eyes and excitement lent a shade of wildness to his handsome features, it did not take a Bishop or a Tyndall to discover that the prevailing impression was that he was a fugitive from the asylum at Stockton. Still more grotesque when he extracted a huge piece of cake from a paper bag, and while eating kept banging away with the unoccupied hand, and this also was a puzzle, nearly as labyrinthian to myself as the others of the spectators—easily explained, however, and without questioning, which would evidently have been impertinent, was elucidated.

An ardent admirer of fast trotters, he and his son owning some fine specimens of the race, combining Electioneer and Guy Wilkes blood, he could not resist the temptation to see Arion trot. He had to hurry to the train, and his engagement at Sacranento forbade a feed after his arrival at the capital. The advantages of the exercise were apparent, but the anomaly of feeding while at exercise not so easily comprehended. While the fingers, wrists and arms of the pianist are tried as severely as the feet and legs of a fast trotter, the strain on the lungs is not nearly so great. The cake eaten did not encroach on the lung power to the extent which would follow a hearty dinner or interfere with the action of the heart. An empty stomach, however, would impair the powers of the musician far more than it would affect the horse, as a light feed before the bell rang, and, if necessary, a sip of gruel or a glass of sherry between the heats. "brace up" the equine performer. But, owing to a change in the time table, the professor would not reach Sacramento until after the designated hour, and it would have been still more grotesque to hold a handful of cake, a goodly bite of it between his teeth, in view of the audience.

I have learned a great deal, or rather, I have made it a point to obtain information from athletes when in training, and to Wm. B. Curtis, who has so ably conducted the athletic department of the New York Spirit of the Times for many years, I am indebted for what I consider valuable hints in training horses if they were innovations on old-time practices. He was the first, so far as my knowledge extends, to break away from traditions and bring common sense to his aid in dispensing with a good portion of the regular routine, and his success as an all-round athlete, the foremost of his day, was ample testimony in favor of the course he pursued.

Increasing muscular activity, adding to the suppleness of the joints, and perfecting the action, by correction and practice, are essential to pianists and fast trotters. Increasing the power of the lungs, taking away obstructions to arterial action, strengthening the muscles of the whole body, augmenting the nerve force and care of the digestive organs are, in addition to the above, the objective points in training the fast runner, the dancer, the speedy and enduring trotter and the flying galloper. There is little difference in the physiology of human and equine, and the course that will promote the physical capacity of one branch will, in the main, advance the other.

Carmencita, the renowned danseuse, has proclaimed the system she follows in a few words: The oilings of her body reported and the fanciful descriptions of the methods she followed to give elasticity and force to muscles and suppleness to her joints are pronounced false. Hot baths in the morning, "soakings," as she calls them, and dancing the exercise. Doubtless when young she was put through the preliminary courses, much the same as the Palo Alto kindergartens, though far more severe, as I understand them, than colts are subjected under modern professors of the art, but having acquired the proper action, she maintains her powers without the embrocations and "dopes" which find favor in these progressive days.

THE OVERCHECK—Following the denunciations which have prevailed of late against the use of the overcheck, the following paragraph appeared in the "Turf aud Track" department last week:

"The overhead check-rein is refined and steady torture, not only for the strain backward of the neck, but because the horse cannot see the ground on which he is stepping. The swaying of his head from side to side is evidence of his trying to find relief."

The abuse of the overhead check, and for that matter the side check, cannot be too severely denounced, but in place of being more cruel, it is the easiest check ever devised, and, when properly adjusted, a boon to the horse as well as the driver.

Some kind of an apparatus must be used to give proper control of the head of a horse. With quite a number of horses it is indispensable on the score of safety; few, indeed, which do not need it for the comfort of the driver, and as a part of the outfit of a trotting stable; it is of prime necessity. Previous to the invention of the "Kemble Jackson Check," the first name it was known by, and when the side check rein, and that attached to the driving bit, was the only one known, trotters' mouths, in a large majority of cases, were badly injured, and in not a few instances the angle of the lips cut apart to an inch or more above the natural junction. It must be evident to anyone who will give attention to the formation of the mouth of a horse that the angle mentioned must be one of the tenderest places, and the "roof" the least sensitive. This can be demonstrated by placing a pencil or pen-handle in the mouth of the observer and pull:ng it against the joining of the lips, and then press the end of a ruler against the bars on the upper jaw with the same or greater force than in the first trial. When the length of the overcheck is properly adjusted, the horse can hold his head in a natural position withont pressing on the bit, but he cannot throw it down much further. As another proof of the greater sensitiveness of the angles of the lips it is seldom that a side check is broken, whereas an extra strength has to be given the overdraw when a horse acquires the habit of breaking the rein. I cannot recall the breaking of a side check unless it was much worn or when the animal stumbled.

As an adjunct in the education of fast trotters its usefulness cannot be ignored, though in my practice I have endeavored to teach my pupils to trot with their head low, and unless it were necessary to obtain better control, not to tighten it more than was absolutely required. Tight checks are a greater punishment when the wearers are at rest than when in motion. The natural carriage when moving may be so modified when standing that the loose-bearing rein in the active stage will become intolerable when quiescent. I will heartily endorse the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in putting a stop to any practice which entails even slight pain, unnecessarily inflicted. Whether it is the coachman on the box-seat of a carriage, waiting for master or mistress, or the driver who sits in his wagon, or "hitches" a horse with head elevated to a painful degree, arrest and punish to an extent that will insure an abatement of the evil. But a general crusade against something they have not taken steps to investigate is too arbitrary a proceeding to admit of defense, and will surely raise a storm of indignation that will retard beneficent progress. The statement has appeared in print that the intention of the society is to prosecute any and every person using the overcheck. That can hardly be true, as thousands of people would be defendants, and, on that general plea, not one conviction. Every few years there is a repetition of the old charges that check-reins were brutal, and this is a return of the old epidemic, with some changes.

The overcheck is selected as the most vulnerable point to attack, that being encouraged by writers who have little practical knowledge, and therefore do not discriminate between the uses of the appliance and the abuses which, it cannot be denied, are too often the accompaniment.

There are bits, both driving and check, which depend upon cruelty for a recommendation. But with the advance of knowledge in regard to horse equipments, these are rapidly losing favor. With one exception the latest inventions and new patterns of check-bits are on the side of humanity. Nearly all are fashioned so that the bit does not turn in the lips, and the part that strikes the roof of the mouth made to give as little uneasiness as possible. The cut of the McKerron bit, which will be found in the advertisement, will show the latest design.

Overland Jockey Club.

But two days remain to our turfmen in which to make entries in the liberal stakes offered by the Overland Jockey Club, of Denver, Col. No less than $30,000 in stakes and purses are offered during this meeting, which begins Saturday, May 28th, and ends on June 11th. This gives our turfmen ample time to run their horses at the California spring meetings and then participate in the Denver one. The principal stakes are the Colorado Derby, $2,000 added; Overland Handicap, $1,500 added; Pacific Coast Stakes, $1,000 added; Montana Stakes, Knights Templar and Equitable Stakes, with $1,000 added to each. The conditions will be found in an advertisement in another column. The purses range from $300 to $700, and with a fine track, capable and courteous officials, and people that are proud of the racing organization, that the meeting will be a first-class one is certain. Address all communications to J. H. Temple, Superintendent Overland Park, Denver, Col., and enter liberally at once. Letters containing entries, if bearing a postmark denoting that they were mailed before 11 P. M. on the date of the closing of entries—February 15th—will be accepted, and where entries are telegraphed the color, sex and breeding of the entry should be told.

GEORGE W. BLEIL, or "Shorty," as he is familiarly known, gave us a pleasant call last Wednesday and several news items that were interesting in the extreme. This young man, although at present an attache of the celebrated Pleasanton Stock Farm, has been putting his wonderfully successful system of training colts into practice at the Reavis ranch at Chico. He reports that the Reavis consignment will be shipped East on the 25th inst. The horses, the get of Memo, Blackbird, Roy Wilkes, Monroe Chief and Signal Wilkes (son of Guy Wilkes) are in splendid shape. The Memos are a grand lot in appearance, and will be trotters of considerable note beyond all doubt. Gladys B., two years old, by Monroe Chief, is extremely fast, and Mr. Bleil declares that she is going to be hard to beat by anything in the country. Another speedy one at the Reavis place is a black filly by Director, out of Kishemcower. Mr. Salisbury has a weanling (not quite ten months old) by Director, out of a Gibraltar mare,that goes eighths driven to a forty-four-pound cart in 21 seconds. By the way, the owner of this cart, Mr. Bleil, says this is the lightest vehicle that a horse was ever hitched to in California. He has an original system of his own—first driving baby trotters and pacers in front of a pony with the youngster clothed in light harness of his own invention. After their mouths get hardened to the bit and they are used to shouting the babies are hitched to a light cart and driven a fast eighth of a mile every day. They are gaited barefooted, and with a good teaser to accompany them, it would astonish the uninitiated to see them come down the homestretch and make for the stables. There is no such thing as "rattling" the youngsters, and Mr. Bleil has been uniformly successful with everything he has handled according to the rules he has laid down. Among the number that the young man has started on the road to fame might be mentioned Frou-Frou, 2:25¼, trotting, at one year; Fausta, 2:22¾, pacing, and 2:40, trotting, as a yearling; Ferndale, who sold for $6,000 as a yearling at Cleveland in 1891, Sid Fleet, 2:26½ at two years, and Fleet, 2:24.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Newsy Items About the Thoroughbreds and Trotters That Are Familiar to Californians—The Robbers at Guttenberg and How They Work.

New York, January 29, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Picking up a recent copy of your paper, I read a little comment from the pen of my worthy friend "Hidalgo" regarding what I wrote you of Ormonde and the efforts of certain parties here to bring this horse to America. He says: I cannot agree with "Salvator," etc, and speaks of the efforts to make Mr. Haggin buy Ormonde. I do not think I expressed myself in that light, as I am a firm believer in the saying, "We can if we will, but we will not be made." My sole thought when writing as I did was that if Ormonde came to America no one should have him but a Californian.

You should have been at the Stanford sale the other day and saw the fun when Arion's brother was brought out. Every sporting correspondent in the country has gone into ecstacies over this colt. Why? Just because Arion sold for a big figure—just for the same reason that Marcus Daly gave $22,000 for the St. Blaise—Maud Hampton colt. I must say candidly I do not like the colt near as well as some others I saw. I did not like his action. Just a little faulty; but what does it matter—he brought a nice little fortune, and we can only wish his purchaser success. The colts by Palo Alto sold well and were a nice-looking lot, as were also those by Azmoor. Charles Marvin, it is claimed, went recently to Bangor, Maine, and as an evening paper there says: "Charles Marvin, while on a visit a few days ago to the Maple Grove Stock Farm, announced that he had come there for the purpose of buying the stallion Warrener, a full brother to the famous Sunol, and that he had offered the sum of $60,000 for the horse. No sale has yet been made, but horsemen here believe if Marvin has that much money he can get the horse." How like Marvin! Let as fine a looking and as well a gaited colt of great promise, "a full brother to the famous Sunol," go at auction for $14,500 and go offer $60,000 for Warrener!" Yes! and then tell all of the State of Maine what he was after and how much he had to give! That ought to be a good country for a man to go to with money. Just tell the "Yank" you have "so much money" to give for a horse,and especially when it comes to thousands, and I'll bet he will say, "Seein' it's you I guess you can have him for that." That article does not do my friend Marvin justice.

The market here for trotters is about flooded. Buyers are few. Nearly everyone you meet has a "good one" for sale, and most of them at ruinously low prices. It begins to look as if Californians will soon have to sell their trotters at home. There is not enough money in the business to bother with them unless you have a 2:20 horse or better.

I must disagree with my friend "Hidalgo" on one of the statements made in his column of "Trespasses" recently. He was speaking of Mr. S. E. Larabie's selling out all of his trotters and going into the running horse business, and remarks that he must needs have a couple of National Banks behind him or he could not make it go. Look out, Hidalgo, that Mr. Larabie don't buy another National Bank on what he wins out of his runners. He has not got a great number, but has a couple bred in the purple. If you could have seen Poet Scout make Rey del Rey and a good field in the Hickory Stakes look as if they were all tied up to the fence, and he not even extended,you would have considered a long time whether to swap him off for a National Bank or not.

I'll tell you how I feel. I may be prejudiced, but about all the use trotters can be put to unless they are veritable whirlwinds is to carry a man out to Morris Park or down the avenue to the Brooklyn track to see a good running race. When there is more money hung up then I may change my tune,as the sequel to the "Race of Life" is money. Of course I do not doubt but that Hidalgo could out-argue me, but when I say those are my sentiments I leave him no grounds for debate, as they are unchangeable.

So poor old John Treat, the game son of Shiloh, is to come East to race over the winter tracks! What a shame! If you could only see the disgraceful scenes at Guttenberg every day you would sooner see the old warrior's head cut off than see him delegated to take his place among the army of poor dumb brutes that furnish the so-called sport for a lot of thieves and loafers. Nerve a horse—give him an injection—any ruse, cruel or not, so as to get a race out of him.

There is a character about the track at Guttenberg who should be behind prison bars long ago. His mode of making a living is the most degraded I know of. Say you have a horse in a race, and the poor brute has been drummed and hammered until patience has ceased to be a virtue or until exhausted nature demands repose. You are afraid your horse's indisposition will lose for him the race. Around comes the "doctor," as this character is called. "Give him a shot today?" he asks. "Certainly, anything if he can be made hustle." Well, when your horse is ready for the race, just as the bell rings for the horses, around comes the doctor, jabs a hypodermic needle into your horse, gives him a shot, and away he goes to the post. About the time they get off the dose begins to work, and the poor brute, stupefied by the drug, responds as best he can to the persuasion of his none too kind jockey. I have seen the dose take effect before the horses got off, and at one of the breakaways seen the horse dash madly down the track. Congress ran three miles one day like a mad horse. Gladiator ran two and a half miles another day, and both of them had had a shot, I was told. But what is the stuff injected? No one knows, nor do they care to know. It is supposed to be morphine. All the doctor asks in payment for his valued services is that the owner of the horse put a little bet on him, 1 to 2, say $10. He makes quite a nice little sum this way, as such horses as he gives his dose to are, as a rule,outsiders, or rather erratic and unreliable horses, and are consequently at long odds. The Law and Order League are after the leaders of the Guttenberg nest of thieves, and are in a fair way to succeed in eradicating them from the racing world. Why, nearly all the big office-holders of Hudson county, even the Governor, they say, are stock-holders in the track! Rumor now says that Governor Abbott is to be indicted by the Grand Jury for the part he has taken in the trouble. Every day sees the bookmakers being arrested. Each time there is a Justice handy to release them on filing bonds, and back they go to fleece their victims. Any man who would be found dead within a mile of Guttenberg would steal corn from a blind rooster, so there you are—it has now come down to a case of "dog eat dog," and they are robbing each other. It must, and will be stopped, though. I was startled to-day at hearing that a Chicago gentleman had gone to San Francisco to establish a winter track. Look out for that fellow. Don't leave your coat around where he can get it, and the first time you see a nigger with a big 14-shoe hire him and kick that Chicago man out of town. Do not disgrace old California's name by getting any more scoundrels in the business than we have already.

So Maxim has arrived, and also the first of the get of Salvator. Many have been the conjectures as to what that little bay filly will bring. Everyone here wants to see her. They loved Miss Woodford and adored Salvator! Can you blame them for wanting to see this scion of a royal line,this heir presumptive to the equine throne? Much speculation has been indulged in among racing men here as to what horse Mr. Haggin was after. Maxim seems to suit them all pretty well. The Sir Modreds, Cheviots and Darebins are just beginning to attract attention here. A great many do not like them, but I predict that they will all want them next year.

John Happy, the full brother to George Kinney, is also just coming to the front. Happy is a good-looking horse, and as he was not raced much,I look to him to get a good one or two. They all have a world of speed. The two-year-old Bunker Hill ran a race at Guttenberg last week in which he made a good showing. He won easily, running three furlongs in 36¾ seconds, with 108 pounds up. The track was none too good, either. His dam is Jongleuse, by Alarm. It is hard work to get at the yearlings here, as my time is limited, and will be more so until the middle of March. Then I am in hopes of being able to give you an idea of how the Californians stand. The entries for a number of the big stakes have closed, or are about to close, and we can then get at the names of those raised in California.

Sir Rae, by Alta, one of the colts sold here by R. Porter Ashe, is the best all-round horse at Guttenberg. He is a hard horse to beat up to a mile, and over that none of them have a license to race with him.

I heard quite a lengthy discussion as to the merits and demerits of the plan of training horses advanced by Gilbert Tompkins, of San Leandro, as to swimming a horse in order to assist in developing his speed and stamina. "Golly," said one old-timer, "tell you what it is, we ought to have one of them there swimmin' baths here. A good, long one. Then take all the horses out, cut 'em loose and swim 'em clean to the end of the bath and back. All them as couldn't go to the end and back, let 'em drown. Keep at 'em and we could weed out all the quitters in a couple of days." The scheme is plausible, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Tompkins will be able to prove he has the valuable plan he speaks of.

I met Dr. Ross here yesterday. He has just returned from England. He is on his way out there, and will no doubt tell you all about his trip.

Longfellow, with 84 representatives on the turf, heads the list of winning sires last year with $186,340 to his credit. Of the 84 starters 50 were returned winners; seven of the remainder were second on various occasions, and eight secured third places aside from those mentioned as first and second, leaving nineteen unplaced horses. The 84 head started in 1,164 races, of which they won 227; were second in 148, third in 177 and unplaced in 611. Poet Scout heads the list with seven starts, three wins, one second and twice third and $27,040 won; next comes Longstreet, with eigheeen starts, sixteen wins, one second and one third and $20,465. The following started in over fifty races during the year: Lonely, 67; Landseer, 59; The Forum, 59; Lannas, 52; Lotion, 51.

Longstreet was by far the best of his get.

The following mares arrived here yesterday from England: Lady Kidbrooke by Southampton, out of Livadia by Scotish Chief; Decoy by Munster out of Ruse by Pretender; Brown filly, 3, by Valour out of Miss Jay by Blinkhoolie. Rushlight, by Friar Rush out of Anville by Macaroni, Kate Allen, by Barcaldine out of Katherine by Scottish Chief. This mare is a grand-looking animal and will surely prove a good one. Moss Rose by Kisber, out of Schirene by Macaroni' and Merry Nell by Barcaldine, out of Gaiety by Albert Victor.

They are to go to August Belmont, Jr.

There were bought at the same time three studs, only one of which I have the breeding of. He is the three-year-old colt "The Top," by Uncas (son of Stockwell), out of Toiletto by Speculum, her dam Vanity by Touchstone, out of Garland, by Langor.

I will get the breeding of the others for next letter.

Eclipse—by Kyrle Daly—Billow, a good performer, has been sent West by his owners, Sennett and Wurn.

Imp. Tocques, dam of La Tosca, died at the Nursery stud last week. She and a full sister to La Tosca sold for $10,500 at the last Belmont sale.

Jockeys Garrison and Bergen have been reinstated. Garrison rides for Marcus Daly next year.

Fitzpatrick, commonly known as "Daredevil Fitz," has returned to the saddle, and will be seen with Messrs. Daly and Gideon next year.

The following sweepstakes will be hailed with delight by all true horsemen. We are surely coming back to the good old times again.

A new stake to be known as the Melbourne Match Stake will be run at the spring meeting of the new Kentucky Association. The stake is for two-year-olds at five furlongs, to be run the second day of the spring meeting of 1892, colts to carry 118 lbs., fillies 115 lbs.; $500 entrance, with $1,250 added by the Melbourne Stud; one starter only, to be named two days before the race. The stake closed with sixteen entries. There ought to be more of such stakes given throughout the country. The full text of the terms on which the stake is to be run are very liberal.

The colt Pescador is often spoken of here, and great anxiety is expressed as to whether or not he will prove the "dark horse" next year.

Several bets have been made as to the respective merits of Yorkville Belle and Yo Tambien, all being in favor of the latter. It is just possible they may meet this year in one of the big three-year-old stakes.

Tournament has been running out all winter, and may not be worked until late in the season. He is not broken down.

Sir John will be a hard horse to beat in the early spring handicaps. His full brother, Sykeston, a grandly-developed horse, will also prove a bread-winner, and will need watching when he is cut loose.

Tenny, the great, has been fired. I saw him a short while ago. He looked like a three-year-old, and was as playful as a kitten. He will be right among them this year, and "Snip" Donovan, his trainer, says he is as good as he ever was in his life.

A chestuut colt by Sir Modred out of Trade Dollar, belonging to the Burridge Bros., is well thought of. He is a good looker and reported to be very fast. Salvator.

Grease and Scratches.

This disease is the result of bad care, neglect, poorly ventilated buildings and dirty surroundings. Grease is, in the first stages, an inflammation of the sebaceous glands of the legs, but soon extends beyond the limits of its origin and involves the deep-seated structures. White legs are more subject to this disorder than those of any other color, and it is seen more frequently in the hind than fore legs. This is due to the fact that the circulation of the hind legs is further away from the heart than the fore, thereby being weaker. The vitality and flow of blood is stronger in the fore legs, hence they can resist this ailment which fixes with impunity on the hind legs. The circulation in the hind legs is more circuitous, being more angular and not so straight up and down. The stalls also are drained from the manger to the gangway, and all the contamination of the space in which the horse is confined flows toward the hind feet. Grease is not often seen in well-conducted stables. Animals that are worked in brick yards, dirt wagons, canal boats and dirty alleys and streets are more liable to this disease. It is also seen in horses where the hair is cut away from the heels, exposing them to the operations of cold and wet. Nature intended the hair as a protection, and it should not be cut away from the limbs, as the circulation is more tardy in the extremities than any other part of the body. The application of cold water is another cause when applied when the legs are muddy. The dirt is washed off, but the legs are chilled and soon become colder, because of the moisture they retain and the evaporation which takes place. Allow the mud to be washed off the limbs when dirty. Take several wisps of straw and rub them until the surface is quite dry, and the absence of wet will greatly add to the comfort of the animal; the friction which is applied will stimulate the circulation and increase the warmth of the legs; the dirt is pretty well removed, and what is left will, when dry, fall off when brushed in the morning. This disease is also seen in horses which have been kept in good stables and are turned out in the cold months of the fall to feed in wet pas tures and when the grass is poor and hard to get.

The first symptoms of grease is enlargement of the legs with heat, if the skin of animal is observed. He is noticed to be uneasy in his stall, occasionally stamps his hind feet; the hair is loaded with scurf and the animal is noticed to scratch one leg against the other; the hair soon begins to stand on end and the parts exude a thick, unctuous moisture, which hangs upon the hair in heavy drops. The secretion is offensive and emits a remarkably pungent odor, which, when once smelt, is never forgotten. In a great many cases men continue to work their horses when in this condition, and the next symptom that is noticed is a lameness; skin swells, the cracks become deep and wide lines of division ulcerate, and then a discolored and unhealthy pus mingles with the discharge. The odor grows more offensive and horses become still more lame if no remedy be applied to check the disease. The leg enlarges, proud flesh or fungoid granulations sprout from the lines of ulceration; the granulations grow in bunches and have a rugged surface. Often the masses are of great size, and shake as though about to fall with every movement of the foot; the points become dry and hard from exposure, their nature turns from fungoid granulations to that resembling more the bunches that have been named "grapes." These bunches are insensitive, but the limb itself becomes very sensitive, the gentlest touch causing pain and the leg is instantly snatched up to the body. I have seen horses which would suppress their urine so as to avoid the splashing on the legs. The ends of straws sometimes irritate them. One peculiarity about this disease is that the foot in the greased leg generally grows very fast and large; the irritation which involves the leg causes the growth of horn to become stimulated.

Treatment—If there is any hair on legs, clip it off; the hair on the legs is of no service now, as it helps to heat the skin and retains the discharge. If the leg is merely hot and scurfy cleanse thoroughly with soft soap and warm water, then apply the following lotion: Carbolic acid, tincture of benzoin, sulphate of zinc, acetate of lead, one-half ounce each; water, one pint. Put on a loose bandage after applying the above. Do this three times a day until healed, also feed soft diet and give a light physic. When the cracks with ulceration appear adopt the same treatment, but use the following prescription instead; Iodoform, half ounce; chloride of zinc, half ounce; lineeed oil, one quart. Apply this three times a day. When the case has so far advanced that you have these spurious granulations formed, take a sharp-edged flat iron like a blacksmith's fire shovel and heat to a red heat and cut these granulations off. The heat is necessary, so as to arrest the hemorrhage which will take place. Before operating saturate the limb with a solution of chloride of zinc, also bathe afterwards; it may be necessary to apply this treatment the second or even the third time, so as to get rid of these granulations. Give internally the following: Hypo-sulphite of sodium, two ounces; Fowler's solution of arsenic, two ounces; water one pint. Give one ounce twice a day before eating, also give a little walking exercise. Walking seems to alleviate the pain, also reduces the enlargement of the limbs and helps to relieve the animal of its stiffness.

This affection, as a rule, is peculiar to cold and wet months of the year, but sometimes is seen at all seasons. In this disease, as in grease, clipping the hair from the heels is one of the chief causes, although some horses are more predisposed to it than others. Drenching the legs with water and not thoroughly drying after will also cause scratches. The mud and filth of the streets in the fall and spring are inciting causes. If the cracked heels are bad poultice three or four times a day with hot flaxseed poultices, give light physic and feed on soft diet. After poulticing apply the following ointment to the affected part; Sulphate of zinc, two drams; acetate of lead, three drams; sulphur, half ounce; carbolic acid, one dram; lard, four ounces. Rub this ointment in three times a day. In bad cases give plenty of rest. Where ulceration and sloughing have taken place, give internally the same prescription as I prescribed for grease. Apply hot cloths to the legs and also use the following wash: Glycerine, one ounce; permanganate of potash, two drams; water, two ounces. Apply three or four times a day. When the ulceration is stopped use the ointment. When the hair is clipped off the heels I have found glycerine to be a good preventative, when lightly applied, before the animal is put to work in muddy and cold weather.—Dr. J. Fabian Magor, in Clark's Horse Review.

To the Los Angeles Association.

SAN FRANCISCO, February 10, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Two articles in your last issue, signed hy a Mr. Lichtenberger, of the Los Angeles track, need an answer, as this honorable gentleman, in an argument against the paid judge system, sees fit to drag my name through two columns of venomous vituperation, through which, however, a lawyer's cunning weaves such expressions as: "we are told," "if they did," "it is claimed," "'tis said," etc., leaving but little to be said when the statements thus prefaced are eliminated.

Mr. L. Lichtenberger starts with the erroneous impression that I am going out of the horse-breeding business, which (as I consider that I have been very successful) is very far from my intention.

I did desire to sell Eros, and had I obtained my figure for him, would then have felt obliged to sell my broodmares.

I have never given any attention to racing, except where my own stock was engaged, and have only raced intended broodmares and the offspring of my horse, in order to increase the selling value of the others; and with their sale, should certainly retire until the professional judge system becomes universal on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Lichtenberger,in trying to justify the notorious judging in the Los Angles free-for-all of 1891, wisely commences with the second heat, barely mentioning the close finish of the first heat in 2:18, between Frank M., Silas Skinner and Wanda, with McKinney just inside the flag, laying up the heat—plainly, a rank violation of the rules. If the "horses from the North" were in combination against McKinney, their drivers showed poor judgment in going so fast when not pushed, over a four-cornered track, where the turns were not thrown up, and equal to a mile in 2:17 (the fastest record of any of the trio) over a properly laid-out course.

Mr. Lichtenberger recites a pitiful tale of the tedious scoring for the third heat, in which McKinney, 2:12½, with the advantage of the pole, could not score up with horses just off a 400-mile ocean voyage, with records from 2:17 to 2:17¾, and unwittingly makes another argument in favor of the paid judge, that the ostensible object of his articles was to combat.

He speaks of McKinney being pushed into the weeds by Wanda, and held against the outer rail; about their wheels being locked for a hundred yards; of Frank M. squee ing his pet, McKinney, and "setting down in front of him;" yet says he did not punish them. Is such a being a fit person to be in the stand to uphold the rules or argue against the paid judge system.

When relating, at length, the incidents of this heat, why does not Mr. Lichtenberger mention Wanda being cut down by McKinney, and the treatment her driver received from the judges and their officers, when he stopped in front of the stand to show her bleeding head, torn shoulder, arm and knee, and complain?

Mr. L. Lichtenberger, over his own signature, says: "Rules 72, 73, 74 and 75 of the A. T. A. were repeatedly violated * * * still the judges did not rule them out." Is this the rigid enforcement of the rules called for by the charter of the A. T. A.? Should not a person who unblushingly writes as above be forcibly removed from the stand and replaced by an honest and competent paid judge?

In mentioning the patrol judge and his volunteer assistant, no mention is made of the evident fairness of this man, as shown by his conceiving the idea of carrying Durfee in triumph to the weighing stand and his own willing assistance, or his orders to Vioget, driver of Wanda, when making his complaint, to "Git out of here, or I'll have the boys mob ye!"

The innuendoes of cowardice against Mr. Charles Durfee I can pass, as all who are acquainted with his daring style of driving know that it is ridiculous to think of his being "chased into the weeds" by first one horse and then another.

Messrs. Keating, McGraw and Vioget are horse owners and breeders; have lived in California and been identified with her interests for a score of years; have driven on the grand circuit for years, during which time they have never been fined or censured, or had their names besmirched, and on the reputable courses are too favorably known to need defenders.

Mr. L. Lichtenberger devotes considerable space to eulogy of himself and fellow-judges that might more properly be left to others, and winds up by a charge against Wanda and driver. To all charges of this character I will state that the starting judge (name unknown) told me in the stand, and in the presence of the other two judges, and they did not dissent: "Mr. Burke,we are satisfied that your mare Wanda has been driven fairly, and to win. No foul driving was done by your man. And from the beginning to the end of the race, no complaint was made against her."

The gist of the entire matter is in the line (quoted from Mr. Lichtenberger): "Thousands of Los Angeles money went into the pool box." Had the money left the town of departed booms, the payment of interest on mortgages would be even rarer than now,and the judges,who had to obtain their customers from among their townsmen, could not afford, from a business point of view, to decide otherwise; or, that greatly abused rule, "The greatest good to the greatest number" may have been their guiding star.

If Frank M. committed a foul in the final heat,he should not only have had the heat taken away from him, but they were compelled to place him last, or distance him, instead of which he was given second place, in rank violation of the rules; thus again showing the need of a paid judge.

Men attain and retain prominence in their several callings through study, aptitude and special training. A proper judge in the stand can only acquire knowledge in the same way. The politician-director of a district fair, with one week's experience in a year, no matter how fair he may intend to be, cannot creditably fill the place.

The professional judge is a crying necessity. Wherever he has been tried he has been engaged again. On many tracks in the East he is regularly employed, to the satisfaction of the association and the public.

The success of the runner in the United States dates from the time of stakes and the paid starter.

The trotters have stakes, and will have more.

Let us have the paid judge

Is the sincere wish of

FRANK H. BURKE.

The stallion Alcryon and his owner, Frank I. Noble, have been finally expelled from membership in the National Trotting Association last Wednesday. This decision was reached by the Board of Review at its meeting. The history of the case is well remembered.

Why suffer from dyspepsia and headache when Simmons Liver Regulator will cure you?

Pleasanton Items.

Monbars, the champion race two-year-old of the world, is slowly regaining his health.

Emma Nevada, the four-year-old daughter of James Madison and of Lady Dudley the thoroughbred mare, is still at Pleasanton taking lessons from Professer Starr. It was the intention of Mr. Salisbury and Col. Thornton to take her to Kentucky to show breeders there what Madison is capable of as a sire, but she showed so well that it was thought best to keep her with the racing string of fast winners which are to go down the grand circuit the coming season.

Almonition, the four-year-old son of Alcona Jr., sire of Silas Skinner and Pansy, daughter of Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22, is at work and the suspicion of lameness having left him he is showing some of his last year's speed.

Chaldian, the black inbred Mambrino Wilkes colt, is doing well under the tuition of the master hand of Starr.

Directum, the three-year-old son of Director and Stemwinder, the daughter of of Venture 2:27, has been laid up for two weeks but has his speed shoes on again, and pretty fast ones they are, too, when Starr lets go of his head for an eighth. If he does well he will take a lot of beating this year, and it is extremely doubtful if there is a three-year-old that can do it. He is a racehorse and it will be a racehorse that heads him to the wire in any heat of a race. He gets stout staying blood from the "Black Whirlwind," from the sire of his dam, Venture, and also from his great-great-grand sire Langford. All this hot-do-or-die stuff tells in the finishing heats of a long race.

Captain Griffith's pacer is doing well and under Starr's velvet hand is getting more quiet, better tempered and more easily rated every day. While he may not prove another Direct he will bear watching down the circuit.

Steve Whipple looks and moves well, but it is too early to tell whether he will come up to the form which Salisbnry and Starr require to beat the pick of the East.

Col. M. F. Tarpey has a four-year-old Anteeo filly, dam by Nutwood, in Starr's hands, and to say that she is a high class individual and a good-gaited resolute goer does not do her justice. Col. Tarpey has invested largely in fine horses and he deserves to have a grand circuit winner.

The yearlings are all doing well and showing great speed, and they prove that Director sires as much early speed as any of them if his produce are trained. Heretofore Mr. Salisbury has been a believer in the policy of later development, but the institution of so many big colt stakes necessitate early training and Starr is now doing it. Salisbury and Starr, too, seem much pleased with the two Director-thoroughbreds colts bought from Col. Thornton. They trot and with the greatest resolution.

Mr. Salisbury is becomming more and more of the opinion that to win in the great circuit trotting heats all of them in 2:15 and better there must be hot stuff close up, but he don't want any modern sprinting blood, but the "old weight-carrying, long-distance blood that can go four miles and have to be run into a stone corral to stop it even then," as he puts it.

Prof. Starr is to have a new pupil in the person of Bessie L., who is bred somewhat on the lines of Nancy Hanks. She is half Director, one-quarter Happy Medium and one-quarter stout thoroughbred. She is in $50,000 worth of stakes and if she does well will be near the front of good breeding and good teaching go for anything.

Lately Judge Greene sold a yearling filly by Director, out of Pansy, to Mr. Adams, of Oakland, for $1,000, and now she is to be put in Starr's hands for two years to be fitted for the California Colt Stakes. She ought to be an oat winner rather than a chromo earner, and no doubt she will be, as she carries the best of oat-winning blood.

The Del Sur pacer is doing as well as could be expected, as he was just from the range when sent here a month ago, and is not hard enough to be sent fast yet. He showed phenomenal speed last year, and if he has it this year and can carry it to the end of a race, he will be troublesome in the green classes, and perhaps in any class.

Margaret S. goes to Terre Haute to be bred to Axtell and handled for a low record till Starr goes East, when she will join the string of circuit winners. Mayday, the only matron in all horse history with two better than 2:15, has gone to Kentucky to be bred there to Direct. She is heavy in foal to Director. As her foals have brought from $8,000 to $25,000, which was refused for Margaret S., some one of our wealthy breeders should have bought her. What a foal she would have had to Stamboul, Bay Rose or Palo Alto! And she would have made a name for either of them by her produce.

Montana as a Racing Country.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—My first experience at racing in Montana has proved to be very satisfactory and at the same time profitable. Before leaving California I mapped out the places I considered the best and most convenient as shipping points, in order not to have too many changes for my horses. But what a difference I found when I got there. The racing towns are so far apart that the expenses are enormous and if a man is not fortunate enough to win or have a stiff bank account at his back he is in a very sad predicament; in fact, the chances are very favorable for his horses having some other owner before he can leave the country—that is if he has not good friends to fall back on.

Living is very high, hay, oats and straw outragously steep in price, especially at Butte. The good nature and civility of the officers of the different associations, however, overbalance the extortion of the feed men, so that you see I have no "kick coming" after all my criticism.

I had not the pleasure of racing at the pretty town of Deer Lodge, but I did manage to take a trip over to see the place and one of the best day's racing which I had the good fortune to witness for many a day, and the management of the association seemed to be almost perfect. My first start was at Missoula, a thriving and at the same time a very beautifully-situated place of between 3,000 and 4,000 inhabitants. The town is situated on the banks of the river which the town is named after, and about fifty miles from the celebrated establishment of Marcus Daly.

The Missoula Association is conducted in a very able manner by its officers, and the Secretary, C. B. Cook, is the right man in the right place. He is one of the hardest-working men I ever saw and the most accommodating as well. The chances are favorable that through his energy Missoula will become one of the best racing towns in Montana.

My next venture was made at Butte and I found it a profitable one, as my horses commenced to get used to the climate of that high region. Butte is a city of about 30,000 inhabitants, and its great resources are mining, which is carried on extensively. But mining does not seem to dull the hearts of the Butte sporting men, for there are a goodly number of them, as the records of the betting and the gate receipts will show. Butte is one of the best racing towns of its size from San Francisco to New York, and I cannot find words to express my esteem of the management of the association. The track and stalls are all that can be expected or asked for the accommodation of horsemen.

Great Falls is another thriving town of about 5,000 inhabitants, nicely situated on the east bank of the Missouri river. It has a very good mile and very fair accommodations for visitors that come there to attend the races. This I will say of the officers of Great Falls' Racing Association—that I have never been treated better anywhere than I was by these gentlemen, and if any mistake was made it was not intentional and will be rectified later on. My best wishes are for the success of the Great Racing Association.

I come now to the capital city of the State, Helena. Helena is rather a straggling sort of town of about 25,000 inhabitants. It has been a great mining town, and is reputed to be so still, but in racing Helena is far ahead in its management of all the other associations in Montana, good as the others are. Everything seemed to be thoroughly systematized, so it should be, as the institution there is managed by a skilled secretary of long experience and good, sound judgment. It is my hope that all associations will continue to put in and keep the best and ablest men in office, and if I never visited Montana again for business, my best wishes are with the associations. I hope they will continue the good work they have undertaken in supporting the royal sport. Respectfully,

MATT STORN.

J. White, Cleveland, $2500. Elkhorn, by Onward, J. F. Daly, $2800.

NATIONAL TROTTING ASSOCIATION.

The New Rules and Regulations Submitted to the Congress.

NEW YORK, February 10, 1892.

The National Trotting Association's Committee on Rules has, after three days' work, completed the compilation of the association's new rules and regulations for the coming two years, and the congress will possibly spend the same number of days in their ratification. These new by-laws are almost identical with those now in force. An important change was made in rule 2, providing for entries. Section six, under the new rules, reads as follows: "Every entry shall constitute an agreement that the person making it, owner, driver and horse, shall be subject to the rules, regulations and by-laws, and will submit all disputes and questions arising out of such entry to the authority and judgment of this association."

Another important change was made in the rule relating to the death of owners of horses entered in the future events. The new rule provides that in case of the death of either, the heirs of deceased may leave the horse in and continue to pay, or withdraw the horse without being liable for entrance fees or other payments, which, under the old rule, the heirs were responsible for.

According to one of the old rules there were three judges appointed, but under this new rule these three are empowered to appoint an additional person to start races, with full powers to enforce the rules while the horses and drivers are on the track.

Rule 28, defining the powers of judges, was amended giving them power to disqualify any horse which, through balking or obstinacy, delayed a race by refusing to come down to the pole in scoring.

The question regarding the abolition of pools was discussed at length, but laid on the table to be considered to-morrow.

The following officers were elected: President, P. H. Johnson of Lexington, Ky.; First Vice-President, David Bonner of New York; Second Vice-President, F. L. Coombs of Napa, Cal. The Directors for the Eastern Districts are: George M. Stearns, M. G. Buckley and C. D. Palmer; Directors for the Atlantic District, Geo. Warcher, J. C. Sibley and Frank Bowers; Directors for the Central District, G. M. Fogg, W. M. Edwards and W. R. Allen; Directors for the Western District, W. C. Blake, John L. Mitchell and Charles Schwartz; Directors for the Pacific District, M. T. Smith, J. D. Carr and S. Rothschild.

The Montana Circuit.

Owners of thoroughbreds, trotters or pacers have great inducements offered them to go on the Montana circuit this year, as a perusal of the advertisement of the various associations in another page will show you at a glance. But it should not merely be glanced over, but possessors of race horses should scan the "ad" carefully and make liberal entries. It will be observed that entries to the running stakes close on March 1, 1892; to the trotting and pacing events July 1, 1892. The fun begins at Glendive on June 21, then follows in rapid succession meetings at Miles City, Deer Lodge, Dillon, Anaconda, Butte, Helena, Great Falls and Missoula. A more hospitable or enthusiastic people, or a more courteous and obliging host of officials cannot be found on earth than will be met with on this circuit, and, in addition, money is wagered like so much water, so "sporty" are the race-goers. Every coast turfman who has ever "taken in" this circuit has returned home with naught but words of praise for the management—and generally with pockets heavily laden with golden eagles. No less than $125,000 in stakes and purses are offered to owners of horses, and the conditions are liberal in the extreme. Read the advertisement on page 179, and enter only in the stake races.

Foals Reported from Palo Alto.

IT AFFORDS us much pleasure to announce that Mr. Jos. Cairn Simpson, the founder, and for many years the proprietor and editor of this journal, whose reputation as a writer on equine topics is unexcelled, has consented to become a regular contributor to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN every week. The practical knowledge that will be imparted through his articles will be of inestimable value to every horseman.

Announcement.

I have entered into an agreement with the proprietor to furnish "matter" for a department of this paper, which will be entirely under my control and for which I am alone responsible.

In a brief salutatory it may be proper to state that this department will have a general scope, including whatever I think will be of interest to those who are engaged in breeding and rearing horses, and the still larger number who have a fondness for "legitimate sport."

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

Breeders Should be Protected.

A great many of our Eastern turf correspondents have wondered why it is that Australia is such a poor market for trotting horses, and why it is that so very few horses leave California for the Antipodes. It is not the fault of the breeders so much as it is the laws of the land that protect the horse-jobbers who have ruined the market by purchasing poor trotters without pedigrees and introducing them into the colonies with manufactured pedigrees which would put to shame the most valiant of the old-time pedigree cranks who made pedigrees for any horse whenever called upon to do so. Last week we received a letter from a Californian in which was noted the fact that there was standing for public service there "An Electioneer stallion out of a mare by Red Wilkes, he by Guy Wilkes, out of Hambletonian Lass; second dam by Electricity 2:17; third dam Goldsmith Maid 2:14, etc. He is an iron grey and was bred at Palo Alto, and has won races at all distances; a great weight-puller and a typical American trotting horse." Our correspondent, who is a prominent horseman, called around to see the youngster that was "bred in the purple" and advertised as a typical American trotting horse, and was astonished to see a stout, fourteen-hand horse without any claims to distinction except a small head and heavy mane and tail.

Such "samples" as these have killed the business of exporting trotters to the Antipodes. The astute Australians are, as a class, the peers of any horsemen in the world, and, when they see such miserable specimens, is it any wonder they become very much disgusted with the long-tailed trotters from America? Some well-bred ones have been sent, but they proved impotent, and the Americans that sold them are never forgotten and would receive a warm reception should they set foot on the shores of Kangaroo land.

The McKinley Bill has done much toward protecting Americans from receiving anything but the very best. All animals shipped to our shores must in every respect be all that is claimed for them, otherwise they will not be allowed to leave.

The law is printed below. There should be a similar law passed here and no animal should be allowed to go to a foreign country, unless he is just as represented. No other means can ever be adopted to restore the confidence of our Australian and South American neighbors, until such a measure is passed.

IMPORTATION OF ANIMALS FOR BREEDING PURPOSES, ETC.

TREASURY DEPARMMENT, Secretary.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 30, 1890,

TO COLLECTORS AND OTHER OFFICERS OF THE CUSTOMS:

Paragraphs 482 of the free list of the Act of October 1, 1890, prescribes as follows:

"Any animal imported specially for breeding purposes shall be admitted free. Provided, that no such animal shall be admitted free unless pure bred of a recognized breed, and duly registered in the book of record established of that breed: And provided further, that certificate of such record and of the pedigree of such animal shall be produced and submitted to the custom officer, duly authenticated by the proper custodian of such book of record, together with the affidavit of the owner, agent, or importer that such animal is the identical animal described in said certificate of record and pedigree. The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such additional regulations as may be required for the strict enforcement of this provision."

This provision of the statutes makes a radical change in the preceding law, under which animals imported for breeding purposes were admitted free of duty, and in order that it may be uniformly and properly complied with, the following regulations are hereby prescribed:

1. In all cases of importation and entry of animals claimed to be exempt from duty under the said provision, the importer must produce to the collector of Customs at the time of entry, in addition to the requisite invoice duly authenticated by the United States Consular Officer, a certificate of purity of breed, given by the breeder of the animals, which must be accompanied by a certificate of identification, signed and sworn to by the importer. The importer must also produce a proper pedigree of the animals, which, in the case of horses, should refer to the English or American stud book, and in the case of cattle, to the different herd books, such as "Short Horn," "Herefordshire," "Devon," "Ayrshire," etc., as the case may be. Upon the production of these proofs, and in case the animals are found on inspection to have properties and qualifications essential to the improvement of breed, free entry may be granted.

2. With regard to paragraph 463 of said Act, concerning the additional free entry of "Animals brought into the United States temporarially for the purpose of exhibition or competition" and "teams of animals including their harness and tackle" and the wagons or other vehicles actually owned by persons emigrating from foreign countries to the United States with their families, and in actual use for the purpose of such immigration, the regulations prescribed by Articles 395, 396, and 397 of the General Regulations in 1894 will still apply.

3. As to the further provision in said paragraph 483 for "wild animals intended for exhibition in zoological collections for scientific and educational purposes, and not for sale or profit," free entry of such animals will only be allowed upon the production to the Collector at the time of importation of the affidavits of one or more of the principal officers of the institution giving such exhibitions for the purposes mentioned, showing that the animals are specially imported as the property of such institution, and are not intended for sale or profit. Such animals when imported for use in circuses, menageries, or other like institutions, and intended to be exhibited for gain, will be charged with duty.

(SIGNED) WILLIAM WINDOM, Secretary.

The above law is all right for the importation of stock, but there should also be a law for exportation founded on a similar basis. Foreign nations would not object to such protection for agents could then come to America and know that they will not be deceived. Our authorities, Wallace's Register and Bruce's Stud Book would then be fulfilling part of their mission in enlightening the world. We hope the legislators at Washington will give this matter due consideration and thus encourage our breeders who are willing to sell and the foreign nations that are willing to buy, provided the laws will protect them in all their transactions.

The interests of trotting horse breeders demand protection, and the doors of our great foreign markets should not be closed because unscrupulous falsifiers and jobbers dare to crowd their refuse on to an unsuspecting and unprotected people.

FROM present indications most of our "big breeders" intend taking in the circuits on the other side of the Rockies with the pick of their stables. Never in the history of the Golden State have Californians entered so liberally at the East as in the stakes to be contended for during the coming racing season. But it's an ill wind that blows no one any good, and if our wealthiest breeders see fit to breed horses exclusively for the Eastern market and race their best animals over there, the timid, small breeder will come out and feel that he is fairly in the swim at last, and his success will spur him on until he invests his winnings in royally-bred matrons and stallions in addition to those he has developed himself on the tracks of their native State. After awhile there will be enough proud new blood in the breeders' ranks to build a track and grand stands in the vicinity of San Francisco that will be at once things of beauty and joys forever, and the Eastern campaigns will no longer be a novelty to the Californians that are now entering on the other side of the mountains. When this comes about California will not be considered a mere breeding ground for fast horses of all gaits, but a spot where the kings and queens of the turf are raced for rich stakes as well. It was thought by many that when the Dwyer brothers concluded not to race their horses west of the Alleghanies any more, and when Green Morris and W. L. Scott followed in their footsteps, that racing in the West had received a severe blow, from which it would take several years to recover. This view proved a fallacious one, for, like the characters sung of in "The Mikado," "they never would be missed," on account of the steady march of new, young, ambitious turfmen into the turf field the older men had just vacated with their strings of cracks that carried off most of the choice stakes.

WHETHER the Electioneers are race horses, or whether they are not, the prices brought for Baby McKee, Worth, Election Bell and Palo Alto Belle within the past fortnight show most conclusively that wealthy horsemen believe they are likely to race a little. The aggregate amount for the four mentioned was $69,600, an average of $17,400. Barnhart, brother to Allerton, 2:09¼, brought $15,000 at auction in Lexington this week, Drextell, brother to Axtell, 2:12, was knocked down at $7,500, while Mary Marshall, 2:12¾, in foal to Allerton, passed into other hands at $12,850. To offset this, Palo Alto Belle, by Electioneer, dam Beautiful Bells, with a record 9¾ seconds slower than the daughter of Billy Wilkes, sold for $15,100, or $2,250 more than the Iowa mare; Sunol's untried-in-public two-year-old brother brings $14,500 or $7,000 more than Axtell's brother Drextell, while Baby McKee, two-year-old brother to Arion, tops the five-year-old brother to Allerton (Barnhart) in public estimation to the extent of $10,000. Verily all the talk about the Electioneers not being race horses amounts to little, so long as they bring such encouraging prices. As it has not been the policy of Senator Stanford to send the Electioneers (or the Piedmonts and Bentons) into races to any great extent, it does not necessarily follow that they cannot race well.

The Pacific Coast entries to the various rich stakes to be raced for at Washington Park, Chicago, this year, is unavoidably crowded out of this issue. They will be published next week and will verify the statements made that nearly all of our large owners of thoroughbreds will be there with strings of horses and will not come away empty-handed.

ON ACCOUNT of the heavy pressure of new advertisements that came in after a portion of this journal was printed we have been compelled to omit a number of interesting articles as well as our Answers to Correspondents. We shall enlarge the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN next week.

Beware of Impostors.

This is the time of year when the pedigree manufacturer reaps a harvest. The harm that results from his work is irreparable at all times, but to the minds of sensible breeders, the wrong he does to the unsuspecting owners of mares who are led to seek the services of such advertised stallions, scarcely any punishment thought of can be too severe. The careful breeding of trotting horses must be upheld by every one interested,and it is a duty these gentlemen owe to each other and the public to expose these frauds wherever found.

Last year there were two "Electioneer" stallions standing for public service in one of our southern counties for $20 a season. If they were bred as advertised, the sum of $50,000 would not buy either of them. One of our subscribers kindly forwarded us copies of the newspapers containing the advertisements. On our exposing the frauds, the names and breeding of the stallions were changed to suit the Clydesdale and Percheron fraternity, and threats of libel came in rapid succession, for which we extended our heartfelt thanks.

Hearing that there were more of the "thoroughbred trotters" with "pedigrees to suit the people," standing for public service this year, we corresponded with several people in the Sagebrush State, and, as a result of our efforts, we take great pleasure in introducing to our readers the following advertising notice that was printed in the Territorial Enterprise, published in Virginia, Nevada, February 4th, and also a duplicate notice that received a prominent place in the columns of the Lyon County Times, published in Dayton, Nevada, January 30th:

THOROUGHBRED STALLION.

The thoroughbred trotting stallion Ned Gifford, owned by W. M. Gifford, of Oakland, has been brought to Nevada by his owner, and is now standing at Mason Valley. The stallion is one of the most noted of breeding horses, being sire of Direct, the fastest pacer in the world, with a record of 2:06. He has been brought to Nevada at considerable expense, and owners of horses who want to breed good stock should take advantage of his presence. He is in charge of his manager, F. E. Mariner, who can be communicated with for business purposes.

We warn our Nevada friends from breeding to such a horse, for the result of mating him with the very choicest of matrons in the Sagebrush State will be disastrous. When we come to look carefully at the above announcement we believe Mr. Salisbury should see to it that Direct's pedigree is straightened before offering the services of that "flying whirwind" to the folks in "Old Kaintuck."

It will be seen that this Ned Gifford is the sire of Direct, and he is a "thoroughbred trotter" without a dam. Ye Gods! look down upon our horse-breeding friends in Nevada and save them from the temptations that are thrown in their paths by the owner and manager of this, the great and only "Ned Gifford, sire of Direct!"

Following the Decrees of Fashion.

Senator Stanford should purchase Margaret S. to-day, and, if he will not race her, he cannot do better than to breed her to Advertiser. He never had as game a trotting mare on the farm as she, and by introducing such a representative of the Director family and adding a few more Wilkes and Nutwood mares to breed to the young Electioneers, the probabilities are that the prices for Palo Alto yearlings will keep up to the top notch for many years to come.

Breeders in the Eastern States are adopting this great principle of breeding: They are mating the most fashionof trotting horse families, and the faster and gamer the representatives (such as Margaret S. and the mare Mary Marshall, 2:12¾ that was sold Tuesday), the surer are they to receive large sums for the produce at an early age.

Why Margaret S. should ever be allowed to leave California is something incomprehensible. This State cannot afford to lose the services of such a matron as she will surely prove in the harem; but the market for large prices is in the East, and, therefore, she will go to the highest bidder.

The experiences of our breeders who sent consignments to the Eastern auction sales are worthy of the most careful consideration by owners of our young and growing stock farms. Certain lines of breeding were not wanted at any price, and nothing but the Wilkes and Nutwoods on the maternal side brought the largest prices. It seems as if the buyers of the East have learned what strains of blood will blend best with the stock they have and what strains of blood they must seek in order that they may raise record-breakers as well as racehorses. It will pay all who intend to send horses East for sale to weed out every animal that does not come up to the standard of excellence set by the millionaire breeders. Fashions change every year in breeding horses as well as everything else in this world, and the aim of all breeders should be to keep up with the fashion. If they want to get the highest prices they must breed their mares to those horses that represent the most fashionable families of the day, and sell the youngsters before they are two years old. Weed and buy, breed and sell, will be the inflexible law of many of the largest stock farmers in a few years, and when such mares as Margaret S., Palo Alto Belle and Mary Marshall are offered, they will command the highest prices, and if bred in fashionable strains their produce will always bring the best of figures. The trouble is that every man who owns a stock farm, and happens to get such mares, owns a stallion that time has demonstrated accomplished but little as a sire, and espepecially with the very family these mares represent; they breed the mare to him, and she and her produce are soon forgotten. If a man can afford to pay such prices for mares, he should pay the highest service fee for the very best, and get interest back on his investment as soon as possible.

The Color of Horses.

A study of the blood lines of horses in the stud books is an interesting one to all those who love well-bred horses, but a thousand and one other matters are to be found quite startling to the seeker for the curious who peruses such works. In going over the earlier volumes of Bruce last week the number of gray horses that trod the turf a quarter of a century to a century ago struck one as being very great in proportion to that of the present era. In fact, it is no exaggeration to say that there are less than half as many gray thoroughbred horses to be found today as could be seen thirty years ago. Many of America's most famous thoroughbreds were gray in color, but at present you can count the truly good gray ones of the past ten years on the fingers of one hand.

Blue Bonnet, by imported Hedgeford (dam of the famous racehorses Lightning, Thunder, Loadstone and Little Arthur), was a gray mare, and these sons of her's were of the same color. Bonnets o' Blue, by Sir Charles, dam of the renowned mare Fashion, who defeated Boston, was a gray. Reel, by Glencoe, by many considered the best broodmare ever known in America, was a gray mare, and she produced Lecompte, Prioress, Starke, War Dance, Captain Elgee and Ashland, the last-named pair being gray. Ophelia, dam of the great Grey Eagle, was a gray mare, as of course her son was, as his name denotes. Miller's Damsel (the dam of American Eclipse), by imported Messenger, was a gray. Waltz (sister to Reel), a good race mare herself, and dam of the speedy stayer, Glidelia, was gray in color. Gamma, who beat the mighty Wagner, was a gray. The splendid Palo Alto matron that recently died, Frolic, by Thunder, was in color a gray, and one of her best colts, Oriflamme, was a gray horse. These are but a tithe of what might be mentioned among the great gray mares and horses that figure in American turf history.

The only way that we can answer the query, "Why are gray thoroughbreds scarce?" is that a prejudice having arisen against the color (a foolish prejudice in the face of the great number of fast and game gray horses that have raced), gray mares have been kept out of the harem, and in a few years a gray racehorse will be a curiosity. Breeders nowadays know as much relative to controlling color as the average painter does about mixing his paints. They have seen it demonstrated scores of times—in fact, seldom fail, except where the mare was "burnt up" on the track before being placed in the stud, or where great stallions get bays or browns from any kind of mare. If "burnt up" she either foals colts of the color of the sire or of some near ancestor on her own side of the house. Generally, though, the bay mare bred to the black horse will produce a brown foal, the gray mare bred to the brown horse will produce roan foals mostly; chestnut to chestnut almost invariably produce like-colored foals, and bay to bay will in about nine cases out of ten do the same; gray to gray varies mightily, about as many bays coming from the union as grays and roans together; the union of black and chestnut results generally in bay foals; while gray mares bred to anything but black stallions produce about fifty per cent. of gray or roan foals. Mated with a black stallion, however, the percentage of grays is larger than foals of any other color. In fact, gray seems to be the most lasting of colors, and yet gray mares and stallions are for the most part despised by breeders of the present, notwithstanding it is extremely hard to find a gray animal with bad legs and feet and the further fact that a vast number of gray horses have gained renown on track and in harem. Fads come and fads go, but the gray thoroughbred horse will soon be but a memory, all the same, under the yoke of the faddist.

SAN FRANCISCO has a very good and fast track in the Bay District course, but the ramshackle stables and rickety "grand stands" should either be torn down at once or the whole affair placed in the hands of some enterprising manager, who could advertise and exhibit it as the "California Colliseum, built in the year 1750. To the east can be seen the lake (in the inclosure) where numberless suckers have been caught and fried brown in the bookmakers' pan, the identical spot where the fog fiend has his lair, and last, not least, where the Wind God ever hovers, seeking to throw a hard chill and a barrel of sand down one's back."

ABOUT the best way to determine a stallion's worth, as a progenitor of horses with speed and stamina, is to figure the percentage of wins of his progeny, where five or more of any stallion's get participate in races during a season. The amount won by the get of any horse should not cut such a great figure as the percentage of wins mentioned, for the reason that one colt might be good enough to win $100,000 and ten others by the same horse not earn a cent, and yet this amount won by the stallion's progeny would seem large in the eyes of everyone that did not look into the matter closely.

Ringwood by Sidney.

The horse breeders of Napa County should feel pleased to hear that Mr. Allen, proprietor and owner of the Allen Stock farm of that county has made a contract with Mr. A. C. Dietz of Oakland, owner of Ringwood, whereby he will make a season with this speedy son of Sidney, the greatest sire of early speed in the world.

Ringwood is a fine looker and has proved a sure foal getter. His progeny are handsome, stylish and fast, and in color and conformation, cannot be surpassed.

Grey Dale, by American Boy Jr., Ringwood's dam, was also the dam of Longworth, 2:19. This brother to Ringwood has been leased to the Ferndale Stock Farm, Santa Paula, Ventura County, Cal.

Owing to a typographical error in the advertisement of Welch's Inhaler, the price should have been $5.00 instead of $2.50. These inhalers have been used with great success during the late epidemic among horses and have achieved wonders.

The attention of horsemen and large stock farm ownsrs is called to the advertisement of the fast stallion Menlo Fallis. He is game as a pebble, perfectly-gaited, kind, gentle, of good color and a sure foal getter.

DARBY'S

Prophylactic Fluid.

Use it in Every Sick Room for Safety, Cleanliness and Comfort.

IT will purify the air and render it wholesome. The removal of the efluvia which are always given off in the sick room promotes the recovery of the patient and the safety and comfort of the physician and attendant. Persons waiting on the sick should use it freely. Water in which the sick are bathed should contain a small quantity of the Fluid—it will render the skin soft and pleasant, allay itching, prevent bed sores, scars etc., removing all heat and irritation, together with any unhealthy or offensive emanations from the body.

Vanderbilt University, Tenn:
As a disinfectant and detergent, Darby's Prophylactic Fluid is superior to any preparation with which I am acquainted.—H. T. LUPTON, Professor of Chemistry.

DON MARVIN

Five-Year-Old Record 2:28.

DON MARVIN is a beautiful seal brown, foaled 1884; bred by Senator Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal; is 16 hands high and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by Fallis, 2:23 (sire of four in 2:30 list), he by Electioneer. Dam, CORA (dam of Don Marvin, 2:28, and Elected [trial] 2:26) by Don Victor, (sire of the dams of five in the 2:30 list) by Belmont. Second dam, CLARABEL (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:21½, and Rebecca, dam of four in 2:30 list) by Abdallah Star. Third dam, FAIRY (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:29½, and Sweep stakes, sire of 22 in the 2:30 list, and three other producing sires and dams) by Rydsyk's Hambletonian. Fourth dam, EMMA MILLS (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star.

DON MARVIN is a horse of great natural speed. His record was made with scarcely any preparation, after making a large season in the stud, and is no measure of his speed. His oldest colts (only five in number) are three years old this spring. One of them with very little work trotted quarters last fall in 36 seconds, and could have easily entered the 2:30 list in his two-year-old form had he been given an opportunity.

DON MARVIN will make the season of 1892 at $40, with usual return privilege, which make him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—Four producing dams.

The Standard-Bred Trotting Stallion

ALTO

Sired by Anteeo, 2:16¼, dam Emma Taylor, by Alexander, 190; second dam Belle by General Taylor, third dam Belle, by Boston Boy, he by David Hill's Black Hawk, out of Boston Girl, an inbred Messenger and Morgan mare that trotted on the Centerville Course, Long Island, in 1853, two miles in 5:31½ and 5:32, and on the same course in the same year three miles in 7:45.

ALTO, as can be seen by the above pedigree, is related to the most promising fast horses of the day. In appearance, he is a beautiful shade of seal brown with tan muzzle and flanks. He is 15.3 hands high, and weighs 1,080 pounds; in conformation he is unexcelled by any young horse in the State. His disposition is perfect, and has no vices. He has never been trained for speed except when he was three years old. At that time he received some six weeks' work and trotted halves in 1:12. He has been bred to a few mares and proved a sure foal-getter. He is just seven years old, and would pay for himself either in the stud or on the track the first year.

I will also sell

EMMAVOLO.

By Antevolo

Out of the dam Alto. She is five years old, bright bay in color, with black points, never been trained for speed, but can be driven anywhere. She is a fine, large, rangy mare, and just the kind that is most needed on a stock farm. She was stinted to Stammoor last spring and is believed to be in foal. Stammoor is by Stamboul, 2:11, out of a mare by The Moor.

VOTER is a dark bay, solid color, with black points; foaled 1886; 15 hands 3 inches high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a horse of magnificent form, and is in every way a superior individual. In him is combined the HAMBLETONIAN, CLAY, MORGAN and thoroughbred blood. This horse was in Charles Marvin's care for about ten days during the record meeting at Stockton last fall—the only time he was ever on a track—and the first time he was speeded he showed Marvin an eighth of a mile in 19½ seconds. He was taken sick, and notwithstanding he showed such remarkable speed, had to be taken home.

VOTER will make the season from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

ANDY R.

(FULL BROTHER TO STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23.)

Sired by CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of STEVE WHIPPLE, four-year-old race record, 2:23, and KATE AGNEW, 2:28½), dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23, and VOTER), by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of 15 trotters in 2:30; of 9 sires of 12 2:30 trotters, and of 12 dams of 16 trotters in the list.)

CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN 10,178, by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of nine sires), dam FLORA (dam of three sires of 2:30 speed by CHIEFTAIN 721; second dam a thoroughbred mare.

ANDY R. is a bright bay, with small star; foaled 1885; 15 hands 2½ inches high, and weighs 1,025 pounds. He is a beauty, and a perfect horse in every way. Will make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $40 FOR THE SEASON, FEBRUARY 1 TO JUNE 1.

PRINDEX.

PRINDEX is a dark brown horse, white hind feet; foaled 1888; 16 hands high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a good-sized, fine-styled and well-gaited colt, and will certainly make a trotter and sire of speed. He will also make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st.

AT $40 FOR THE SEASON.

The reader will perceive that the four stallions mentioned herein are all from the same mare. Four individually better or nicer-looking stallions can not be found on any stock farm in California. Horsemen are especially invited to inspect the horses, and I wish to call special attention to their feet and legs—better were never put under a horse. Their dam, TWIST, at sixteen years old, is as sound as the day she was foaled. Their second, third and fourth dams were used for all purposes of farm and road work, and all lived to be over thirty years old—their limbs, at the time of death, being as free of blemishes or of any marks of unsoundness as a suckling colt's.

The disposition of these stallions are of the very best, and their produce are all good size, of fine conformation, have perfect feet and legs, and all show speed to a remarkable degree.

I do not favor extremely high service fees, and the prices on these stallions for this year are placed comparatively very low; that of STEVE WHIPPLE in particular being much less than of any other stallion of equal value or merit in this State.

Mares sent to my address, care of WEBER STABLES, STOCKTON, CAL., will be taken to my ranch at BELLOTA free of charge, provided two or three days' notice be given me by letter.

Pasturage on mares to be bred to VOTER, ANDY R., or PRINDEX free for two months, after that $3 per month. All bills payable at time of service or before the mares are removed.

Usual return privileges, provided mare or horse does not change hands, or money refunded at my option. For further particulars, address

B., 2:16¾; Baron Wilkes, 2:18, and 71 others in 2:30 or better.)

Dam LADY BUNKER.....By MAMBRINO PATCHEN. (Son of Mambrino Chief and sire of 18 in 2:30 list, and of the dams of Houri, 2:17; Astral 2:18; Baron Wilkes, 2:18, and 60 others in 2:30 list.)

HOCK WILKES' First Dam, EDA.....By HOCK-HOCKING.
(Thoroughbred, sister to St. David.) (Having one cross each of Boston, imp. Trustee, imp, Glencoe, eight crosses of imp. Diomed, and being the sire of Beaconsfield, St. David, Batchelder, Arthur H. and Four Aces.)

Second Dam, EVA COOMBS.....By BILLY CHEATHAM.
(Dam of St. David, Wildidler, Maid of the Mist, and second dam of Beaconsfield, Batchelder, Arthur H. and Four Aces.) (Having one cross of Boston, five of imp. Messenger, seven of imp. Dioned, and two of American Eclipse.)

Third Dam, RUBY, by Winnebago, son of imp. Glencoe and imp. Delight.

Fourth Dam, ELLEN JOURDAN, by Blacknose, by Medoc, son of Duroc by imp. Diomed, and Miller's Damsel, by imp. Messenger.

Fifth Dam, EMILY JOURDAN, by imp. Jourdan.

Sixth Dam, ELLEN TREE, by Henry, son of Sir Archy by imp. Diomed and of a daughter of imp. Diomed.

DESCRIPTION—HOCK WILKES, foaled 1888, is a handsome bay with black points, 15½ hands high, of speedy conformation, good bone and powerful muscular development. He is pure in trotting action, very speedy, and, but for difficulty with one fore pastern, he would now have a low record. He is one of the handsomest sons of Guy Wilkes, with the Wilkes substance and trotting instinct and the thoroughbred quality and type of conformation. The sire of Hock Wilkes, Guy Wilkes, stands at a service fee of $1,000, and he is conceeded to be the best representative of the great Wilkes and Hambletonian family. The dam of Hock Wilkes is a large mare, 16¾ hands, of powerful build, a daughter of Hock-Hocking, who produced the speedy and long-distance performers St. David, Beaconsfield, Batchelder, Arthur H., Four Aces, etc., and whose dam was the third dam of Anteeo, 2:16¼, Antevolo, 2:19½, and Coral, 2:25.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON of 1892, from February 1st to July 1st, with return privilege for the season of 1893 on any mare not proving with foal, provided either the mare or stallion does not change ownership. The season of 1892 will be made at 2536 Market Street, San Francisco.

Address JOS. MICHEL, 2536 Market Street.

Wilkes-Electioneer Stallion.

COMBINED BLOOD
— Of the Greatest Son of
GEO. WILKES
— And the Greatest Son of
ELECTIONEER,

ANTEEO WILKES.

Black horse, foaled May, 1889; sired by GUY WILKES, race-record fourth heat, 2:15¼.

First dam Amy Fay, by ANTEEO, race record 2:16¼, sire of Myrtle, three-year-old record 2:19½, Alfred G., four-year-old record 2:19¾, James Madison, record 2:17¾; second dam by Alexander, record 2:31¼, son of George M. Patchen Jr., record 2:27, and grandsire of Yolo Maid 2:12; third dam by Naubuc, son of Toronto Chief, record 2:24½ and Gypsy Queen, ten-mile record 28:39, and full brother to the famous trotter, Thomas Jefferson, record 2:23; fourth dam Sacramento Belle, ten-mile record 31.07, one-mile record 2:38.

Anteeo Wilkes as an individual is worthy of his great blood lines; he is 15.3 hands high and of perfect form. Although handled but little and never driven once by a professional driver he has trotted a mile in 2:52 quarters in forty seconds without shoes, as a two-year-old, with the marked purity of gait, for which the Guy Wilkes trotters are noted. At close of season will be trained for a great record.

SERVICE FEE $100.

Limited to twelve approved mares, season to end June 15th. Box stalls and corrals for mares. Address,

The Best Representatives of the Great Almont Family in California,

ALCONA 730.

Grandsire of SILAS SKINNER, record 2:17; DEL REY, record 2:29; MARK MEDIUM, record 2:24.

"LACONA" made a 2-year-old race record of 2:42½, with 17 days track work. Every one of the above descendants of ALCONA were trained by different men, in different parts of the country, and all made their records in races over regulation tracks. ALCONA is 14 years old and has already two producing sons and a producing daughter. TERMS, $75 FOR THE SEASON.

GRANDISSIMO 14,995.

RECORD, 2:27 3-4. (FULL BROTHER TO GRANDEE, THREE-YEAR-OLD RECORD, 2:23½).

Sired by La Grande 2868, dam Norma, by Arthurton 365; grandam Nourmahal, full sister to A. W. Richmond 1687.

GRANDISSIMO got his first work last season better than 3 minutes November 11, 1891. Was worked out four times and trotted to a record of 2:27¾ in a race Thanksgiving Day at Napa, finishing the last quarter in 36 seconds. Fifteen days training,—certainly a remarkable showing. I expect him to get a low mark next season. His colts are fine lookers and natural trotters. He will be bred to a limited number of mares at the low price of $50 FOR THE SEASON.

(FULL BROTHER TO ALCONA JR., 2:24, SIRE OF SILAS SKINNER, 2:17). Sired by ALCONA 730, dam Madonna (dam of Alcona Jr., 2:24, Del Rey, 2:29), by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22); grandam by Joe Downing 710.

ALCONEER is a handsome, good-sized horse, and a natural trotter. With two months training last fall as a 3-year-old he trotted a mile in 2:41; last quarter in 37½ seconds. TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CADUCAS 10,840.

Sired by ALMONT MEDIUM 2133, record 2:28½, dam Amelia T. (full sister to Prince Warwick, trial 2:18), by Alcona 730; grandam by Almont Mambrino 761; g g d by Delmonico 110; g g g d by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22. CADUCAS is a handsome individual, and will make a trotter. His pedigree is all one could desire. He will be bred to a few mares at the low price of $25 FOR THE SEASON.

KING WHIPPLETON (Standard).

PRIVATE STALLION.

Sired by WHIPPLETON 1883, dam Kate Chapman, by Naubuc 504; grandam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31 g g d by Ethan Allen 2903.

The season to commence February 1st. ALCONA'S season to close September 1st. GRANDISSIMO, ALCONEER and CADUCAS' season to close July 1st, as I expect to trot them during the circuit. Mares can be shipped by rail from any part of the State direct to St. Helena or by boat to Napa City, where they will be looked after. The very best of pasturage at $4 per month; hay and grain $8 per month for mares if necessary. Mares kept same as my own at $60 per year. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the following season free. Should any of my stallions die or be sold, mares will be returnable to any of my other stallions by paying difference in service, if any. For further particulars, address

CYRUS R., 2:17 3-4.

The Fastest Son of Nutwood, 2:18 3-4, now in California.

Will make the SEASON of 1892 at the stable of T. W. BARSTOW, San Jose, Cal.

TERMS, $75 FOR THE SEASON,

With the usual return privilege, providing the stallion or mare does not change ownership.

DESCRIPTION—Coal black horse, small star; stands 15¾ hands high; weighs 1,100 pounds; well-formed and of good disposition. This horse got a record of 2:17¾ with only four weeks' work; he can show a half-mile in 1:06½ and one-eighth in 16 seconds.

PEDIGREE—Got by Nutwood 600, first dam Belle, by Jack Roberts; second dam Young Nance, by Shakespeare, thoroughbred. Jack Roberts by Eclair, and he by old pacing Pilot; the dam of Jack Roberts was by Copperbottom. CYRUS R. has two crosses of the great Pilot blood, once through Nutwood and again through Belle, his dam.

SPECIAL NOTICE—No service fee if this horse does not trot in 2:12 or better in 1892, barring accidents.

ANTEROS NUTWOOD.

PEDIGREE—By Anteros 6020, full brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, Antevolo, 2:19½, by Electioneer, the greates sire the world has ever known. First dam Newark Belle, by Nutwood, 2:18¾, the greatest living sire; second dam Tillie, 2:40, by San Bruno, he by David Hill, and he by Vermont Black Hawk; third dam by Young Grey Eagle.

DESCRIPTION—ANTEROS NUTWOOD is a handsome bay horse with black points, no white; stands sixteen hands one inch high; weighs 1,150 pounds. He is a horse of immense power, and yet so highly finished as to give him the appearance of a thoroughbred. He gives promise of trotting as fast as the celebrated Arion 2:10¾, as he can show better than a 2:20 clip to a road cart without training, and is of the same blood as the phenomenal Arion, 2:10¾, two years old. No service fee will be charged if this horse does not secure a record of twenty-five or better in 1892, barring accidents.

LIMITED TO 20 OUTSIDE MARES AT $50 EACH FOR THE SEASON.

With the usual return privileges by paying difference in price if any. Season to commence February 1st and end June 1st, 1892.

THE MAGNIFICENT TROTTING STALLION

MARKS L.

Will make the Season of 1892, ending July 1st,

AT THE BAY DISTRICT TRACK.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

MARKS L. was foaled 1888; he is a handsome bay in color; stands 16.2 hands; weighs 1,150. He is a remarkably well-muscled, heavy-boned, clean-limbed horse, and a more perfect-formed or a more promising one is not standing for public service. In action he is a perfect line trotter, and although never having been handled for speed, there is little doubt but that he will trot close to 2:20 this fall.

MARKS L. was sired by Antevolo, 2:19½, out of Maggie L., by Grand Duke Alexis; second dam Vashti, by Chieftain 721; third dam by Nena Sahib (thoroughbred). Antevolo, by Electioneer 125. Grand Duke Alexis was by Stephen A. Douglas 422, out of Black Bessie, by Blucher. Stephen A. Douglas was by Hambletonian 10, out of Kate, by Balsora 1024; second dam Neva, by Vincente Nolte, etc. Chieftain 721 was by Hiatoga, out of a daughter of Trimble's Eclipse. Terms, $50 for the season. For further particulars, address

GUIDE

RECORD, 2:16 1 4.

Will make the season of 1892 at the Santa Rita Ranch, about one mile north of Pleasanton.

DESCRIPTION.

GUIDE is a handsome seal-brown, seven years old, stands 15.2 hands high, and weighs 1,090 pounds. He is of fine form, level-headed, intelligent, and comes from blood lines that are noted for the qualities of speed and gameness.

PEDIGREE.

GUIDE, 14,680 (Record 2:16¼)

- Director, 2:17 — Sire of Direct...2:06; Margaret S.....2:12½; Evangeline... ..2:19; Emma .. ..2:24¾; and seven other 2:30 trotters.
  - Dictator 113 — Sire of 25 trotters and 3 pacers, and 10 sires of 18 trotters. (Hambletonian 10 / Clara, by American Star 14)

  - Daughter of (American Star 14 / Daughter of Harry Clay 45)

GUIDE'S sire has a record of 2:17, made in a five-heat race, and he is also closely related to Phallas, record 2:13¾ fourth heat, Jay-Eye-See, record 2:10, and Clingstone, 2:14. Guide, with a record of 2:16¼, is the fastest trotting son of the "Black Tornado," showing himself to possess the greatest share of the best qualities of his sire and grandsire, which, with his three crosses of American Star blood, makes him the peer of any trotting sire in the world.

TERMS: $200 for the season, with usual return privileges. Excellent pasturage, $5 per month, and the best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently-formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better-bred stallion stands for public service in California to-day. He is only six years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON,

with the usual return privilege. Excellent care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

ABDOL

17,716.

RECORD, 2:28.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

Abdol was foaled in 1883, bred by John Watson, Oakland, and is one of the finest sons of the Grand Moor. He is a handsome black in color, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a horse of splendid proportions, exquisite style and perfect trotting action. He is remarkably level-headed, intelligent and of kind disposition, and possesses the qualities of speed and gameness to a remarkable degree. His record is no mark of his speed. When it was made it was the intention to keep him in the 2:30 class. He has shown in his work last quarters in 34 seconds—a 2:16 gait—and can get away equally fast.

ABDOL, 17,716, Record 2:28.

NUTWOOD WILKES is a handsome chestnut in color, stands 15½ hands high, is level-headed, kind and intelligent.

RAPID TRANSIT,

Limited to Fifteen approved outside mares at $75 for the season.

RAPID TRANSIT is a fine-looking bay horse, stands 15½ hands high. He is by DIRECTOR 1989, 2:17; dam Lida W., record 2:18¼, dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½ at 3 years. (See above tabulated pedigree.) He is a horse of splendid individuality and excellent blood lines.

LONG BRANCH.

Limited to Fifteen outside mares at $50 for the season.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¾ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, sire of seven with records from 2:17¾ to 2:30), by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Zola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25¾ (sire of seven with records from 2:10 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty outside mares at $50 for the season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19, Annie C., 2:25, Albert H., 2:27¾, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¾ (sire of 77 with records from 2:11½ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11½ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¼, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track); dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30; the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23½, made in 1860; the fastest and gamest representative of the Clay family). This pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great broodmares. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains—the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race-horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and nineteen others from 2:18¼ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or ten per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

YOUNG STOCK FOR SALE.

Visitors welcome any day.

Delwin, 14,681, record 2:26 1-2, will, if he has no setbacks, pace in 2:15 or better, and beat 2:30 trotting over the fast Stockton kite track this fall. Delwin is one of the handsomest grandsons of the great Moor; in color, he is a dark dapple bay, sound as a dollar, outside of his broken hind leg, and the best of feet and legs; 15.1½ hands high, and weighs 1,000 pounds; he is one of the finest-formed horses for great speed in the land; has the same level head and intelligence that his half-brother, Guide, 2:16¼, has; in color and form he resembles Harry Clay 45 (sire of the dam of Electioneer and George Wilkes, 2:22), more than any horse that we ever saw. Delwin has the same blood lines as the handsome grandson of The Moor, Stamboul, 2:11; he has two crosses of American Star 14, also of Clay, one of Hambletonian 10, sire of the dam of Stamboul, 2:11; one to Mambrino Chief, sire of the dam of Director, 2:17, and two of the great Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Nutwood, 2:18¾, combining altogether the same blood lines that lay in the grandest stallions, living or dead—Arion, 2:10¾, Stamboul, 2:11; also the first yearling to beat 2:30, and who trotted the fastest last quarter in that mile than was ever trotted by any yearling, 34 seconds—Freedom, 2:29¾.

Del Sur, 2:24, sire of Don Tomas, 2:20, and Cousin Joe, 2:20¼, being a full brother to the dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, sire of Freedom, 2:29¾, and two others better than 2:28. Delwin's colts all show the trot out of any kind of mares.

Terms, $40, with usual return privilege.

Good water and pasturage at $5 per month, but will not be responsible for accidents or escapes. Mares can be shipped to the farm and home of Delwin, the Meese Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County, Cal., per S. P R. R., via Martinez. For further particulars, address,

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

JIM IRVING, 2:23, and YOUNG JIM, sire of BUT TERFLY, 2:19½, GARNETT, 2:19, and twelve other performers.

By GEORGE WILKES, Sire of
GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-four others in the 2:30 list, and seventy-five sires of 249 trotters.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of
Seventy-five producing sons and forty-six producing daughters.

By ASHLAND 47, Son of
MAMBRINO CHIEF 11 and sire of HIGHLAND WIN 1226, and others in list and the dams of EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, and others.

By LEAR'S SIR WILLIAM, Son of
HOWARD'S SIR CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES (who died when but three years of age) was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot 2:27½ (sire of Hannis, 2:17½, and others), out of Juliett, by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2½ hands, and weighs 1,080 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well-built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well-shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:40 without boots of any kind. His first colt showed trials last fall in 2:20 in his 3-year-old form, and all of his 2-year-olds that have been handled any show lots of speed and a nice way of going. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

TERMS, $75 WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGE.

I have a good pasture to turn mares in at $5 each per month. The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18¼, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:24¼ and 2:21¼. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting act on surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. Leo Wilkes, Brown horse, six years, 16 hands, full brother to Sable Wilkes. Allowed to serve thirty mares at $100 a season.

Regal Wilkes, Bay horse, four years old. (Champion two-year-old record, 2:20¾; three-year-old record, 2:17½). By Guy Wilkes; first dam Margaret, by Sultan; second dam by The Moor; third dam by Belmont. Limited to twenty approved mares at $250 for season 1892.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties engaging the services of any of the above horses must send a deposit of 10 per cent. of service money with engagement. Pasturage $6 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain, or both, are fed, the charge will be $12.50 per month. Good care will be taken of all mares sent to the farm, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes.

Mares may be shipped direct to me at Oak Grove Station, San Mateo County.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are paid.

Season commences February 1st and ends August 1, 1893. For particulars and catalogues address

Second dam BRIDESMAID, Dam of
THORNDALE MAID, 2:30, and
TRIXIE, (trial), 2:25½.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty seven in the 2:30 list, and has five producing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12¾, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼ (who was shown trials the past season in 2:14); Thornton, 2:26¼, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:24½, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12½, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, (the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams, Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, soft and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:26¾. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

*Balkan.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14½ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13¾, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:08¾; Axtell, 2:12 three years, and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay Eye See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¾. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¾. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Christman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29, , Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:30 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan, it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000,

AND HIS SERVICE IS OFFERED AT $100 FOR THE SEASON.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

STANDARD-BRED STALLION

ANTENUT

Will Make Season 1892 to a Limited Number of Approved Mares, at Santa Rosa.

Terms, $50 for the Season.

ANTENUT, foaled 1889, is by Anteeo, 7863, 2:16¼; First dam Daisy, dam of Ella H., three-year-old trial 2:30 with six weeks' work, and Eva G. 2:35 by Nutwood 600; second dam Ruth Ann grandam of Myrtle 2:19½ at three years by Bell Alta, he by Williamson's Belmont; third dam by General Taylor, Antenut stands 15.3 hands, is solid bay in color and is a horse of splendid conformation and a fine individual in every respect. Good pasturage and usual return privileges. For further particulars, address

G. E. GUERNE, Santa Rosa.

The Thoroughbred Stallion

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1892 at

WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,

715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

THREE CHEERS

Young Fashion: Fashion (Bonnets o'Blue, Trustee (imp.)); Monarch (Delphine, Priam)
Hurrah (imp.): Jovial (Sister to Grey Momus, Bay Middleton); Newminster (Beeswing, Touchstone)

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS.

Seventy-five Dollars for the Season.

Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

The Antevolo Stallion

SIROCCO

Will make the season of 1892 at Egbert Rancho, near Rio Vista, from February 1st to June 15th at $50 for the season.

PEDIGREE AND DESCRIPTION.

SIROCCO, by Antevolo 7648, 2:18¼, by Electioneer 125, sire of 100 in the 2.30 list, dam by Rifleman (thoroughbred), sire of Col. Lewis, 2:18¾.

SIROCCO is a handsome bay with black points stands 16-1 hands high, 16.2½ over the hip; weigh about 1,150; five years old, and one of the best and speediest sons of Antevolo. He is remarkably intelligent, kind, and a splendid individual. Trial, quarter at three years old .37 to 150-pound cart without regular work. Good pasturage and the best of care taken of mares at $2 per month, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address or, P. W. BELLINGALL, Rio Vista.

ALVIN EGBERT,
508 Battery Street, San Francisco.

SONS OF ELECTIONEER ✣1892✣

✣1892✣ AT THE SOUTHER FARM

All mares bred to the Souther Farm Stallions in the season of 1892 will be kept free of charge from March 1st to July 1st. Mares may be sent to the farm at any time, and will be kept at reasonable rates until March 1st, when the free care begins. Best of attention given to mares at foaling time.

The Reputation of the Southern Farm is a guarantee of fair treatment for all animals sent there.

EL BENTON

(Three-quarter brother to SUNOL, 2:08¼; NORVAL, 2:17¼.)

- ELECTIONEER 125 — 99 in 2:30.
  - HAMBLETONIAN 10 — 41 in 2:30 list.
    - ABDALLAH 1
    - CHAS. KENT MARE
  - GREEN MOUNTAIN MAID — 8 in 2:30.
    - HARRY CLAY 45
    - SHANGHAI MARY
- NELLIE BENTON — Trial for Charles Marvin, 2:18.
  - GENERAL BENTON 1755 — 17 in 2:30 list and dam of Sunol, 2:08¼.
    - JIM SCOTT 836
    - LADY BENTON
  - NORMA, 2:33½ — Dam of Norval, 2:17½; Norris, 2:22¼; also Lucy Cuyler, trial for Robert Bonner, 2:15½; Nellie Benton, trial for Chas. Marvin, 2:18.
    - ALEXANDER'S NORMAN — Lula, 2:15; May Queen, 2:20.
    - BY TODHUNTER'S SIR WALLACE

$200 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

Fourth dam Eagletta by Grey Eagle, sire of grandam of Ansel, 2:20.
Fifth dam Mary Howe, by Tiger.
Sixth dam Lady Robin, by Robin Gray, sire of third dam of the great Lexington.
Seventh dam by Quicksilver, son of imp. Medley.
Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¼; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

GLEN FORTUNE

(25 per cent. of the blood of Shanghai Mary; the exact amount carried by Electioneer himself.)

- ELECTIONEER 125 — Sunol, 2:08¼; Palo Alto, 2:08¾.
  - HAMBLETONIAN 10 — His sons have produced nearly 1,000 in 2:30.
    - ABDALLAH 1
    - CHAS. KENT MARE
  - GREEN MOUNTAIN MAID — 8 in 2:30.
    - HARRY CLAY 45
    - SHANGHAI MARY
- GLENNE — Out of a half-sister to Green Mountain Maid.
  - MESSENGER DUROC 106 — 20 in 2:30; dams of 19 in 2:30.
    - HAMBLETONIAN 10
    - BY ROE'S ABDALLAH CHIEF
  - GLENELLA — Out of the dam of Green Mountain Maid.
    - WOODWARD STAR — Son of Seely's American Star.
    - SHANGHAI MARY — Grandam of Electioneer.

$100 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

As the dam of Green Mountain Maid and grandam of Electioneer, Shanghai Mary may be called the foundation stone of the Electioneer family, which now holds practically every best on record. Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

Glen Fortune's oldest colts were foaled in 1891, and show up splendidly in the kindergarten, where they may be seen any week day.

OTHER BLOOD LINES, SAME RETURN AND KEEPING PRIVILEGES.

By Whipple's Hambletonian 725.

FIGARO (trial 2:32½), $75.

First dam Emblem.....by Tattler, 2:26
sister to Voltaire, 2:20¼, son of Pilot Jr.
Second dam Young Portia.....by Mambrino Chief 11.
dam of Voltaire, 2:20¼,
Childe Harold, two miles over an English course, 5:04, also two producing sons and two producing daughters.

By Almont 33.

JESTER D., $75.

First dam Hortense.....by Messenger Duroc 106
Twenty in 2:30, seventeen producing daughters.
Second dam Nelly McDonald (thoroughbred)....by Colossus thoroughbred son of imp. Sovereign.
Colossus sired Colossus Mambrino, who produced St. Louis, 2:25.
Third dam Maid of Monmouth.....by Traveller an old-time New Jersey celebrity.
grandam of Prætor, 2:29¼.
Fourth to fourteenth dams thoroughbred.

By The Grand Moor.

MOORLAND, $40.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¼.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

An entirely new and original system of balancing and conditioning will be shown in a few weeks. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU

That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is gloriously mistaken. However, don't point ou the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect be aring o both heels and the entire wearing surface.

CONDITIONS.

In all 3-in-5 races a horse not winning one heat in three shall be sent to the stable regardless of number of starters, but if eight or more start, no horse shall be sent to the stable if placed second in one of the first three heats.

In all races of mile heats, 2 in 3, a horse not winning a heat in two shall be sent to the stable, but if eight or more start, no horse shall be sent to the stable which has been placed second in one of the first two heats.

The right reserved to start each stake or purse in trial heats if more than nine declared to start, starters to be divided by the Board of Directors.

First payment, whether for purses payable in installments or for stakes, MUST ACCOMPANY NOMINATIONS, or they will not be considered.

Omission to make any payment as above stipulated, incurs forfeiture of any previous payments and of the right to start.

Horses and colts owned outside of the Pacific coast are eligible to all stakes and purses without requirement of membership; persons residing in States and Territories lying in whole or in part west of the Rocky Mountains, MUST become members of the P. C. T. H. B. A. to entitle them to make entries.

No added money will be paid for a walk-over. If only three horses start in a stake race, only first, second and third money shall be paid; if but two start, the Directors reserve the right to call it a walk-over and divide the stake money paid in; two-thirds to the winner, and one-third to the second horse. In case of a walk-over, only the moneys received from entries to said stake will be paid. In purse races, three horses will be required to start. The right is reserved to call two starters a walk-over.

A horse distancing the field shall only be entitled to first and third moneys.

The Directors reserve the right to change the hour and day of any race except when it becomes necessary to anti-date a race, in which instance the nominator will receive three days notice of change by mail to address of entry.

Entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race, shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the horse to be started must be named by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race.

Trotting and racing colors shall be named by six o'clock P. M. on the day preceding the race, and must be worn upon the track.

Suspension and expulsions of the American Trotting Association will be recognized.

Persons desirous of making entries in the above purses and stakes, and who have not as yet joined the P. C. T. H. B. A. should make application for membership to the Secretary, and remit the sum of $25 to cover membership fee before March 1st, 1892.

Programme for Aged Horses, Trotters and Pacers, and for Special Events, will be announced at the proper time.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON, President.

JAS. P. KERR, Secretary, 313 Bush Street, San Francisco.

WRITE FOR SPECIAL LIST.

C. A. WILLIS, "Archibald" of the "Turf, Field and Farm," writes as follows:

MR. P. HAYDEN, Newark, N. J. -

DEAR SIR: I am truly glad to see you advertising the merits of the Woodmansee Bit. For the past ten years I have never been without one or more of them, and have frequently given them to my friends and re-purchased for myself.

I have purchased every new style of Bit since I was sixteen years old (forty-four now), and I find a large majority of those that are liberally advertised and largely sold are WORTHLESS. The Woodmansee is a long way the best bit for general use, either for single or double or other driving, and ought to be used by every owner of horses. My inclination prompts me to write you thus, hoping it may encourage you to place the merits of the Woodmansee Bit before the public. It is the King of Bits, and deserves all that can be said of it. A pair of them on a team I was driving once saved my life in California. Yours truly,

C. A. WILLIS,
NEW YORK, June 27, 1888.

ANTI-STIFF

To Strengthen the Muscles.

To Strengthen the Muscles.

It is a marvelous preparation for Strengthening the Muscular System. With Anti-stiff there is a faith required, it goes straight for the muscles, and you can feel it at work. It has a peculiarly warming, comforting and stimulating effect on all weak or stiff muscles and sinews. Quick in its action, cleanly and pleasant to use.

Rub it into the muscles every night for a fortnight and you will be pleased at its supporting and strengthening properties. There is not, nor has been, anything like it till now. It differs from all Oils, Embrocations and Liniments, both in substance and effect. Some athletes are so fond of it that they rub it all over them.

PRICES 25 AND 50 CENTS PER BOX.

Training
The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50.

VALENSIN STOCK FARM.

Where Sidney and His Celebrated Family of Record-Breakers are.—A Well-Stocked Horse Breeding Farm.

[BY ARNAREE.]

MANY TIMES during the past year it has been our intention to pay a visit to the Valensin Stock Farm, Pleasanton, home of Sidney, 2:19¼, the greatest ten-year-old sire of speed in the world. Ever since his colts and fillies (babies would be the most appropriate name) astonished horsemen by their exhibitions of speed, he has been famous, for no other sire of his age ever approached him. But few of our readers have had the pleasure of seeing him, for his life has been one of seclusion almost on the large farm at Arno, near Sacramento, and during the past few years at his Pleasanton home.

The Valensin Stock Farm is two miles from Pleasanton; the road to it perfectly level; on each side are fields of alfalfa and grain, vegetable gardens and orchards. Driving in through the arched gateway, the pretty white residence is seen almost hidden by large cedars. The columns on the old-fashioned porch are covered with ivy and other evergreen vines; the well-kept lawn, the flower garden and gravelled walks with their closely-trimmed boxwood hedges, were evidences of the care, neatness and system which characterize everything on the place.

The interior of the home is in keeping with its exterior; the charming, yet rich simplicity of the furniture, the beautiful rugs, the large fireplace, rare old engravings and oil paintings, heavy portieres, tapestry and mantle lambrequins; in fact, the very atmosphere seems buoyant with the brightness and lightness of comfort and ease, and the kindliness of the host and hostess leaves nothing but words of praise to fall from the lips of all who cross the threshold of this pleasant home.

Opposite the door and across the roadway is the barn in which are domiciled Sidney, 2:19¾, and his promising son, Dictator Sid. Pushing the doors aside, the spectator is at once smitten with admiration for the horse that has done so much to add glory to California's name and fame.

Sidney, although called a trotting-bred pacer, was one of the most promising of trotters, but, through bad handling and ignorance in shoeing and booting, he severely injured one of his forelegs, and then took to pacing. He paced in 2:19¾, and suffering as he was at the time, it was a most meritorious performance. It height he is 15:3 hands; his color a rich light bay. He has a beautiful, clean head, well set on a straight, strong neck; his withers are remarkably sharp; his back is short to the coupling, but from that point to the tail he is remarkably long. The contour of his back is strongly suggestive of the Volunteer family; this he no doubts inherits from that mighty son of Hambletonian 10 through Sweetness, his dam. From the point of the hip to the stifle he is long, and to the point of the hock it is another illustration of length. His well-shaped hocks and knees are not far from the ground, for his cannon-bones are short and strong; the cords standing out clear and distinct. His body is not of the barrel type; the ribs are broad and flat, and run well back. He is of great length from point of elbow to point of stifle, and his quarters, arms and gaskins are enormous. Looking at him from behind one is astonished at his muscular development. In front, he stands perfectly erect, his legs are straight and neither too wide nor to close at their juncture with the shoulders; his feet are excellent and well placed under him; his dark mane and tail are not heavy; the hair is fine and silky, a little inclined to be lighter in color at the base of the tail. Taking Sidney all in all, his like has never been seen in any country, and that he should sire speedy trotters and pacers is not to be wondered at when one contemplates his great driving powers, good bone and muscular development. Sidney is indeed not an ordinary, but a most extraordinary horse.

During the first few years he was placed in the stud, for some unaccountable reason, nearly all of his progeny paced. Of late years pacers have been the exception and not the rule. For every score of horses he sires, there may be but one pacer in the lot.

The class of mares he has been bred to, and from which he has produced so many record-breakers, were always considered by other breeders the very poorest. Good standard-bred mares he never had until of late years, and as he is but ten years old now, his oldest from them are not seven years of age.

Mr. Valensin is considered one of the shrewdest and keenest of observers, and seems to have also been endowed with the other great desideratums so essential in the horse business—foresight and forethought. Some four years ago he resolved to get some of the best representatives of families that he knew would become famous matrons to breed to this horse, so he quietly visited the blue-grass region and purchased a few to begin with. But before we speak of them perhaps it would be as well to give our readers a little description of the farm on which they are now passing their lives in comfort.

The farm contains some 320 acres of rich sediment, which is neither clay nor adobe, but the finest garden soil in the world. He has had fences and cross fences built, dividing the fields, which are planted with alfalfa (that is now some seven inches high, and so thick that it resembles a green carpet), Australian rye grass, wheat, oats and barley. There is a portion down by the creek that he has reserved as a meadow for the broodmares. The finest alfalfa and rye grass in this section of the country grows on the Valensin farm. The immense barns filled with sweet succulent wheat and oat hay, and the roofed stacks in the fields, are sufficient proofs of the great yield that is annually taken from the soil.

Mr. Valensin has a three-quarter mile track upon which Mr. Millard Sanders, the famous trainer and careful driver, exercises the precocious Sidneys. The infield is divided into four fields—alfalfa, rye grass and meadow, and, as water is piped throughout the entire farm, troughs are seen in all the fields. Weanlings are in some of the enclosures, while in others the broodmares which have done so much for Sidney were seen, every one heavy in foal again to him. There was Flirt, dam of Frou-Frou, 2:25½, champion yearling trotter; Faustina, dam of Faustino, 2:14¾, as a three-year-old, and Fausta, 2:22¾, champion yearling pacer; Fernleaf, dam of Goldleaf, 2:11¼; Nettie Lambert, dam of Sister V., 2:18½; Venus, dam of Cupid, 2:18, and Adonis, 2:11½; Miss Roy, dam of Sidney Roy, 2:29½; Towhead, dam of St. Nicholas, 2:27½ (trial); Roseleaf, dam of Falrose, 2:29½, and Maud R., dam of Sibyl, 2:29½; all of them looking strong and healthy.

The rows of sheds, built on the three sides of a square, all face a large, open space, and contain some sixty well-ventilated, well-lighted box stalls, in which the colts, fillies and mares are cared for. The broodmare barns, corrals, the stallion paddocks and chicken yards are all closely fenced and simply arranged. The vegetable garden adjoins the meadow at the north; it is carefully tilled and cultivated. Everywhere the visitor looks, neatness and system prevail; the gates, the gravelled roads, the clean troughs, the dark-painted fences and the total absence of everything that would mar the effect of a neat, tidy-looking farm is noticeable.

The system of feeding the mares, colts and fillies on this place is one that has proved itself conducive to the greatest and best results. All the trotters are fed grain in the morning, then brushed carefully and turned out in the pasture; at twelve o'clock they receive a few carrots apiece, and at night they are housed, given some hay and carefully bedded. Everything is done quietly and without noise. The youngsters never hear an unkind word, and do not know what fear is. There are about twelve of them that Mr. Valensin has made first payments upon in some of the large stake and purse races in the East this year, and each of these is given about two miles work a day hitched to a sulky. No kindergarten work is necessary, and were we allowed to make a prediction from what we witnessed, we would, without hesitancy, say that from the Valensin Stock Farm will come the fastest yearling, two-year-old, three-year-old and four-year-old trotters in 1892. To speak of the wonderful efforts of the little ones that are scarcely bridle-wise would be only to invite doubts regarding our eyesight, or our timers; suffice it to say, however, that the horsemen who were with us will watch these youngsters from this time, and they now entertain a better opinion of the Sidneys than they ever had.

The value of getting extreme speed from youngsters has been one of the objects of Mr. Valensin's breeding. He has sought to breed his stallion to families that he believed were naturally fast at either the trot or the pace, and did not believe in taking any chances with representatives of families that he knew took years to train. Looking at this theory from a business point of view, its efficacy is now accepted by every breeder in the United States who has heretofore been quick to criticise his system and slow to realize from their own. With this object in view, Mr. Valensin purchased the second lot of mares. He saw that the only way to get the best was to breed to the best, and to-day he can look upon his collection of mares as they stand about him in the fields and say, for their number, no other farm in California has more quality or more royally-bred matrons. He believes in having certain strains of thoroughbred blood for a foundation in them all. He has mares by such celebrated and fashionable sires as Wilkes Boy 3803, Dictator 113, Brown Wilkes, Woodford Mambrino, Harold, Crown Point, A. W. Richmond, Buccaneer, Mambrino Patchen, Flaxtail, Red Wilkes, Echo, Arthurton, George Wilkes, Nutwood, Captain Webster, Aberdeen, Pilot Medium, Strathmore, Combat 1038, John Nelson 187, Patron 2:14½, The Moor 870, Hambletonian 725, Williamson's Belmont, Allandorf, etc. To speak of their respective merits and give the extensive pedigrees of each would take up too much space. No better student of blood lines or better judge of form is in this State than the gentlemanly proprietor, and therefore we must leave our readers to judge of the individuality of each and every one that were purchased by him.

Red Sid, by Sidney, out of Florence Wilkes, by Red Wilkes, second dam by Curtis Hambletonian, third dam by Pilot Jr., is a very highly-formed, large bay colt, a very fast trotter and one that is capable of making a phenomenally low record. His gait is smooth and frictionless, his disposition is perfect, and a more level-headed young trotter is seldom seen.

The horse that will some day take up the mantle when Sidney lays it aside is, to our notion, the bay colt Dictator Sid. His blood lines should suit anyone. He is by Sidney, his dam is Ellen Tomlinson, by Dictator 113; second dam by Mambrino Patchen 58; third dam by Montague Sovereign, and all down to the seventeenth dam are representatives of the blue blood of royalty. Mr. Valensin says that Dictator Sid was the fastest trotter, when a yearling, he ever saw in his life, and were it not for an accidental wound to one of his eyes—which is now entirely well—no horse in the world would come near his mark.

The yearling Faustissimo (full sister to Faustino and Fausta) will put Frou-Frou's record in the shade this fall on any track.

An invitation to inspect Frou-Frou and Fausta was accepted, and on running our fingers down along the cannon-bones, around the coronet and across the loins to make a critical examination of all those portions of a horse's anatomy where horsemen are apt to find weaknesses, puffs, pimples, splints and soreness, we were astonished to see that both champions were as perfect as the day they were foaled.

A number of splendidly-bred mares have been sent from the leading stock farms in the East to be bred to Sidney, and if his owner would consent, he could have had more than enough for him this year, but he has so many broodmares of his own which, to use the words of a horseman, "were not excelled in individuality, were royally-bred, and traced to the stoutest and strongest trotting and running sires and dams that ornament the pages of equine history" could not afford to take them.

Mr. Valensin had this to say of his superintendent, Mr. Sanders: "He has never hurt a colt, had one disabled nor injured from the time he took hold of them, and none have ever been in the hospital." Such a recommendation speaks volumes for this trainer's skill, when it is remembered that he has lowered the records of every colt and filly he has handled. When Mr. Valensin has Mr. Sanders behind the Sidneys on the Eastern circuit this year, there will be no doubting this young man's ability to carry the banner of this stock farm high up and to the front of the procession against all comers.

Flaxtail.

Since the Breeder and Sportsman published the first authenticated account of the breeding of Flaxtail 8132, scores of writers have verified our statements, while a few have dissented. The following was in reply to those who claimed through The Horseman that Pruden's Blue Bull was the sire of Flaxtail, instead of Bull Pup:

Permit me to answer the letter of F. M. Shangle, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, published in your issue of January 28th, in relation to the pedigree of Flaxtail 8132. Judging from the communication of Mr. Shangle it is very evident that he has but slight knowledge of the subject which he attempts to discuss, and that he has never examined the records of J. H. Wallace bearing upon the history of the horse Flaxtail.

Although living a long distance from Chicago I have some information upon the subject, and believe that I can safely sasert that the Registrar has not at any time contemplated altering the present registration of Flaxtail until after he shall have fully examined the records and such additional proofs as may be presented to him, and then only upon condition that be should be convinced that the old registration is not correct, and to only make such corrections as the records and evidence will warrant.

Mr. Shangle is mistaken when he says that the old horse had been registered as by Pruden's Blue Bull. The entry of registration reads "said to be by Pruden's Blue Bull." Mr. Shangle says: "Nearly all the men who have been directly interested in Flaxtail during his early life are now dead. There is nothing like the facilities for gaining testimony just from first hands as there was when Flaxtail's pedigree was established as registered by J. H. Wallace."

The evidence presented to and compiled into the record by J. H. Wallace shows that Flaxtail was taken from Indiana to Iowa by a man named Joseph Mitchell. Dr. M. W. Hicks purchased the horse from T. T. Tinsley, of Indianapolis, Mahaska county, Iowa, who informed Hicks that he purchased him from Mitchell, and that he was sired by Bull Pup. Dr. Hicks owned and kept possession of the horse after his purchase from Tinsley until just before he came to California, when he leased him to G. H. Nelson, of La Harpe, Ill., in whose orchard he died during the fall of 1880.

So far as the records and history of the horse go, Joseph Mitchell, T. T. Tinsley, M. W. Hicks and G. H. Nelson are the only men who were ever directly interested in and owned the horse. Hicks now resides at Sacramento, Cal.; Nelson at La Harpe, Ill. Whether Mitchell and Tinsley are yet alive I am unable to state, but certainly all of the information that was ever obtained from them in relation to Flaxtail and presented to J. H. Wallace can be found on file among the records of the American Trotting Register Association, so that practically the facilities for gaining information and investigating the subject are about as good now as they ever were. Flaxtail died in the fall of 1880, and he was not registered until six or seven years thereafter. Mr. Shangle further says:

"It is well known that men here have worked on Flaxtail's history and pedigree for years. These men gained evidence that satisfied them that Flaxtail was sired by Pruden's Blue Bull."

If such satisfactory evidence was ever obtained by Mr. Shangle or his acquaintances in Iowa, why have they not presented it to the Registrar, so that the pedigree of the horse could be fully established and recorded? As a matter of fact, so I am informed and believe, no man in either Iowa or Indiana ever took the trouble to ask for the registration of Flaxtail, nor to present any information upon the subject to J. H. Wallace. Flaxtail was registered at the request of a gentleman residing in California. Mr. Shangle also says: "Now what we would like to know is what evidence has Mr. Steiner, who, we believe, is a railroad man rather than a horseman, in overruling that verdict and deciding that he is by Bull Pup?"

Of course I cannot state how much evidence is now in the possession of Mr. Steiner, but I hope in this communication to present sufficient evidence to convince almost any fair-minded man that Flaxtail was not by Pruden's Blue Bull, and that he was by Bull Pup, son of Canadian Pilot, sire of Pilot Jr. 12. If Mr. Shangle had taken the trouble to examine the records he would have found enough therein to convince any person willing to be convinced of the right that Flaxtail was not by Pruden's Blue Bull, and that in all probability he was by Bull Pup. Notwithstanding the fact that J. H. Wallace compiled and printed in Vol. VII., page 202, the original registration of Flaxtail, which reads "said to be by Pruden's Blue Bull," he appears to have obtained some further and more satisfactory information upon the subject, as on page 573 of Vol. VI. of the Wallace Year Book he makes the following entry: "Flaxtail 8132, dun horse, foaled about 1854, by Bull Pup."

In Vol. III., page 105, of Wallace's Trotting Register, we find the following: "Bull Pup (pac r), brown horse, foaled 1837, got by Old Pacing Pilot, dam represented to be a Canadian also; purchased 1842 of Joseph Dill, of Louisville, Ky., by Joseph A. Mitchell, and taken to Bedford, Ind. He left excellent stock, most of them pacers."

Flaxtail 8132 is registered in Vol. VII., page 202, of the Wallace Register, as follows: "Flaxtail, dun or chestnut horse, foaled about 1854. Nothing is really known of the blood of this horse. From location, color, description and markings it is probable he was got by Pruden's Blue Bull. He was taken from Indiana to Iowa by Joe Mitchell, and became the property of M. W. Hicks, Keokuk, Iowa."

In addition to the above records I have the following letter, with the certificate of M. W. Hicks thereto attached:

"San Francisco, Cal., December 14, 1891.

"Dr. M. W. Hicks—Dear Sir: I am endeavoring to have Flaxtail 8132 registered as being sired by Bull Pup, and I understand, from conversations with you that you purchased Flaxtail 8132 from T. T. Tinsley, of Mahaska county, Iowa, and that said Tinsley informed you that he was sired by Bull Pup, and that he had purchased him from a man named Mitchell, who came from Salem, Ind. If the facts as herein stated are correct, please certify to the same and oblige

"Alfred H. Cohen."

"I hereby certify that the above facts are correct. M. W. Hicks."

From the records of J. H. Wallace above referred to, and the certificate of Hicks, it appears that the same man, Mitchell, owned Bull Pup and Flaxtail in Indiana; that he took him to Iowa and sold him io T. T. Tinsley, from whom Hicks purchased him, and that Hicks owned him subject to a lease to G. H. Nelson until he died in the fall of 1880.

Clearly from these records and the certificate of Hicks, it appears that Flaxtail could not have been by Pruden's Blue Bull, and that he was by Bull Pup. But equally as strong and conclusive evidence that he was not by Pruden's Blue Bull is the registration of Pruden's Blue Bull in Vol. III., page 91, of the Wallace Register, which shows that he was never in the State of Indiana at any time when it would have been possible for him to have sired Flaxtail 8132, and no man at that time would have taken a mare from Indiana to Ohio or Kentucky to be bred to such a horse, and reads as follows: "Blue Bull (Pruden's), dun horse, foaled about 1844, got by Merring's Blue Bull, formerly called Ohio Farmer, dam not traced. Bred by Samuel McKean, Butler county, Ohio; sold to Absolom McKean, then to Solomon Bedinger, now of Harrison, Hamilton county, O.; then taken to Boone county, Kentucky, about 1853, and there owned by Charles Giffin, then by J. N. Early, and in 1861 he became the property of G. B. Loder, who kept him in the same county till 1863, when he traded him to James Pruden, near Elizabethtown, Hamilton county, O. He was a natural pacer, a large, strong and rather coarse horse, leaving his color and habits of action with many of his offspring."

It appears to me that this showing is sufficient to warrant a corrected registration of Flaxtail 8132. I am fully satisfied that he was by Bull Pup (sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾; Kismet, 2:24¾, and Twister, 2:29¼), son of Canadian Pilot, sire of Pilot Jr., the sire of the dams of Maud S., 2:08¾; Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and many other fast ones.

E. I. Rorinson.

San Francisco, Cal., February 3, 1892.

Canton, N. Y., February 1, 1892.

Editor Horseman:—F. M. Shangle has considerable to say in last week's issue in regard to Secretary Steiner registering Flaxtail as being by Bull Pup. He makes the statement that Flaxtail had been registered as Pruden's Blue Bull, and would like no know upon what evidence Mr. Steiner has overruled a decision which has stood for years. Mr. Shangle's innuendoes in regard to Mr. Steiner being more of a railroad man than he is a horseman, and that it is not probable he has given the necessary attention and investigation to the matter that would warrant him in throwing out the evidence collected by those interested in the breeding of the horse is, as it strikes me, uncalled for.

Mr. Shangle is in error in stating that Flaxtail's pedigree was established and registered by J. H. Wallace as by Pruden's Blue Bull. On the contrary, Flaxtail's pedigree was established and registered as by Bull Pup, by Mr. Wallace, long before Mr. Steiner was Secretary. So all of Mr. Shangle's big guns about "evidence collected, too, when the horse was alive" recoils against his theory that Flaxtail 8182 was by Pruden's Blue Bull, for the reason that Mr. Wallace gives credence to the Bull Pup breeding. That I am correct about this I refer Mr. Shangle to the last volume of Wallace's Year Book, Vol. VI., page 573, under the head of 2:30 pacers under their sires, where he will find the following breeding of Flaxtail 8132: "Flaxtail 8132, dun horse, faaled 1854, by Bull Pup, etc. (Great Table.)" By turning to page 571 of same book we see that Bull Pup is by Pilot (Heinsohn's), sire of Pilot Jr., that sired dam of Maud S., and that Bull Pup is the sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾. It would appear to me from this that Mr. Steiner did not have to exert himself to establish the breeding of Flaxtail 8132 as being sired by Bull Pup. Of course, in the same volume of Wallace's Year Book, where one will get left about every time he expects to find anything accurate, page 429, the breeding of this horse Flaxtail 8132 is given as follows: "Flaxtail 8132, dun horse, foaled 1854, said to be by Blue Bull (Pruden's)." It will be noticed that this is simply a said-to-be pedigree, whereas on page 573 the breeding is given positively, to-wit, "By Bull Pup."

P. R. McMonagle, Jr.

Indianapolis, Ind., January 30, 1892.

Editor Horseman:—In the last issue of your paper F. M. Shangle of Oskaloosa, Iowa, protests against Mr. Steiner registering Flaxtail as by Bull Pup, and in the course of his article says: "It is well known that men here have worked on Flaxtail's history and pedigree for years. These men gained evidence that satisfied them that Flaxtail was sired by Pruden's Blue Bull." Doubtless Mr. Shangle is sincere and honest in the above assertion, but I challenge him or any of "these men" to produce the first particle of evidence that Flaxtail was by Pruden's Blue Bull. I do not know where or how Mr. Steiner produced his evidence, but I have most thoroughly investigated the history of Flaxtail, and am perfectly satisfied that he was sired by Bull Pup, son of old Pilot. He was foaled in Southwestern Indiana. The owner of his dam and owner of the horse till he was four years old always said he was by Bull Pup. The man who bought and took him to Iowa bought him and sold him as by Bull Pup. He made several seasons under that pedigree in Iowa, and there was no intimation that he was sired by any other horse until he fell into the hands of Dr. Hicks. Then Wilson's Blue Bull was looked upon as a phenomenal sire, and the Doctor conceived the idea that Bull Pup, Jr., looked like the Blue Bulls, and as he was very near the age of the Wilson horse he would not claim him as his sire, but changed his name to Flaxtail, and announced that he was by Pruden's Blue Bull, the reputed sire of the Wilson horse. Had it not been for the then great popularity of the Wilson horse the Flaxtail-Pruden's Blue Bull story would never have been heard of, for there is not a scintilla of proof in support of it. "The wish was father to the thought."

Mr. Shangle seems to think it an outrage, and that he and other owners of the descendants of this Bull Pup horse have been damaged by this change in registration; but if he will "possess his soul in patience" till Randall's American Pacing Register is issued to the public he shall be thoroughly convinced that Pruden's Blue Bull was not the sire of Wilson's Blue Bull, and this may reconcile him and them to the fact that their stock possesses the blood of old Pilot instead of that worthless scrub, Pruden's Blue Bull, not one of whose descendants was ever able to pace or trot a mile in four minutes.

Breeders, Attention.

We call the attention of our readers to the change in Balkan's advertisement, reducing his service fee from $200 to $100. Bear in mind that colt stakes will soon be given for the get of stallions with records of 2:15 or better. If you want to raise colts which will be eligible to enter in all stakes, breed to Balkan, as he is the only horse in this region with a record of 2:15 whose services are offered to the public. Considering his breeding, individuality and record his service is offered cheaper than that of any horse living. This horse can be seen at the Oakland Track, in charge of A. L. Hinds.

A full sister to Macey, 2:29½, by George Wilkes, 2:22, out of a daughter of Kentucky Clay 194, is at the Valensin Stock Farm, heavy in foal to Sidney. Her resemblance to Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, in conformation and color, is remarkable.

Millard F. Sanders.

Millard Sanders is one of the few trainers of trotting horses that began at the top of the ladder and continued to do well when left to his own resources. He was in W. J. Gordon's employ when Sanders, Dunbar and Splan handled the formidable stable that in the early eighties carried the colors of Gordon Glens to the front. Clemmie G. and Clingstone were the place's greatest banner bearers, and right well did the Rysdyk gelding perform for George Saunders when he locked horns on the trip from Cleveland to Utica with Edwin Thorne. Saunders also handled Guy for a time and Dunbar, his successor, drove the black gelding and Clingstone a mile to pole in 2:17 over the Cleveland track.

Clingstone was getting well along in years when he was turned over to Millard, his first mount behind him being in the fall of 1887 when he defeated Patron in the specials arranged for them at Cleveland and Detroit. At that time Millard also had Guy in hand, and the following spring he started out with him, the first trip being up to Detroit where he marched a mile in 2:16½ and distanced the party. In a special at Cleveland he defeated his brother, Fred Folger. The next start was at Buffalo in a race with Rosaline Wilkes and Prince Wilkes. The Kentucky Prince gelding won and reduced the race record of the track to 2:14½, but the judges allowed him to score the pair of Wilkes trotters almost to death. At Rochester Guy was second to Jack and at Hartford he was distanced for cutting up his didos. After trotting a mile at Springfield in 2:15 he won a race at New York and three days later reduced the track record to 2:14½. He also won races at Philadelphia and St. Louis that season, and after his return to Cleveland trotted two miles in 2:12.

In 1889 Sanders had a stable full of bad actors, his success with Guy having made him a target for all that had horseflesh that could be classed as volatile. Among others he had the pair of grays Lettie Watterson and Sensation. The last named showed his ability to trot in 2:15, but Nelson was in front of him when he did it, so he did not get the mark. Guy was also busy banging away at the records. He trotted in 2:12½ at Detroit, and at the Cleveland meeting the next week he marched a mile in 2:10¾, and in doing it he was driven a mile and an eight at speed, as he set his head for business down near the draw gate. The performance was a wonderful one and one that Col. Edwards took a great deal of pleasure in announcing from the stand. The mark that Guy made that day still stands against his name. Since that day, however, Millard drove him in 2:13, 2:11½, 2:12½, 2:13, 2:12, 2:11½, 2:11¾, 2:11¾, 2:12¾.

In 1890 Millard Sanders was located at Fleetwood Park, New York, and along towards the end of the year he made a contract with Count Valensin and went to California to look after the stock at the home of Sidney. Millard was not there long before he marked Santa Rita 2:26½ and Sanders 2:29½. His next good showing was at Cleveland when he came on with the stock that was to be sold in September. At that time he drove the yearling filly Ferndale a quarter in 36 seconds, and the performance sold her for $6,000. After his return to California he began to send the Sidney youngsters along at Stockton, where before the close of the year he had two world's records to his credit with the yearlings Fausta, 2:22¾, and Frou Frou, 2:25½. At the same track he also marked the following: Cupid, 2:18; Birdle, 2:25; Sid Fleet, 2:26½; Sybil, 2:27½; Sidina, 2:28½.

Millard has proved a success in the field of colt training. He has ridden faster behind a pair of yearlings that he caught in the lot than any man in the business, and it now remains for him to take a shy at the two and three-year-old marks that Palo Alto has made so formidable with Arion and Sunol.—American Sportsman.

Shanghai Mary.

An exchange has the following to say about Shanghai Mary, the dam of Green Mountain Maid, and as she was to all appearances an Ohio-bred mare, it will be read with interest:

Two brothers named Wilcox, living in Western New York, were in the habit of visiting different parts of the country, buying and trading in cattle, sheep and, in fact, anything in which an old dollar could be turned into a new one. In one of the journeys through Ohio, a night was passed with a farmer near Canton, and during the evening the farmer "swapped" a blind saddle pony to the Wilcox brothers for a ram in their flock. In the morning as the flock was started to resume the journey, and one of the brothers was seated on the blind pony, a young man overtook them, and he was mounted on a sorry-looking-filly, two years of age, that, according to the story of Mr. Wilcox, was foot sore and saddle galled, the young man having ridden her as he stated, several hundred miles. He was anxious to exchange her for a fresh horse, and finally made an even exchange with Mr. Wilcox for the blind pony. Here a slight discrepancy in different versions occurs. Mr. Randolph Huntington, who has tried to investigate the breeding of the mare, is positive that Mr. Wilcox demurred about making the exchange until the young man could satisfy him that the mare was his property, which he did by riding with him to the hotel at Canton, O., where the landlord identified him. If this latter were true, it would seem that some interested parties would have been able to trace the mare in later years, having such positive identification to work from.

Mr. Wilcox brought the mare home and she proved with foal, dropping a filly when she was three years old. In the meantime Mr. Wilcox sold the mare to Ripley Brothers, and at a public sale held by them Mr. Shepard bought the mare and filly, paying $75 for the former and $65 for the latter. At that time Mr. Shepard resided at Avon, N. Y.

Mr. Shepard found his purchase anything but pleasant to drive or handle. She had been worked some on the farm by the Ripleys, but she was so balky that it was sometimes found expedient to unharness her and return her to the stable. Mr. Shepard began using her in his business on the road, frequently driving her fifty miles and upward in a day. This was just what she wanted, and it steadied her, and she began to trot-fast. Mr. Shepard finally sold her to a hotel-keeper named Hotchkins at Caledonia, N. Y., and he in turn sold her to a resident of Angelica, N. Y. Her late history is well known. She was fast but very unsteady, and to the cover of Harry Clay produced Green Mountain Maid, the dam of Electioneer, Elaine, Prospero, etc.—American Sportsman

The Two-Minute Trotter.

OAKLAND, CAL., February 15, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—No one will have the hardihood to take issue with me in the dogmatic assertion that we have not reached the millenium. The logical deduction then from such a standpoint is that no one branch, so to speak, of the aforesaid millenial tree has matured and is now independent of the parent tree bearing fruit. Hence the American trotting horse has not reached the goal of perfection, or, to come nearer the objective point, has not reached his or her limit of speed for a distance of one mile.

There are those who contend that the trotting gait is not natural, and conceding the point, it is certainly reasonable to suppose that after the lapse of time that has been devoted to the breeding, education and training of the thoroughbred, the trot will become perfectly natural, and then, if not before, the equine star (not phenomenon) will appear on the American horizon and pass under the wire in two minutes. But of the present generation I desire consideration. I am a firm believer in progression, and to illustrate this point I must say I would choose a son or daughter of Anteeo rather than one of Electioneer or Hamiltonian 10 on general principles.

Now my models for present purposes are Arion, 2:10¦ at two years, and Frou Frou, 2:25¦ at one year, but as Frou Frou is the champion yearling of the world, must use her for illustrative purpose.

To call Frou Frou a phenomenon would be in my opinion a misnomer and an insult to Mr. Valensin, and this applies with equal force in regard to Arion, or Palo Alto and Senator Stanford, and in the case of the former Mr. Valensin must bear me out in this assertion or acknowledge that Frou Frou's origin is all a matter of chance, and this he cannot do since in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of January 23, 1892, he says over his own signature that Flirt, the dam of Frou Frou, showed such a flight of speed when a colt that it set him thinking, and that he immediately made up his mind, it is reasonable to suppose, to rear Frou Frou. Now here are the architect's plans and specifications, and the structure is as nearly complete as possible to date, and barring accidents will be completed in due time according to said plans and specifications, thus removing her from the list of phenomena.

Since she is not to be considered anything but the legitimate result of Mr. Valensin's efforts to breed a genuine trotter, I am not in a position to admit her inferiority to any horse in speed or other qualities which will entitle her to a mark of 2:10 or better in 1892, as a two-year-old—to bear me out in my progression theory, and as no trotter attains his greatest speed before maturity, and the best of them continue to improve up to fifteen or sixteen years of age, she will reduce her record of 2:10 at two years by a few seconds yearly, barring aacidents, until she will compass an honest mile in two minutes, and not occupy the exalted position of champion either. I do not pretend to claim anything definite for any horse over a track of the dark ages, or as the gentlemen who fail to have 2:08¼ horses call the regulation track.

There are points in the conformation (to say nothing of the nerve requisites) of horses now acknowledged by intelligent breeders to be essential to speed and endurance or staying qualities, and which were not understood or conceded a quarter-century ago, viz., great length of shoulder blade and true forearm to neutralize the concussion to the fore-quarters by the trotting gait, is one of the most important, and will serve to demonstrate the proposition that a century devoted to the development of this and kindred points must make the trot a perfectly natural gait and enable the trotter to keep pace with the runner, be he as swift as a meteor.

An investigation of the performances of a representative runner, Ten Broeck, reveals the fact that he made a two mile run in 3:27½, or the mile in 1:43¾, thus coming within four seconds of his one mile record of 1:39¾; a representative trotter, George M. Patchen, came to the wire in a two-mile heat in 4:53½, or an average of 2:26 5-8 to the mile, practically coming within three seconds of his one-mile record of 2:23½. It will be seen that the trotter did not lose so great a percentage by reason of the longer distance as the runner, thus deciding the question of endurance in favor of the trotter at his "natural gait." No intelligent horseman of the present day will question the ability of some of our American horses of the Nutwood and Electioneer crosses trotting quarters, or perhaps halves, at a 2:00 gait, thus demonstrating the fact that we have the 2:00 action at present, and all that is necessary is stamina or nerve force and endurance, and this will come by development to the point of establishing a race of trotting horses as distinct as the thoroughbreds, thus lessening the exertion to trot and disposition to break. Even falling short in the same ratio of George M. Patchen in his two-mile heat, we now have performers, according to their present rate of speed, that should cover a mile in 2:01.

We know that the Electioneer-Nutwood cross and the Sidney-Flaxtai combination has been foremost in bringing us the champions of the world. Now it would at first blush seem to be unwise to patronize any other strains, but the world has not come to a standstill.

If the road of progression leads us to believe that an Electioneer-Nutwood combined with thoroughbred is best, let us drive on that road at a great rate, if not greater. It cannot be possible that the requisites in a horse necessary to carry himself one mile in 1:35 can be a detriment to the trotter.

I can scarcely claim as original the assertion that the incomparable luster of the equine banner of progress of California, the champion State of the Union in the development of the highest type of horse, will not grow dim, but continue to shed an electric halo of glory to be seen of all present and nations yet to come, and with one accord be crowned the Equine Mecca of the universe. L. GRIFFIN.

The New Register.

Since the American Trotting Register Association of Chicago, which took the place of the Wallace Register Company, of New York, changed the standard so that pacers can now be admitted to an equality with the trotters, there has been an impending break in the ranks of breeders. This has at last taken shape through the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders, the oldest organization of its kind in the country, and the one that originally indorsed and supervised the Wallace Register. The sale of the latter to the new company and its transfer to Chicago left the National Breeders' Association without an official record and gave it no voice in the conduct of the American Register.

The discussion provoked by admitting pacers has now brought about a distinct issue, and after several conferences the Executive Committee of the Breeders' Association formally determined to open a new stud-book, devoted exclusively to high-closs trotters.

This work is under the auspices of the Breeders' Associatiou, and will be published by a stock company called the National Trotting Stud-Book Association. The last meeting was held recently in New York, and brought a full representation to the committee. The headquarters are to be in New York and the work of coupling the stud-book will probably be instrusted to G. C. Gue, now of Des Moines, Ia., a well-known writer on trotting horse topics, and at one time the acting compiler of the "Wallace Register."

One of those prominently identified with the new venture said that they were confident of liberal support, especially from the Eastern breeders, many of whom are in open revolt against the admission of pacers to registration. He mentioned Senator Leland Stanford and Gen. B. F. Tracy as among the friends of this scheme to elevate the standard of breeding the trotting horse. It is generally known that President H. W. T. Mali and other officials of the National Breeders are actively interested ln the movement.

The purpose of the new stud book is defined in two acts of rules, which are given below in full. That relating to records aims a death-blow at the so-called tin-cup performances, and makes it necessary, in order to bring in the immediate relatives of the trotter, that the record shall be made in a regular class race. There is also a provision for timing horses separarately and giving them due eredit, regardless whether they finish first or not.

This has been a vexed question, and will probably provoke some discussion, but the stud-book people say they are confident of being supported by the breeders, as the provisions will materially reduce the present heavy expense of obtaining a race record. The rules of the standard are even more important, as they are designed to distinguish between horses possessing extreme speed and the slower animal. Trotters of the 2:20 class have a preferred place in the new standard, as have sires and dams that beget or produce such performers.

Altogether it will be seen that the subjoined clauses provide for some very sweeping changes, and there is every prospect of a lively stud-book war based on the issue of recognizing extreme speed and debarring pacers from equality with trotters.

RULES RELATING TO RECORDS.

First—All performances recognized by this Association are either first-class records or second-class records.

Second—The time made by any horse in a regular class race constitutes a first-class record.

Third—The time made by any horse in a regular event, rather than a class race, constitutes a second-class record.

Fourth—No second-class record made after this publication of these rules shall operate to confer standard rank, except as provided by the rules of the standard.

Fifth—The time made by any horse owned by a member of either the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders or the National Trotting Stud Book Association may be taken by the official timers of the meeting or by a special agent of the association, assisted by one or more suitable persons selected by him. The time so taken shall, when certified to the recorder of the Stud Book by each of the acting timers and approved by the Board of Censors, constitute a record; provided the horse so timed is not afterwards distanced in the race.

Sixth—Any member of either the National Trotting Horse Breeders or the National Trotting Stud Book Association, whose competence as a timer of horses shall appear to the satisfaction of the President of the National Associatian of Trotting Horse Breeders, may be by him commissioned a special agent to take the time of horses as provided by these rules.

Seventh—A regular event is an event conducted according to the rules of either the National Trotting Association or the American Trotting Association and taking place at a public meeting.

Eighth—A class race is a race that is open to all horses of a certain class or age, and is so advertised in a suitable manner at least one week prior to the closing of entries thereto.

Ninth—A public meeting is a meeting the time and place of holding which has been suitably advertised at least two days in advance.

STANDARD GOVERNING ADMISSION TO THE STUD BOOK.

Any animal that meets the requirements of any of the following rules may be recorded as a standard trotting horse in the "National Trotting Stud Book of America."

First—Any stallion that is the sire of three animals having first-class records of 2:30 or better.

Second—Any stallion that is the sire of two animals having first-clsss records of 2:30 or better.

Provided (1), The sire of said stallion is the sire of two animals having first-class records of 2:30 or better; or, (2) the sire of said stallion has a first-class record of 2:30 or better; or (3), the sire of said stallion is a standard animal; or, (4), the dam of said stallion is a standard animal.

Third—Any stallion that has a record of 2:40 or better.

Provided (1), Said stallion is the sire of one animal having a first-class record of 2:30 or better; or, (2), the sire of said stallion is the sire of two animals having first-class records of 2:30 or better; or, (3) the sire of said stallion is the standard animal; or (4) the dam of said stallion is already a standard animal.

Fourth—Any mare that is the dam of one animal having a first-class record of 2:30 or better.

Fifth—Any mare that has a record of 2:30 or better.

Sixth—Any animal whose sire and dam are standard.

RULES GOVERNING ADMISSION TO ADVANCED STANDARD.

Any animal that is recorded as standard in the National Trotting Stud Book of America and that meets the requirements of the following rules may be recorded in the advanced standard department thereof:

First—Any stallion that is the sire of one animal having a first-class record of 2:20 or better.

Second—Any mare that is the dam of one animal having a first-class record of 2:20 or better.

Third—Any animal that has a record of 2:20 or better.

Fourth—Any animal whose sire and dam are recorded in the advanced standard department.

A COUNTRY editor in Missouri has returned to Mr. Williams, of Rush Park fame, a complimentary ticket to the races, donated last year, with the note: "Dear Sir—I used this 'comp' last year at your track during the August week. Accept thanks for the same. It is all I have to show for $1,200. Happy New Year! You need not send me one for 1892. Yours truly, Retired Sport."—Knoxville Express.

Foals Reported.

AT LA SIESTA STOCK FARM:

February 3, 1892, bay filly, off hind ankle white, by Eros, dam Morna, by Brigadier, second dam Countess (dam of Dawn, 2:18¾, and Strathway, 2:20. Named CONSTANCE DE BEVERLY.

February 9, 1892, light bay filly by Eros, dam Flora, by Elmo, second dam Victoria, by John Nelson 187. Named FLORA DEL MAR.

That Maraquita Record.

Mr. James Boyd, of Milpitas, wrote an inquiry to this office, regarding the record made by Maraquita, and when and where it was made. We answered that the race took place in San Jose, July 4, 1891, and that she made a mark of 2:30 in the second heat. Mr. Boyd then forwarded a letter to this office in which he stated that she did not make such a record; that he was one of the timers, and that he timed that heat and he wrote 2:36, but supposed that the six looked like a cipher and consequently the mare received credit for that which she was not entitled to.

We wrote to the secretary of the Santa Clara Valley Agricultural Society for the summary. He was not in San Jose the day of the race and consequently did not act as clerk, however, he sent the following which was copied from the records:

TROTTING, July 4, 1891.

Emma R.	1	2	2
Maraquita	2	1	3
Rockwood	3	2	2

Time 2:37½, 2:20, 2:38.

In Wallace's Register this summary agrees with the one he sent. Mr. Bragg also enclosed a notice in which he said he would communicate with the timers, Messrs. Boyd, Seale and Carter, and let us know the results. Soon after we received the following in reply to his inquiry: "Did Maraquita make 2:30 or 2:36 in race July 4, 1891?"

MILPITAS, CAL., Jan. 19, 1892.

MR. G. H. BRAGG, Dear Sir:—Maraquita took the second heat in her race, July 4th, 1891, in 2:36. Yours respectfully,

JAS. BOYD.

MAYFIELD, CAL., Jan. 24, 1892.

MR. GEO. H. BRAGG, Dear Sir:—In regard to the "Maraquita" matter I did not get an opportunity to call on you last Saturday; what I wished to say however is that I will see Vioget who drove the mare on the day the record was given, and tell him to straighten the matter out. After seeing him I will let you know what he has to say about the race. Yours, etc.,

ALFRED SEALE.

NEWARK, January 22, 1892.

G. H. BRAGG, Sec. S. C. V. A. S.,

DEAR SIR:—Yours received and would say that I was one of the timers in the race you speak of. I can not say whether she trotted that heat in 2:30 or not, as my watch went wrong and when we compared time my watch showed 2:20 then I knew it was wrong, then the other timers marked the card and sent it in. I did not see it.

Yours respectfully,
MARTIN CARTER.

We wrote to Wm. Vioget in regard to it and received the following:

SAN FRANCISCO, January 29, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, City,

DEAR SIR:—In answer to James Boyd's enquiry in regard to the race between Maraquita, Emma R. and Rockwood, trotted July 4, 1891, at San Jose, would say that I drove the mare Maraquita, and in the second heat I drove her out for a record. She trotted steady, without a break, and she made the mile in 2:29½ by my watch. I think I can time as correctly while I am driving as a good many can in the judges' stand. I was very much disappointed when the time was hung out 2:30, instead of 2:29½. After the heat was over I remarked to the judges that I had gone half a second faster than what they had given me. This mare had been driven to a buggy a mile in 2:32½ and her record at San Jose has never been heretofore questioned. At the time she made it everyone knew what her record was and are surprised that any doubt should be thrown upon it six months after the race and wonder what the object of such opposition to it means?

Yours respectfully,
W. H. VIOGET.

One of the judges, E. Topham, then sent the following letter:

MILPITAS, CAL., February 9, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, San Francisco.

DEAR SIR: -Recognizing the fact that through your valuable paper is the proper source to settle any matter of controversy in regard to matters that affect in any way the interests, of our trotting horse breeders of this Coast, and after so many inquiries to me regarding a race of which I was presiding judge at San Jose on July 4, 1891, in which Emma R., Rockwood and Maraquita trotted, and it is claimed that Maraquita obtained a record of 2:30, the facts are, Maraquita won the one heat (the second) in 2:36 as per time card handed to me by the timers, and I so announced it from the stand, which is well known by the driver of the mare W. H. Voiget, as well as several prominent horsemen that were present. Two of the timers have informed me that there was no controversy in regard to it at the time and need be none now. The Santa Clara Valley Association's aim is to give all horses which they are entitled to and every owner who is their just due, but cannot allow their names to be connected with fraud of this character or any other. Square dealing is their motto, and if you will be kind enough to publish this in your much valued paper it will probably set this present controversy at rest.

Yours very respectfully,
E. TOPHAM.

As our San Jose correspondent failed to make any mention of the races that day, we copied the account of it from the daily papers of San Jose in which the summary was quite plainly printed, 2:37½, 2:30 and 2:38.—ED.]

Larghetta Sold.

Last week Matt. Storn sold to E. McAbee the royally-bred stallion Larghetta. Mr. McAbee will take the horse to Canada, where he will be used both on the race course and in the stud. Larghetta showed Mr. Storn some very fast work last season; in fact, enough to make him believe it would take a tip-topper to beat him, but he got off and did not perform anywhere near as well as hewas capable when right. This horse, from his breeding, which we append, should prove a valuable acquisition to the owners of thoroughbred mares in Canada. He is now in splendid shape, and was selected by Mr. McAbee after a visit to a number of leading stock farms.

LARGHETTA
- JIM JOHNSON (Sire of the great Jacobin and others.)
  - LONGFELLOW ... Leamington, by Faugh-a-Ballagh
  - FANNY WELLS.. Nantura, by Brawner's Eclipse
    - Sovereign (imp.) by Emilius
      - Reel, dam of Lecompte, Prioress, War Dance and other great horses), by imp. Glencoe.
- LEVERET.....
  - LEVER..... Lexington, by Boston
    - Levity (dam of Ruric, Lightsome and Brenna), by imp. Trustee.
  - DAUGHTER OF... Captain Beard, by imp. Yorkshire
    - Envoy Mare, by imp. Envoy.

Fourth dam by imp. Tranby, fifth dam by Aratus, sixth dam by Josephus, seventh dam by Eaton's Columbus, eighth dam Rev. Dudley mare, etc.

A certain cure for malarial fever is found in Simmons Liver Regulator.

TURF AND TRACK.

Axtell has not been matched against Allerton, so Mr. Williams says.

The broodmares now demand the attention of all breeders on our stock farms.

William Vioget has taken his string of horses to San Jose race track.

There will be some racing at Fresno on Washington's Birthday, February 22d—running, trotting and pacing.

Some one has figured out that the average records of Electioneer's one hundred in the 2:30 list is 2:24½.

It has been figured out that the sons and daughters of Abdallah 15 have trotted 352 heats in 2:30 or better.

It is said that the American Trotting Register Association is registering horses at the rate of 200 names a day.

Jule Logan has sent his bay gelding by Altamont up to Hallacks, Oregon, to Chas. Hawk, and Jule thinks he will be in the races.

Buchanan, the winner of the Kentucky Derby in 1884, has so far sired nothing but winners, quite a marvelous record for this young stallion.

H. D. Albright has brought his Nephew stallion, Fred Arnold, 2:30¼, to Salinas from Los Gatos. The horse should take a low record this year.

Bric-a-Brac, by Alcazar, 2:20½, was the first trotter to get into the list in 1892. This work was done at Stockton on January 20th, and the mark made was 2:29¾.

George L. Warlow states that the report about Athadon being sick with the influenza is untrue. He says that a number of Eastern papers have been circulating this report.

Maxim, the great Musket horse imported by J. B. Haggin, is himself again, having entirely recovered from the clutches of pneumonia which at one time seriously threatened his life.

George Y. Bollinger, of San Jose, has two very handsome colts out of Endora, by Alexander. One of the colts is by Antinous, the other by Woolsey, both sons of Electioneer.

If you want a trotter, pacer, broodmare or horse-of-all-work, wait for Henry Pierce's sale in April, and then buy at your own price. See his advertisement in another column of this paper.

Senator John Boggs, of Colusa, has just completed a mile track on his place, about a mile and a half south of Princeton. The Senator is having a large number of trotting colts trained there.

It is claimed by the New York Herald that one hundred heads (spectators,) have been broken by policemen and thugs at Guttenberg since the Law and Order Society declared war against the robbers.

H. R. Crane, proprietor of the Rose Hotel, Pleasanton, will soon be able to show to the "boys" around that horse center what his filly by Junio is capable of doing. Everyone says she is a sweet mover.

Bella B. (full sister to Inspector B.) is heavy in foal to Salvator. The youngster should be a cracker-jack, as Bella B. holds the record at seven-eighths of a mile, 1:23½, and was a really good race mare at all distances.

Portland, Or., dates: Spring meeting, commencing June 7th and lasting five days; Fall meeting, beginning September 3d and lasting six days. Oregon State Fair, Salem, Or.: Begins September 12th and lasts six days.

The young broodmare Linda Wilkes, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, dam Atalanta, sister to Beautiful Bells, by The Moor, died at W. A. Wilson's Abdallah Park Farm at Cynthiana, Ky., Tuesday. She was valued at $10,000.

The Kentucky Stock Farm, in its last issue, publishes pictures of Fausta, 2:22¾, and Frou-Frou, 2:25½, the champion yearlings. The portraits of the two were taken from the Breeder and Sportsman of a recent date.

C. W. Welby has recently purchased a very speedy filly by Prince Wilkes, (he by Guy Wilkes, out of San Mateo Belle), dam Addie Whipple, by Speculation; second dam Lady Livingston (dam of Whippleton and Bloomfield Maid).

A. C. Avery, of Portland, recently sold to R. Morton, Kissock, black mare, by Rockwood 1467, dam (dam of Pearl Fisher, record 2:29½) by Kisbar 1273, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian 10; second dam by Oregon Pathfinder 10981.

Healdsburg horsemen have organized a driving club. Santa Rosa has a trotting club of about one hundred members and, altogether, it looks very much as if Sonoma county turf interests were going to be well looked after in the future.

Frank C. Baker, the Oregon State printer, has sold to Chas. Riley, Salem, Or., Rockwood 1467, bay horse, by Fleetwood 894, son of Happy Medium 409, by Hambletonian 10, dam Montezuma, by Abdallah 15, son of Hambletonian 10.

Director, 2:17, from what he has already done in breeding to Col. H. I. Thornton's thoroughbreds, should make the greatest action, controller in the United States. Monroe Salisbury is beginning to see the efficacy of hot blood close up. He always sought it for a foundation, however.

Ze-Eta by Chrisman Hambletonian (sire of Steve Whipple 2:23 and Kate Agnew 2:28½) was bred to Direct 2:06, the fastest harness horse in the world. Kate Agnew will also be bred to Direct, now that they are both in Kentucky. If Ze-Eta has a colt by this union Mr. Needham, of Bellota, will have something the Stocktonians can come out and look at.

The "string" of L. Swan, of Yreka, Cal., arrived safely at City View Park, Portland, Or., on the 9th inst. These finely-bred animals, consisting of the Antevolo stallion Ante-Echo, Georgia Woodthorpe, Zephyr, Siskiyou Belle and Victorinia, are in charge of Al Peacock, and we expect to hear a good account of Georgia Woodthorpe's work on the turf this year, and possibly some of the others.

S. H. Crane, of Turlock, recently sold his two-year-old stallion, Alcazar Jr., to John Irving, of Grass Valley, Cal., according to a letter from an occasional correspondent from that town. Mr. Crane it seems is driving the youngsters bought at the Hicks sale, and is much pleased with them.

H. C. McGuire bred his Lemont mare to Elmer Ludwig's Anteeo stallion. McGuire claims the honor of breeding the first mare in Oregon to a son of Anteeo. His promising three-year-old Hamrock, that recently met with an accident, has fully recovered, much to his owner's delight.

Commodore (Jack Dempsey), by Sidney, dam by Grand Moor, now but four years of age, bids fair to be a great sire of trotters, as his youngsters at Bay District track have shown phenomenally fast work, and are beautifully shaped as well. Everyone who has seen any "bank" on the Jack Dempseys.

William Donathan has recovered from the severe sickness which at one time threatened to carry him before the judge's stand above. He looks quite thin, and says he had a hard struggle, but thanks to medical skill and good attention he is able to come up for the word, and will not be left at the post.

Orrin Hickok, the famous reinsman, is happy these days over the showing made by Prince Warwick, Peep o'Day and Our Dick, the pacer, for they are all showing lots of speed and stamina. Charley C., 2:18½ pacing, is not doing well—in fact, is so lame that he may not be seen on the circuits at all this year.

The inbred Whipple's Hambletonian stallion, Steve Whipple, 2:23, is rounding to and looking fine as silk. In the words of an old turf critic: "He is a thoroughbred four-cornered trotter, every inch of him, and the horse that beats him in a race will feel like lying down at the end of the mile."

One of the Palo Alto stock cars went up on the 1.17 train yesterday afternoon with eight of Stanford's picked colts. Five of them were consigned to Marvin's new headquarters in Western Pennsylvania and three to Malcolm Forbes of Boston, the man who got Arion.—San Mateo County Times Gazette.

In the hurry of changing our dress of type from the old to the new an error occurred in one of our advertisements which we hasten to correct. The dam of the exceedingly well-bred stallion, Wilkesdale, was Thorndale Maid and she was by Thorndale, whose record was 2:22½, (instead of 2:24½ as printed).

E. S. Smith, of San Jose, owner of Baywood, Doctor Swift 2:20 and Fleetwood, has sold a colt to Oscar Luning, a that he called Blackwood. This youngster is by Baywood out of a daughter of George M. Patchen Jr. 31, second dam by Williamson's Belmont. He reports all of his horses in excellent condition.

Every now and then one hears the phrase, "She may be frisky, but she's not fast." It traces back to that beautiful daughter of Virginia, Mattie Ould, who was dowered with wit as well as beauty. Daring and brilliant, she met with a familiarity that she quickly resented, with "I may be frisky, but I'm not fast."

The greatest bargain during the recent sales, in the opinion of many, was when A. A. Moore, of this city, bought Sidney Boy, full brother to the champion yearling trotter, Frou-Frou 2:25½, for $2,600. He is unbroken, but is said to show more speed and a better gait than did his sister at the same age.—Philadelphia Item.

There are few better-looking daughters of Nutwood 600 than Lot D. Slocum's mare Luella (dam of Myrtle, the three-year-old Anteeo filly that got a record of 2:19½ in a race at Sacramento last fall). She is now at the Valensin Stock Farm, having been leased to Mr. Valensin. She will be bred to Sidney this spring.

Trainer Ab. Stemler purchased this week the two-year-old thoroughbred colt Linville, by Hardwick, dam Shasta, by Spendthrift, second dam Bombazine, by Uncas, from Judge Post, of Sacramento. The colt has been entered in the American Derby of 1893 at Chicago and the San Francisco Derby and Tidal Stakes here.

Rufe Smith had his handsome Napa Wilkes yearling, Champion Wilkes, in town yesterday. The youngster is not quite eleven months old and stands 14.3½ hands high. He is a perfect line trotter, as handsome as a picture, and if nothing happens Rufe will be in it with the best of the two-year-olds of '93.—Salinas Journal.

Rollo, the phenomenal pacer who was barred in the Independence, Iowa, stakes after he made his record of 2:28½ last season, will probably be put in the Grand Circuit next season, with Frank Smith, the green stallion, who made an eighth in 14 seconds. Rollo is a coming two-year-old, by Jerome Eddy, dam Gray Betsy, by Mambrino Patchen.

At Village Farm, Buffalo, N. Y., a colt was recently foaled by Chimes out of a thoroughbred mare Tallulah, by Planet, dam Mazurka, by Lexington. This fellow is bred in lines similar to Palo Alto, and Mr. Hamlin says an effort will be made to send out as good a half-thoroughbred performer from Village Farm as did Senator Stanford.

Last Tuesday Dan Miller, the well-known young turfman, shipped his game little mare Ida Glenn from the Menlo Stock Farm of W. O'B. Macdonough to Sacramento, where the daughter of Glen Elm will be trained for the spring meetings. After filling her engagements Ida Glenn will be bred to St. Carlo, premier stallion at Menlo Stock Farm.

John A. Goldsmith has a black filly by Sidney, 2:19¾, second dam by Alaska (son of Electioneer), third dam by Norwood (by Speedwell Hambletonian), fourth dam by John Nelson; fifth dam by St. Clair, that will pay him well for any training he may give her. She is of good size, evenly made, and as pretty a trotter as one ever gazed upon.

Warwick, sire of Wary and other good race horses, died recently at Stockdale (J. B. Haggin's Kern-county ranch). Warwick was a dark bay horse, foaled 1872, bred by J. S. Watson, of New Jersey, sired by imp. Leamington, and out of Minnie Minor, by Lexington; second dam Julia, by imp. Glencoe; third dam Sally Ward, by John R. Grymes etc.

Wilfred Page, of Penn's Grove, was the first one to discover the inaccuracies in the standard as now published for the registration of trotting horses, and they were published in the columns of this journal at that time. Since then, the subject has been agitated, until to-day we see that there is a decided feeling among all breeders to have his ideas carried out to the letter.

Monroe Salisbury believes a splendid combination of good blood lines is requisite for success, and more so since his experience with Director's progeny are becoming pleasanter and more profitable every year. He says he likes to have good representatives of the Star family in the shafts and a member of the Starr family in the sulky. It's hard to beat such a combination.

Starter James F. Caldwell was called from the East to Kentucky last week to attend the funeral of his mother. While in Danville Mr. Caldwell purchased Colonel James W. Guest's Home Farm of 305 acres of rich blue-grass land, located two miles from Danville. It is the starter's intention to retire to this farm and live after his two years' contract with his present employers expires.

Lee Shaner is driving a very promising nine-months old bay colt called General at Bay District track by Commmodore, dam Cambridge, by Eclipse (thoroughbred), second dam by General McClellan 133. The youngster is entered in the yearling stakes at Independence, Ia., and Nashville, Tenn., and his trainer thinks it will take a mighty good one to get first money away from him at either Rush or Cumberland Park.

A morning contemporary last Sunday stated that there was no New Zealand Stud Book. We know of eight volumes of that work, and believe one or two more have been issued. It also said that after the injury to R. Porter Ashe's Queen Alta at Chicago she was unable to start any more last season. The filly won two races at Bay District track late last fall to our certain knowledge, and that was after the Chicago accident.

George Starr is handling a fine-looking Anteeo mare belonging to M. F. Tarpey, of Alameda. She has just weaned a foal by Guide, and is getting into shape. Mr. Starr thinks a great deal of her. Her dam was by California Chief, a son of Hamilton Chief. Mr. Tarpey has another Anteeo mare at J. Sutherland's place, Pleasanton, that is also "threatened with speed," and can pass nearly all the trotters on the roads around that pretty place.

L. P. W. Quimby, of Oregon, who has just returned home after a visit to all our leading stock farms, pronounces Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, "the greatest horse he ever saw on earth." He prefers this horse "to any Electioneer living." The Oregon gentleman goes into ecstacies over Vida Wilkes, 2:18½, and declares that she will be the coming wonder of turfdom, and over Almont Medium, Cœur d'Alene and Prince Warwick he is scarcely less enthusiastic.

To Order is one of the strangest names for a fast youngster we have heard yet. It has been given to one of the most promising young pacers in this State. He is by Director, 2:17, out of that great campaigning pacer, Maud, 2:20, that was the champion of the State in all her races for the three years she was on the turf. To Order has a bright future before him if all the rumors about his extreme speed and racing qualities are to be believed.

John Mackey and his host of trainers at Rancho del Paso are busy at work preparing the thoroughbred yearlings for the New York sale which is soon to take place. Arrangements are being made to sell 123 youngsters, the get of the following sires: Sir Modred 23, Darebin 22, Hyder Ali 18, Hidalgo 13, Joe Daniels 10, Warwick 7, John Happy 6, Ben Ali, Florentine and Tyrant 5 each, Midlothian 4, imported Kingston 2, Kyrle Daly 2 and Dutch Roller 2.

The full sister of Direct has been sent from Los Angeles to be bred to Stamboul, 2:11. This should make a great cross. The filly will doubtless be sent for a low record this season, although no definite arrangement has been made by Mr. Outh; waite as far as known. That gentleman has received very flattering news about his bay colt by Stamboul 2:11, dam Alta Belle. He has been reeling off quarters in 38 seconds, and promises to be as speedy as he is well-bred.

Election, the premier stallion at Brookside Farm, is considered by critical horsemen to be the handsomest son of Electioneer, outside of Palo Alto, in this State, and it is doubtful if many there surpass him. His progeny are all of uniform build and very fast trotters. We look for him to enter the list, with a number of his sons and daughters to follow closely after. So far as breeding goes he is related to the fastest, and traces to a splendid thoroughbred foundation.

H. M. LaRue has, we understand, made formal application to be appointed an assistant Chief of the Horticultural Department of the Columbian World's Fair under Chief Daniels, appointed by the National Commission. The California World's Fair Association decided to recommend him for the place, provided he can secure the indorsement of the representative of California on the National Board. The appointment would be a most excellent one, and we sincerely hope it will be made.

A. H. Cohen, of Fruitvale, Alameda County, has a black colt called Sable Steinway that is a perfect picture of ebonized symmetry. He is by Steinway, 2:25¾, out of Algerdetta, she by Allandorf out of King Girl, by Mambrino King; second dam, the dam of Alcaville, 2:29, by Wilson's Blue Bull 75; third dam, by Tom Hal. Sable Steinway will make a great sire, having a double cross of the much-prized blood of Mambrino Patchen, besides tracing to Alma Mater, Dolly, Abbess and Lady Waltermire.

A foal by Eros out of Beautiful Bells would be hard to beat for producing blood lines, bringing in, as it would, Electioneer, with 100 in the list, The Moor with six, Green Mountain Maid with eight, Sontag Mohawk with seven, Beautiful Bells with six, Minnehaha with five, Clay Pilot with two, Eros with six and Hambletonian 10 with 41, a total of 181 2:30 performers represented, with the blood in its veins of the four greatest broodmares in the history of the trotting turf—Beautiful Bells, Minnehaha, Sontag Mohawk and Green Mountain Maid. Such a combination would be far ahead of anything known or possible of production, these dams alone having produced to date twenty-six "list" performers, all trotters. A yearling bred this way would in all likelihood bring more money under the hammer than anything yet produced.

C. P. GRIFFIN, of Walnut Creek, Cal, has purchased of Martin Carter, Nutwood Stock Farm,a bay colt, two years old, by California Nutwood, dam Nellie G., by Anteeo; second dam May Queen, by Venture, 2:27¼. The colt was selected by Mr. Griffin after visiting a large number of the large stock farms in the State, and so speedy is the youngster that his owner and breeder declare that he will go into the list this season without doubt, no accident occuring. This colt is 15.1 hands high at the withers, 15.2½ over the hips.

WALTER MABEN will have a select string this year belonging to Edgemont Park. Edevia, Freckles, Harry Winchester and Redondo will all be trained. Lucy R. is to be bred to McKinney, but will be trained, as Walter is confident that she can reduce her record. There is a yearling at Edgemont Park that will be heard from before this year is out. The filly referred to is by Jud Wilkes, dam Tempest, who, as is generally known, is the dam of Glendine, 2:20. Walter intends to enter the filly in the yearling stakes on this circuit.

THE habit of shying and turning around at unusual sights and sounds makes many a good horse unsafe for track and road purposes. It is often acquired by harsh and angry treatment on the part of the breaker and trainer, who adds fuel to fire by getting mad at the very time he should keep cool and use kindness. It is a good plan for the driver to be on the lookout for startling objects and sounds and prepare the animal for them by gradual approach with a persuasive voice, at the same time keeping a ready rein on him in case of emergency.

THE breeder who carefully and correctly mates his animals, with reference not only to individual qualities, but with reference to known family characteristics, will, in the majority of cases, be more successful than the hap-hazard, happy-go-lucky breeder who pays no attention to blood lines, but unites his sires and dams only with reference to individual qualities. To assert the contrary is to deny all science of breeding except in so far as it refers to the individuality of the animals mated, and is equivalent to saying that we have learned nothing from the experience of half a century.

DR. H. LATHAM, of Sonoma, and George Starr, the well-known "knight of the sulky," own a beautiful Director filly, in partnership, and when Mr. Starr was driving her down the road the first time with harness on, naturally she tried to kick the obnoxious straps off. The advice the doctor gave to Mr. Starr was: "That's right; keep my end of the filly trotting on the earth, Mr. Starr. Your end can kick all the stars out of the sky and one out of a sulky if it wants to. It appears that you have something to learn about weighting, for my end is balanced and yours needs an anchor."

LITTLE RUFFIN, now sixteen years of age, is to be trained again this year. Will wonders never cease? The name Little Ruffin reminds us of Little Reb, by Rebel, dam Virginia, who on the 25th of February, 1881, won three races in one afternoon at New Orleans—a mile and an eighth, mile-heat and mile and a quarter race. This feat stands alone in the history of wonderful speed and endurance in the past twenty-five years, at least. Little Reb was owned by Billy Lakeland, who once rode horses in California and who afterward owned Exile, Tea Tray and other famous horses.

COLONEL W. H. ASHBY, well known in California and Nevada as an owner of royally-bred trotting stock, has removed from Wellington, Nev., to the thriving little city, Beatrice, Neb., to which place he carries our best wishes. Just previous to leaving Wellington, Colonel Ashby shipped a chestnut filly by Chitwood 5216, dam By-By (sister to Lockheart, 2:14¾), to be bred to Stamboul, 2:11. This union should be a grand one, bringing in, as it will, a double cross of Belmont and Miss Russell (dam of Maud S., 2:08¾) and crosses of Dictator, George Wilkes, Abdallah 15, American Star 14, Edwin Forrest, Clay and Pilot Jr. 12, besides.

MR. LOUIS P. EZEKIEL, of Cincinnati, who serves as the clerk of the scales for all the jockey clubs from Memphis to St. Paul, has recently invented a contrivance that will fill a long-felt want. The invention is called a betting indicator, and is to be patented. It will consist of an upright board, similar to the present jockey boards, which Ezekiel has supplied most of the race caurses with. The system is worked by numbers to indicate the name of a horse which exactly corresponds with a jockey's arm number and numbers on the daily programme. The idea is to give the average odds in the "ring" of the first, second and post betting. The indicator will give the "straight," "place" and "show" price of each horse.

THE Spirit of the Times says: "Of course Tournament was out of form last year, and the chances of his standing training are somewhat slim, but if he can be gotten to the post in the Suburban he is leniently dealt with at 112 pounds. Ban Chief, at 110 pounds, is certainly accorded an extra good chance on his best form, and it will not surprise us to find the Western contingent enthusiastic to a degree over this horse's prospects. Mr. Lawrence has not under-estimated Eon in giving him a pound more than Raceland, but we think that Sir John in the scale adopted for the Coney Island event fares well at 108 pounds, he getting two pounds more under the smaller scale adopted at Gravesend. Reporter, too, is in very light at 100 pounds, and if this speedy son of Enquirer should by any chance feel like racing, 'divil a one' of the others could handle him at the weights. Banquet at 112, Uno Grande at 104, Russell at 116, Poet Scout at 118, Clarendon at 110 and Cassius at 105 all look like having some kind of a chance."

MATT DWYER is handling a good-sized string at Fresno, and of Junio, 2:22, who heads the list, the noted driver says: "I am going to shape him up and take him to Stockton this fall, and I think he is capable of going a mile in '16 over the kite." Others in the string are Devotion, bay mare, trial 2:20½ at Fresno, by Dexter Prince, dam Peerless, by General Knox, property of E. H. Cox, of Madera: Russ Wilkes, by Guy Wilkes,dam by Perihelion,a three-year-old; full brother to the above, a two-year-old, property of S. N. Seymour, Russ House, San Francisco (both are very promising); three-year-old filly by Anteeo, dam by Nutwood, property of M. F. Tarpey (finely-gaited and very speedy); bay colt, four.year-old, by El Capitan, dam by General McClellan, owned by F. P. Wickersham, Fresno, Cal.; bay colt Electrician, by Election, dam Fanny Romulus, by Romulus, owned by Brush & Nevins, Stockton; Nugget, bay mare, by son of Nutwood, property of T. J. Hay, Fresno, Cal. (can beat a 2:30 gait), and two or three other colts.

OREGON horsemen are much pleased with McFarlane & Sperry's recent purchase, Scarlet Letter, by Red Wilkes, dam Abdaletto, by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22; second dam Laura Crockett, by Almont 33; third dam, Sally Tee, by Abdallah 15; fourth dam, Kate Crockett (dam of Lula, 2:15), by imp. Hooton. Kate Crockett is Advertiser's third dam. Scarlet Letter was foaled May 10, 1890, and was purchased of Gen. W. T. Withers, of Lexington, Ky., for $2,500, at five months old. Wilkes blood is highly prized in Oregon, and as this is a grand individual, he should make a low record and be a grand stock horse. Scarlet Letter is quartered at Vancouver, Wash.

WHILE all lovers of thoroughbreds in America are talking about the Salvator-Miss Woodford filly, the Salvator-Lizzie Lucas filly should not be lost sight of by the enthusiasts. This is Lizzie Lucas' fourteenth foal. The old gray mare who beat everything in the country of note in her day, Tom Bowling amongst the number, has been a wonderful brood as well as a race mare, for she is the dam of those good performers Cyclops, Chimera, Cambyses and Lytton, and Miss Woodford has yet to demonstrate worth as a brood-mare. Lizzie Lucas, who in sixteen years has missed but once, is about the last of the get of imported Australian, and was from that great old gray mare Eagless, by Glencoe, second dam by Grey Eagle.

THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Eureka Jockey Club was held Tuesday evening in the parlors of the Western Hotel says the Humboldt Times. The report of the Secretary and Treasurer were received and referred to the new Board of Directors, who are as follows; Daniel Murphy, A. Connick, J. F. Thompson, W. S. Clark, P. H. Quinn, Wm. Clark, Dr. R. Gross, Ira A. Russ and S. F. Pine. Harry Cohn and C. G. Taylor were unanimously elected Secretary and Treasurer, respectively. After some general conversation over the prospects of races for the present year, the stockholders adjourned, and the Board of Directors met immediately after, the meeting being called to order by Dr. Gross, President. Daniel Murphy was then elected President for the ensuing year, and a Finance Committee, consisting of Dr. R. Gross, A. Connick and Wm. Clark were appointed. After this it was agreed that a meeting should be called again in a few days to appoint further committees and to make arrangements for interesting racing events for the present season. There is some talk of the Eureka Jockey Club forming a racing circuit with Rohnerville and Ferndale, and adopting a programme of races under the auspices of the these three associations.

THE fast Oregon thoroughbred mare Raindrop will not race this year, but will be bred, says the Oregonian. Her racing history is of interest as showing what may be expected of her offspring, and because she is in a certain sense the most important figure in the Bybee string, being the first horse of his own breeding, and affords an indication of his judgment in selecting strains. It was in 1889 that Raindrop started out, a diminutive two-year-old. At Helena she was second in a half-mile dash on the Fourth of July; second in the Pioneer stakes, three-quarter mile; second in the two-year-old purse race, beating Guido out in the first and only time the two ever met in their two-year-old form. She won the Breeders' stakes at Salem, the Inland Empire stakes at The Dalles and the Rural Spirit stakes at Baker City. In 1890 she started out by running unplaced to Sunday and Tim Murphy's five-eighths at City View's June meeting. She was second in the three-quarter Sinfax won. At Tacoma she won the first heat in the three-quarter and repeat, Hotspur taking the race. The three-quarter dash there she won. At Seattle she won the half-mile. Her greatest triumph probably was her victory in the mile and a quarter at Tacoma's fall meeting, over the best field of horses there. She also won the first Washington Derby there, and was second in the mile dash. At Salem that year she started in four races in one week and won them all—the Derby, three-quarter, one and one-sixteenth and a mile.

THE Board of Directors of the Sixth District Agricultural Association met at Visalia last Monday, where they joined a Committee of Conference from Kern county. After some little discussion, it was agreed that the entire appropriation from the State to that district ($2,500) should be turned over to the association being formed at Bakersfield. Visalia has had the fair for five consecutive years, and while there has been talk of holding one elsewhere in the district, now that the thriving city of Bakersfield is going to have a good racing association the members of the Board thought it only a simple act of justice to Kern county to give her the entire appropriation. That Bakersfield will have a first-class track is now assured. A canvass has resulted in the citizens subscribing over $5,000 to date, and the promoters expect to swell the nest-egg figure to $15,000 ere four weeks have rolled around. If the people of that section will only cogitate over the matter a little, they will arrive at the conclusion that nothing could be devised to build up the country more than the building of a fast race track and handsome grand stands. A first-class race course and racing thereon has "made" more than a dozen towns in this country, and as the people of Kern and Tulare counties are "horsey," and lots of handsome, speedy and game horses are bred there, the people should subscribe liberally to help the new association along, and at the same time boom their city and surrounding country and enhance the value of their property.

WILLIAM MCCORMICK, who trained the sensational colt El Rio Rey and sent him to the post fit to show his heels to the best company in America, is handling a string of ten horses at the Antrim Stock Farm of Chas. Kerr, six miles from Bakersfield. In ths lot is the giant three-year-old Herald, who ran well here last spring, the four-year-old colt Munster, by Darebin; Jennie K., a three-year-old daughter of Sir Modred, has filled out into a grand racehorse, and she is said to be as good as she looks; Ulster, three-year-old colt by Warwick is racy-looking. There are besides two four-year-olds—a bay gelding by John Happy and a chestnut colt by Joe Daniels, a handsome, trim-built fellow. The two-year-olds are four in number—a brown filly by Tyrant, two brown fillies by Apache (son of imp. Mortemer and The Banshee, sister to True Blue), and a bay colt by Apache from Brook, by Ten Broeck; second dam, Palmetto by Virgil. This last-named youngster is a racehorse of the first water, and the boys are mighty "sweet" on him. Another good one is the Apache-Virgie filly. They have all wintered handsomely, and will participate at the coming spring meeting of the Blood Horse Association. Mr. Kerr also has nine yearlings at this place by Apache, the largest and best-developed of which is a chestnut colt out of a Leinster mare, second dam the famous mare Irene Harding by Jack Malone. He bids fair to be another El Rio Rey, but we hope he will not have to retire so early as did the last of the Norfolk-Marion race of turf wonders.

WOODLAND "horse" items: The Fair Grounds and race track are the scene of much activity, as G. W. Woodard is having the track worked in order that it will be in the prime of condition for the coming spring races. The horsemen are elated over the prospects for a successful meeting, and several of them predict better speed contests than were witnessed at the recent Fair. Training will be commenced in real earnest next week, and upwards of sixty head of horses will be put to work at that time. Johnny Blue has quite a string at the track, among which is a yearling which promises to become one of the fastest in the State. Pete Fryatt also has a sprightly yearling that shows remarkable speed for a colt, and promises to develop into a world-beater. In T. A. Stephens' string are also two yearlings, one a pacer and the other a trotter, both of which show a three-minute gait. Mr. Stephens has two thoroughbreds under training for the running races, in May. Det Bigelow, trainer for George Woodard, has a number of Button colts in hand, which bid fair to lower the trotting records. There are also several speedy yearlings in this stable, which also show a splendid gait. All in all, the horses under training at the track is ample evidence that Yolo county is especially adapted to the breeding of blooded horses, and we may depend upon seeing some exciting races at the spring meeting. The gravelly soil on the eastern stretch of the track will be replaced by firmer and better soil. A course inside of the present track is to be made for training runners. —Woodland Democrat.

IN CALIFORNIA there is quite an excitement just now in regard to breeding mares to the stallions Advertiser, 2:16, and Memo. The name of the latter horse may not be particularly familiar to the East, but on the Pecific alope he has been well thought of for a number of years, as he was one of the first of the get of Sidney to show speed at an early age, and a public trial in 2:20½ at three years set him up mightily in the estimation of horsemen. An accident prevented this trial being followed by a fast record, and for a time Memo was rather overlooked, but since his sister Frou-Frou came out last fall and lowered the yearling trotting record to 2:25¼ there has been a rush to obtain Memo's services, especially as he is now going perfectly sound and there is little doubt of his taking a record of 2:20 or better during the coming season. Nothing succeeds like success, and the performances as yearlings of Frou-Frou and Fausta have naturally given the Sidney blood a wonderful boom, and this is being felt in the case of Faustino, 2:14¾ as a three-year-old, that is a brother to the champion yearling pacer Fausta 2:22¾, a far greater number of applications for his services having been received at the Waters Farm, where he is owned, than would otherwise have been the case. As further illustrating the effect which a great performance will have on the reputation of animals carrying the same blood as a sensational trotter or pacer it may be mentioned that in a recent trotting stake opened in California on a rather extensive scale five sons and daughters of Memo have been entered, an unusually large representation for a horse that has done but little in the stud, says Clark's Horse Review. There is no question that from the standpoint of future expectations no other family of horses has quite such a brilliant outlook as the Sidneys, because, in addition to getting extreme early speed at both the pace and trot, Sidney himself is a young horse and in the best of health, so that the chances for others of his get coming first to the wire at the finish of heats trotted low down in the teens is first-class, whereas, Electioneer being dead, there must, of necessity, be a falling-off in the accessions to his list of 2:30 performers. When the question of age is considered Sidney stands right in the front rank of trotting stallions, and it is a noticeable fact that inasmuch as he is reserved for private use enterprising breeders in all parts of the country are trying to get hold of representatives of his blood while they can be secured at something less than the fancy prices demanded for sons and daughters of George Wilkes and Electioneer, which two stallions are of course the popular favorites just now, judged by the standard of prices obtained in the auction sale ring, which, after all, is the best criterion for breeders.

AT BAY DISTRICT track Lee Shaner is handling no less than twenty-two head of trotting-bred stock, and there are some stars in the string that will shine brightly this season beyond any doubt. At the head of the bunch is Almont Medium, 2:28½, by Happy Medium, dam Lady Chiles, by Almont 33. He is a grand individual, sixteen hands and an inch in height, a bright bay in color with black points, and looks every inch a monarch of the turf. This horse is going to make a season in the stud, and will then be taken up and raced. Shaner confidently expects him to trot in 2:15 or 2:16 this year. Commodore (Jack Dempsey), by Sidney, dam by Grand Moor, looks well, and is showing well in his work. We expect to see this horse on the roll of great sires ere long. W. H. Bailey, 2:20, the grand Oregon horse, is getting over his lameness, and will in all likelihood be seen on our race tracks this season. One that took our eye more than anything in the string was Khartoum, a black three-year-old, the property of D. J. Murphy, of Santa Clara county, by Soudan, dam Black Betsy (dam of Mamie Comet, Macleay's dam), by Sportsman. He is of good height (about 15.3 hands), has a clean, gamey-looking head, staunch legs, with short cannon bones, heavy, muscular quarters, is deep through the heart, has a well-rounded barrel and body of good length, short, strong back, and is a little higher over the hips than at the withers, and has a sharp-curved rump. If he does not trot fast and stay the route, then conformation goes for nothing. A cracking big fellow is the bay gelding Nubia, three years old, by Soudan, dam Emma Anderson, by Wapsie. He made a two-year-old record of 2:45. Great things are expected of the bay gelding Manning, 2:20¾, being handled by Shaner. Kitty B., 2:38½ at two years, is a good-looking filly by Sidney, 2:19¾. Lady H., 2:23, light bay by Sidney, 2:19¾, dam by Del Sur, 2:24. She is expected to do well among the pacers this season. Others in the Shaner stable are a three-year-old pacer by Altamont, dam by Captain Swigert Jr.; nine-months old bay colt, General, by Commodore, dam Cambridge, by Eclipse (thoroughbred); bay filly, same age (a "wonder"), by Commodore, dam by Dawn, 2:18¾; Mark Medium, 2:25¼ (a good racehorse), by Almont Medium, 2:28½, dam by Alcona; Almot, bay stallion by Almont; Belle McGregor, five years old, by Robert McGregor, 2:17½, dam the dam of Juanita; Steineer, full brother to Charles Derby, 2:20, by Steinway, 2:25¾, dam Katie G.; Myrtle, four years, by Hernani, dam by General McClellan 144; Sidena, by Sidney, 2:19¾, dam Lena Bowles, by Vick's Ethan Allen; Moorzouk, two years, by Sidney, dam Queen, by Sultan, 2:24; Myrtle F., three, by Secretary, dam by Anteeo, 2:16¼; yearling brother to Commodore, and Harry Howe, 2:26¼, by Vidette Jr., dam by Delmonico.

THE GUN.

The California Club.

The California Wing-shooting Club met at the traps at Oakland track on Sunday last to inaugurate the twentieth season of live pigeon shooting conducted under the auspicies of this organization.

The conditions were most favorable for a splendid day's sport and there can be no question but that every one in attendance was amply repaid for being present and participating in this, the opening event of the season on these popular shooting grounds.

The grounds were in perfect condition; the short carpeting of grasses making the view pleasant to the eye the most agreeable and pleasant of all back grounds over which to shoot.

The birds furnished for the match were of the very first quality, and stronger, more vigorous ones never sprang from a trap. They were "clippers" every one and darted off with surprising swiftness and vigor. The morning opened with a number of pool matches in which Messrs. Robinson, Smith and "Slade" carried off most of the honors.

Mr. C. F. Taylor, the well known and deservedly popular champion one-arm-shot of the world was present and gave an exhibition of his wonderful skill with the gun at the trap in killing pigeons. Counting his score on the limit of the eighty-yard boundary he would have eleven kills out of first twelve fired at with the escaping bird severely punished. A record which we take pleasure in putting up against that of any other sportsman's in the world made under similar conditions. The birds as we have said were strong and vigorous every one. Mr. Taylor was not favored as to birds but on the contrary like the unaccountable perverseness sometimes shown in nature he had his full share of "drivers" and the way he "pulled them down" was a matter of real pleasure to witness.

The subject of quick shooting has been, and will doubtless ever continue to be, one of the first rules in our mind for successful trap shooting. This feature was illustrated all through the shooting on this occasion. Mr. Edward Fay came over doubtless with the intention of making a record. In any event he surprised all his friends and spectators as well by the wonderful display of skill in the use of his second barrel. We believe it true that birds killed by use of his second barrel fall, as a rule, nearer the traps than do most of the birds killed by use of the first barrel in the hands of many of our best shots. Shooting with a twenty-yard boundary we doubt if he could be beaten on this coast or elsewhere for that matter, that is, judging from his work done in this event.

Mr. C. B. Smith shot in splendid form, especially at the opening of the match and during the greater portion of the day.

Mr. Crittenden Robinson shot in his usual form. He always shoots well, and kills his birds with much ease and grace.

Mr. Golcher was shooting a strange gun which he found to make a wide pattern and as a result his birds were hit, for the most part, but not hard enough to drop them within bounds.

Dr "Slade" shot unusually well, killing his birds in splendid style. Mr. Eddy's shooting was very good throughout the day, his first barrel doing the most of the work in a clean nice manner.

Mr. H. Schroeder did some good execution better in pools than in the main match.

Crittenden Robinson	1	1	2	1	1	1	1	2	1	1	2	1—12
"Slade"	1	2	2	2	0	1	1	2	1	2	2	1—11
C. B. Smith	1	1	2	2	1	1	1	2	1	1	2	1—12
R. A. Eddy	1	1	1	*0	1	0	1	1	2	1	1	1—10
Edward Fay	2	2	2	1	1	1	2	1	1	1	*0	1—11
H. C. Golcher	0	1	0	0	0	2	1	1	2	0	2	2— 7
C. F. Taylor	1	*0	0	2	1	1	1	1	*0	0	*0	1— 7
H. Schroeder	2	1	*0	1	1	*0	1	1	1	1	2	0— 9

*Means dead out of bounds.

LUNCH.

One of the marked features of the day was the most excellent lunch which was served by Mr. Ned Fay from his palatial resort in the Grand Hotel. Mr. Fay has been for years an enthusiastic supporter of field and trap sports being one of the oldest and most active members of this club and to his generosity has been due from time to time the thanks of all the sportsmen of this Coast. The refreshments served for the delictation of the membership and all in attendance on this occasion were as follows:

MENU.

Turkey Roast Oyster Dressing.

Boiled Ham

Chicken Fricasee a la Toulouse.

Mixed Meat Sandwiches

Hard Boiled Eggs.

Lobster Cutlets, Sauce Cardinal.

Strawberry Marmalade.

Apple Fritters Glace, Au Rum.

Dressed Celery Saratoga Chips.

Fruit Cake.

Bananas Apples Oranges Grapes

Roquefort and Erie Cheese Olives

Toasted Crackers.

Apollinaris Beer.

After the luncheon hour, which it is needless to say was most heartily enjoyed by all present, the shooting continued without intermission until four o'clock when the entire party returned to the city well pleased with the day's sport.

The regular meetings of this club for the season will be on the third Sunday of each month during the season.

The Selby Medal Shoot.

The contest for this medal has been postponed for one week and will occur on Sunday, February 28th, at Bird's Point, instead of to-morrow as previously announced. The match will doubtless call together a large and representative body of the sportsmen of the State, and will prove of more than ordinary interest.

On the Western Plain.

We traveled quite a distance before falling in with any game. Plenty of deer and antelope were seen but at too great a distance to shoot and it was of no use to try get a shot at them as they could see us miles away and took good care to keep out of rifle range. I have recently read stories of running down antelope on horseback and killing them with swords and pistols, but am incredulous of their truth. The antelope is the fleetest footed annimal of the plain and the longest winded. They run, when alarmed, long distances, as far as the eye can reach, without slackening speed, the cloud of dust they beat up with their little hoofs reminds one forcibly of an express train on a straight, level track. On the plains of New Mexico and western Texas they roamed, a few years ago, in droves of thousands and I have often seen the attempt to ride to them made with unvarying result, the antelope would distance the horse while one would count fifty. I doubt that that the swiftest racer that ever stretched his legs over a course could run down an antelope if he had fifty yards the start, and it is impossible to get that near a flock of them on the open plain.

On rounding a point, or spur, of the low ridge we were skirting, we surprised three elk a bull and two cows, or a buck and two does—plainsmen generally used the former phrase, but I think the latter is correct for the reason that the elk belongs the genus cervis. The instant that they saw us and they saw us as soon as we saw them—they started off with their shambling trot which looks slow but is in reality very fast. They were not over forty yards distant and Horn and I fired at them from the saddle but both missed. The hunter —his name was Bigger—dismounted and taking deliberate aim brought down one of the does. She was a fine animal, in prime condition and of about four hundred pounds weight. We dressed the elk and then began to consider how to pack the meat to camp. "Oh, for old Breck!" I said. "Curses on him and on a mule's fidelity," said Horn, "I will never again pin my faith to a mule and especially old Breck." Having no pack animal we utilized the horses. Cutting the meat, as nearly as possible into three equal parts we lashed it, with the skin, on the saddles with lariats, and proceeded campward on foot, leading the horses. No wolves had been seen in the morning while going ont, but on the return several put in an appearance, attracted, probably, by the smell of fresh blood They kept at a respectful distance however, and out of many shots fired at them but three were secured though several more were wounded. This could be told by their actions, for when hit by a bullet they would snap and bite at the spot hit as if to fight whatever hurt them. Of the three secured the pelts were quickly peeled and added to the pack. We arrived in camp early in the day. The other party had not yet returned.

We were hungry, always hungry, and proceded to get dinner, or rather some of those who had remained in camp got dinner for us, for they were hungry too and lusted after broiled elk steak. A short time after dinner was eaten the other party came into camp leading their horses laden with game. Old Breck's pack was the heaviest of any, and the old fellow groaned in spirit and in flesh at the weight of it, and I heard Horn mutter, "Serves you right you old traitor." They had run across a small herd of huffalo and killed several, selecting the best. They also had two prong-horns, as they called the antelope, and several wolf skins, but no elk. They were hungry of course, and another dinner was prepared, but no buffalo for them, they would eat none of it. They prepared broiled elk steak and ate of it like famished wolves. That elk didn't last long. The first thing after satisfying the inner man preparation for jerking the meat were made. These were not elaborate; only stretching lariats between the trees to hang the strips of meat on, to be dried in the sun; or in making quadranglar platforms of the size of a bedstead by driving four stakes in the ground, running a rope from stake to stake and covering with sapplings running across at intervals of six inches. As soon as ready, the muscular or "lean" portions of the meat were stripped off the bones with the grain—"jerked off" the hunters called it—and either hung up or spread on the platforms. If the weather is favorable it takes but two or three days for the meat to cure sufficiently for packing and transportation. The work of jerking proceeded rapidly, and in a very short time the meat would have all been hung and spread had I not suggested that they try making charqui. They had never heard of charqui and wanted to know the method of making it, which I explaned. They were so favorably impressed with the idea that they concluded to try it. Having ample facilities, large camp-kettles and plenty of salt and fuel, the work proceeded rapidly and long before sunset the meat was all curing. The smell of it attracted the wolves and coyotes and the guard, that night had to be alert and vigilant to keep them from stealing it. After several ineffectual attempts to steal meat, and being shot at, and some of them killed or wounded, they gave up and retired, first giving us a midnight concert. Every day for a week a portion of the party hunted with unvarying good success, and every night the wolves and coyotes repeated their attempts to steal, but always with the same result and never failed to sing their midnight lullaby.

By the time that the hunting party returned on the second day the charqui was sufficiently cured to prove its quality. Everybody was delighted with it and all the meat, from that time, was made into charqui. At the end of a week enough meat was secured and there was no more hunting buffalo. In fact they were getting scarce, having ranged farther north. Everyday, however, little parties would go out shooting smaller game and nearly always brought in a deer or antelope which served to keep the pot boiling. Cooper and the Commodore attached themselves to Captain Clark's party.

Rainbow, Horn and I took long rides over the plain, which, to the north-west was a little rolling, in the hope of finding a big-horn, but none were seen, though hundreds of pairs of horns were scattered about over the plain showing that the big-horn does sometimes leave his mountain fastnesses and wanders far over the lower country. While on one of these excursions we came upon a stretch of plain where was no vegetation; the grass had been burnt off and had not grown again; it was black and desolate, with no signs of life, or, that life had ever existed there, except for half-charred bones that covered the ground in boundless profusion, and, in patches showed, by contrast, gleaming white. The ground was so thickly strewn with bones that a horse trod on bones with every step and the crunching of dry bones under his hoofs was like the crunching of honey-combed ice that has been thrown up from the surface of a wet soil by frost. What teeming life, what myriads of animals must once have grazed, where now was the "abomination of desolation," to furnish such a wealth of bones! And, probably, the whole extent of the vast plain was as thickly covered with old bones, under the grass roots, as was this black and forbidding desert.

One afternoon, on the return of a party that had been hunting antelope, one of the horses showed signs of distress, and Bigelow, who combined the trade of blacksmith with the profession of farrier, and who seemed to know all about horseflesh, at once pronounced the horse "alkalied," that is, suffering from alkaline poisoning. He immediately mixed a quart of flour with a bucket of tepid water, added a half ounce of cetric acid and gave it to the horse and in the morning the animal was, apparently, as well as ever.

On the plains there are many pools and springs and little streams that are strongly impregnated with alkali and very poisonous. Horses and cattle, when very thirsty, will drink of these poisonous waters, and, unless a powerful antidote is given, will die. The best and simpliest antidote is cetric acid; nautralizes the acid. Fat pork or bacon is also good and is nearly always at hand. The fat combines with the alkine water in the stomach and forms soap, which serves as a cathartic and is eliminated with the feces. A decoction of horse or sheep, or pusley, mixed with a quart of flour in a bucket of warm water,is a sure remedy if given before the muscus membrane of the alimentary canal is much excoriated by the poison. Nitre and sulphur, one-half ounce of nitre to one pound of sulphur, is a sure cure.

In the absence of all other remedies, just flour and water with a little sugar is a very good remedy and may effect a cure.

One day while the wagons were being over-hauled a large dutch oven was brought to light. I asked why it was not used in cooking, especially for baking bread and beans and roasting meats. The reply was that none of the party knew how to make bread, or, if they did, preferred slap-jacks to the bother of it. In boyhood's days I had been taught by my mother—something of the art culinary—among other things to make bread and roast meat, and also how to make as good cup coffee as the next one. I hankered for bread and determined to satisfy my own craving and at the same time give the boys a surprise.

I made several large loaves of bread, baking them in the Dutch oven and at the same time roasted a whole antelope, by hanging it on a halter chain before a hot bed of coals; seasoning it with salt and pepper,basting it with sweet bacor. fat, and whirling it as on a spit. When supper was announced all responded with alacity, even Dr. Thompson, for they had been watching proceedings with hungry expectancy and anticipating a feast, and the way that bread and that roast antelope disappeared was magical and amazing; like manna before the morning sun.

The bones of the antelope were cleaned so close that not enough meat was left on them for a decent supper for York, and not a vestige of bread was left. After all, making bread is a very simple thing and no elaborate adjuncts are required in the process. I have made most excellent bread with only a little flour, a pinch of salt and a small piece of canvass on which to knead the dough, rolling it into strings or ropes of a half inch in diameter, twisting it into spiral coils around a a stick, and holding it over a bed of glowing hot coals. The natural soda of the plains with a little citric acid, or even vinegar, will make very good bread, and an excellent yeast can be made in a short time by mixing a spoonful of flour with a pint of water in a bright tin can and hanging it in the sun, or setting on a rock on which the sun beats; it will leaven the whole lump.

I recall an incident in the history of bread-making that came under my notice in Mazatlan. I was boarding and lodging with a Mexican gentleman in reduced circumstances, a cavelliero of the old school, Don Fostino, but usually spent my evenings at Andy Reed's hotel, where Americans did most congregate, sometimes and oft not going home until the wee sma' hours. Between the hotel and my lodgings I had noticed on a building this legend, "Los Indios Tristes (the sad Indians) and in English, "French Bakery." While passing the place late at night or early in the morning, I always heard a peculiar grunting sound comparable to the grunt of a wild Indian, though more forcible, like the breath exhaled explosively and accompanied by vocal sound, also a dull sound of pounding as of striking putty with a hammer. My curiosity was excited, and I investigated and this is what I found. In a room of ten by fourteen feet, poorly ventilated, were eight or ten Castillins of Indian extraction, erstwhile yclept Greasers, kneading dough. They were naked, with the exception of shirt and breach-clout, and kneeling on a raised platform. In front of them, next to the wall, was a wide plank beveled at the inner edge. On the plank was a pile or string of dough, for it was strung out from end to end of the plank. The dough-mixers would raise themselves on their toes a few inches and come down on the dough with their hands and knees, each time emitting that "Waugh! Waugh!" that had attracted my attention, while the perspiration in great beads rolled down their brawny, snuff-colored thighs. I ate no more "French" bread while in Mazatlan, though that method of kneading was not so bad as the ancient wine-press. Familiarity breeds indifference as well as contempt.

In eating, drinking, sleeping and telling stories of hunting and adventure, the time passed until the day of separation arrived. The day previous to starting on our respective ways was devoted to a general overhauling. Wagons were loaded ready for the journey; the skins of all the animals slain were carefully packed for transportation; for, though they had said that skins of animals killed at that season were of little value, they were very anxious to secure them, and we turned over what few we had to them; the horses' hoofs were examined, and lost nails and loosened shoes replaced and fastened. Bigelow had a small blacksmith's kit, and he kindly offered to look after the feet of our horses. He also gave us a small hammer and a few horse-shoe nails, which we prized very highly, and would not have parted with for any amount of money. It is wonderful how stress of circumstances and change of conditions will enhance the value of the simplest and commonest articles. The hunters consented to convey the Doctor back to Omaha and turn him loose to shift for himself. Cooper gave the dog York to Bigelow, with the request that the Doctor be not allowed to meddle with him. Bigelow said: "If that drunken sot of a Doctor meddles with that dog I'll pell his worthless hide and scalp him."

From their surplus stores they loaded us down until we were better provided for a journey than when we left the Missouri. We offered them pay but it was indignantly refused.

They said that the service we had rendered, the pelty we had given them and the knowledge of making charqui they had acquired, more than compensated them for what they had given us. The calves had already begun to nibble grass and the cows were in fine condition. The intention was to take the calves by river steamer from Omaha to St. Louis, whence they would be distributed to points where sale would be found for them. It was calculated that the calves, by the time of reaching Omaha, would be able to live without the assistance of the cows, and only enough men would accompany them down the river to take care of them, while the rest, with the stock, would proceed to their homes in Iowa.

On the morning following, at an early hour, we start ed out and, so we parted, with mutual regrets and many hand-shakings, and wishes of health and prosperity for all, and a leave-taking bumper of old Bourbon. Old Breck bucked furiously at being forced to part from his inamorata, the bay mare, and it became necessary to lariat him in order to reduce him to submission; it was the first time he had been placed in durence and it nearly broke his heart. I think he cried, though he shed no tears. Who can say that animals do not grieve over separation from loved ones as well as man? I have seen an ox shed tears at the loss of his yoke-mate, and I have seen one cry over an undeserved castigation.

With a "God bless you" each party went its way, one eastward, the other westward. The doctor rode one of the extra horses and neither by word nor sign nor look acknowledged that he was conscious of any existence but his own. York's behavior was in marked contrast. He was tied in one of the wagons, and he howled his grief over his enforced separation from his friend Cooper, and, as we rode away, the last sound that reached us from our departing friends was a prolonged and mournful howl from York; he had lost the best friend that he ever knew. Cooper rode in silence and with bowed head until the last sound of the dog's mourning fainted and died on the air of the widening space between them, when, with a deep drawn sigh he straightened in his stirrups and sadly breathed, "Alas, poor York."

Of that party of hunters, the only one who has not crossed over the river, and "gone to the country from whose bourne no traveler returns" is C. E. Bigelow, now Dr. Bigelow, of San Francisco and of the Bigelow Truss Company. He is an old man now, bald and gray, though still robust. At the time of the calf hunt he was a veritable Hercules, with a head of ebon hair as abundant and strong as the hair of Sampson.

At last we were fairly off for the Rockies, and our spirits rose at the prospect. No misgivings had we, but, with the buoyancy and sanguine hope of young manhood looked forward with only bright anticipations. Hardships and disappointments and misfortunes and the unfaith of man had not taught us pessimism. B. T. C.

The winning and holding of the title of "Champion of Champions" at the trap is not all a bed of roses as Fulford and Brewer are now aware. Well there are some very peculiar looking circumstances in this world. On the face of the returns results are made to appear in certain lights, but again, a little stirring about, a shifting of the point of observation and a new phase of the subject is presented. Enough has been written of a nature to disgust any one with the plan of conduct obtaining in the notorious matches between Fulford and Brewer.

Mr. Mussey, of Chicago, comes out with a general kick and howl about this matter in connection with his desire to excuse, explain and smooth over the action or non-action of Chicago sportsmen relative to the much-talked of match of Fulford and Kleinman.

Certainly much allowance is to be made the Chicago men under the light of the explanation made by Mr. Mussey, but we do trust that this match may be made. It would be one of the most interesting contests which could now be formed.

It is announced that C. W. Budd of Des Moines, Iowa, and T. A. Marshall, of Keithsburg, Ills., will shoot a match at 100 live birds each man, for a purse of $1,000. It has grown somewhat monotonous to hear that some great event for a good sum of money is on the boards and find the matter to end with the announcement.

Captain A. H. Bogardus, the old veteran whose record as champion live bird shot of the world for nearly twenty years stood without a successful assault is out with a proposition to try conclusions with any man in the world at 100 live birds, thirty yards rise, E. D. Fulford preferred.

"An Undiscovered Country," is the subject of an interesting communication by Mrs. Annie A. Preston, appearing in Forest and Stream. In it she effectually answers the prudish woman who was shocked that the writer of the communication refered to should find pleasure in reading publications, given over to field sports. The field of nature; the birds, flowers, fishes, wild animals, mountains, valleys and plains with their wealth of interest and suggestion she justly affirms to be among the purest, most enobling subjects for study and recreation. Thousands of narrow minds turn up their noses at anything savoring of sport, but if they should analyze the objectionable odor they would find it to arise from the narrow confines of their own self-selected cells, where never a sportive breeze has been allowed to play and where the possibilities of pleasure lie rotting in the stagnant air of mental dwarfage, augmented by the poisonous breath of self-sufficiency.

Mr. D. M. Walters, of Galt, has a Gordon puppy with which he calculates to make some of the best entries hustle to win in the coming Derby. It would be refreshing to have a Gordon come in and win honors in such hot company.

The particular dog was reared in the wild and wooly west, and really is so depraved by nature, as to retrieve. One day recently Walters shot a double over one of this puppies' points. The dog marked the last bird and at the word dashed out after it. Returning with the bird in his mouth, he ran across the other bird and tried to bring in both at once but could not do so. He finally started in with the one bird but after leaving the other about ten feet he dropped the first and went back for the second, carrying it about ten feet near his master than the former he dropped it and went back for the other, thus doubling his course and bringing in both birds as near as possible at once. That dog is not too finely bred; his heart is not broken because he retrieves.

The indications now are that there will be a large Derby entry for '93. Many new and enthusiastic sportsmen are coming to the front with their declarations of intention to participate in the sport.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths, in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Howls.

How are you all? Thought I was dead, eh? Wrong again; I was never more alive than at the present moment. I have just bobbed up serenely to ask you how you like the late trials and—AND—how you like the pointers? Don't you remember I made the statement in this column last fall "For you to keep your eye on the short hairs, and mentioned Old Black Joe II. as one who would bear watching." Was I far wrong? Well, I guess not.

* * * *

The Eastern trials have gone against the "short hairs." Yes, just a little, and I don't mind telling you I consider the trial between Rip-Pap vs. Antonio, Antonio and Maid of Kent an injustice. Pointer fanciers as a rule do not raise much of a rumpus when beaten fairly or otherwise; prefer to leave that part to the Irish reds and Llewellins. Look how the "royal" family yelled last year and the year before. Do you hear much from the pointers in that line?

* * * *

"Avent," with his "plug" dog communication in a late issue of the American Field, has raised a hot old snail. I can't help it; I must just howl a little on this once more myself. "Plug" dogs indeed! Is that so? Give me a "plug," and if, as I understand, it means the following, a dog that retrieves, obeys, ranges fast and wide according to the ground at work on, and goes at a speed consistent with his nose, works well to the gun, possesses endurance, staunch, knows how to work his birds when found—this is what I, in my ignorance, call a "high-class field dog," not a high-class field trial winner. Note the difference: The "high-class field dog" does not win at the large Eastern trials, but the "high-class field trialers" do. See the difference? But just put this in your clay or meerschaum and smoke it. The day is not far off when the high-class field dogs will win. Comprende?

* * * *

You were disappointed in not hearing my melodious voice this year at Bakersfield? You will remember I promised to sing for you and failed to connect. The reason was this: I have sang the song of the pointer so much the past year my larynx needed filling, and the person to whom I sent it, wrote me saying it was so badly out of fix he could not repair it, and would have to make me a new one—which I have just received and this accounts for your disappointment—and I might add mine and also for my reappearance in this column —Sorry aint you—some one called me an "old sitting hen" the other day, said I could not sing or howl—could only snarl feebly and cackle like blazes—but I forgave him.

* * * *

Poor old "Dogwhip" has been playing combinations lately and it has resulted disastrously for him—they usually do—I am indeed sorry "Dogwhip" also that Spiritus Fermentis are denied you—but then remember last year at the N. Y. show and anticipate—sports afield has made a complete change all around lately. I have been expecting something or other to happen since the gay and festive blond editor got so reckless as to go to Kansas and fetch back that nice little brunette I was telling you about in the long-long-ago. Yes sir, Sports Afield has my congratulations in this respect especially—sensible boy—and in other respects he is "doing quite well."

* * * *

Oh dear! Oh dear! what shall I do? the Irish setterities have not had a scrap for so long, what does it all mean? Come gentlemen don't you see you are losing valuable time, some of you get to work there and pull wool and make the fur fly—really this is growing monotonous.

* * * *

What's that? Some one has just said we will make your wool fly, if you don't look a little out! Now don't do that, it will be unkind—besides I'll-I'll-run run away and, and, hide?

* * * *

I have traveled some of late, yes sir traveled! and passed through a section of country where they can't raise a dog. Not even a yellow one—no sir! can't even raise a disturbance!

* * * *

Good day gentleman: good day, and now when you have read all I have got to say on this occasion, don't swear too loud or long and I will come again—yes sir, come again.

* * * *

Mr. Watson, you are a brick, now some of your chaps either 'fish or cut bait." Come now show us something for the "faith that's in you." Mr. Watson's article shows cold, calm, deliberate, intent to endeavor to do just as he says. Why would this not be an oppertune time and place for the "Irish Reds" to go to the front at one bound? Don't wait for a month or two and then come out with a multitude of if's and's, etc., walk right up now—or you either, Mr. Royal family, and afterwards my word for it you will know you had a race.

It is really a pity that all the specialty clubs can not hold their meetings in New York city. New York city? Why that's what they are doing every time, would not do to meet any where else, might lose control you know. Centralization of power is a great thing especially in dogdom. Do you catch on?

* * * *

John Davidson will judge at Denver this year, and I am sure there will be a kick on him also. There are a certain class of people who show at Denver—those of the own one dog class—who will kick on any judge's decisions, I care not who he is orwhere he comes from, if their dogs are not placed, and that will not be, because they are poor types, and no honest judge or one who knows anything about a dog, could consider their dogs for a moment. Yet the club is doing good work in educating those "would be" up to standard, slow work, but then keep it up.

* * * *

The row and gossip over field methods is dying out somewhat. I am sorry to see this as I have endevored in my feeble way to cause a change for the better (to my mind). There is one thing sure and certain I can Howl on this way to my hearts content and propose to do so. If by training and handliug a dog he becomes a "Plug" "a la Avent" I say give me the "Plug" and don't you forget either. What on earth are bird dogs for any way? If we are going in for bird coursing, whats the use of breeding our setters and pointers so carefully? why not cross on the greyhound for speed at once, and start a racket of our own?

* * † *

Some of you chaps who have never seen a Barzoi, and fondly imagine your speedy greyhounds will be in it with them, will get badly left or I'm off. Now, I happen to know a little about these dogs myself; as to speed, I am not prepared to say, but as to courage and punishing power they are there, now mark this. Mr. Paul Hacke has thrown the gauntlet to all dogs as wolf-killers, he being the largest owner of the Barzoi in this country. A Mr. George McDougall has accepted on behalf of the Scotch deerhounds, and Western ranchmen and sportsmen will watch the outcome with interest. Mr. McDougall, in his acceptance, wants the match to occur this fall. Mr. Hacke, I think, will not agree to this for the reason, to my mind, it savors too much of the prize-ring method of making a match at a future date, and then prancing all over the country, exhibiting themselves on the prestige gained by reason of the match. The deerhounds would go into the Eastern bench show circuits with banners flying as the great wolf dogs that are matched to kill wolves against the Russian wolf-killers. No, sir, run your dogs now, don't wait until fall; sink or swim by the results. No cheap notoriety gets to the front.

* * * *

Mr. A. C. Waddell has a fine brace of shorthairs in his kennel, and I have from himself that some of you'ens may look out for him the coming year. Hammer's Bang and Hammer's Whirl, he says, are in it. ALOIN.

The Setters and Their Friends.

Anent the controversy which has been going on for some time between the adherents of the Campbell and Llewellyn setters, Honor Bright has the following in Turf, Field and Farm:

"They are English setters, and the straight bred dog of the so-called Llewellyn strain has achieved a reputation that Mr. Jones admits is peerless. Can Mr. Jones mention the name of a straight bred dog of the so-called Campbell strain that has approached the record of the first named? Mr. Jones' brighest stars in the Campbell firmament are Joe Jr., Daisy F. 'and her ilk.' Will he be kind enough to demonstrate to us whence they derived their undoubted excellence in the field? Does it not come from the English setter blood that he proves to us courses in their veins? Perhaps Mr. Jones will claim among other things that Elcho was the equal of Dan, Dick or Dora as field trial dogs.

If such were the case Joe Jr., in the stud would never have stood the rush that would have been made upon his services.

The 'Prince of the Llewellyns' would have been remembered only as a dog that had run against him. But, no! the positions are reversed, and, argue as he may against it, Mr. Jones will admit that Gladstone was king, and all did him reverence. All sought the service of the dog that had 'thrice suffered defeat,' while Joe Jr., was left severely alone.

The proof of the pudding is in 'chewing the string,' and it does strike me as odd that a man should keep writing up a strain of dogs that has only come into satisfactory prominence when mated with the blood of Llewellyn's dogs.

After his servere arraignment of the judges at the recent field trials, Mr. Jones asked what blood it was that brought Daisy Hunter into fame. Suppose he tells us what blood it was, if not the blood of the English setter.

In his latest effort Mr. Jones handles Dr. Maclin in a most unjust manner' and charges him among other things with hiding behind a brother breeder. May we inquire of Mr. Jones whether Dr. Maclin hid behind anyone when after rearing Gem, a daughter of Gladstone, he bred her to Gath, the most promising dog of his day.

Was he in hiding when he developed a litter of dogs that as a litter has never been equaled in the history of bird dogs.

Gath's Mark, Gath's Hope, Gath's Joy and Harold were all of this litter bred by Dr. Maclin, and are names familiar to all of us.

Will Mr. Jones consider the merit of these dogs, and then tell us whether he considers the Dr. was hiding when he threw down the gauntlet to the Memphis and Avent Kennels to run Mark against Roderigo.

It strikes us that the Doctor seemed well calculated to hold up his end of the line.

Long before the advent of Daisy F., Mr. Jones claims to have advocated this very line of breeding, and as he appears to be a very voluminous writer, suppose we sidetrack this controversy for awhile and persuade him to tell us about the dogs he has bred.

A narrative written by one who champions a cause, as he has the Cumpbell setter, must prove a very interesting one.

A writter with pronounced theories like Brother Jones, has most likely produced some cracking good dogs, and it will give many of us pleasure to read of his experiments in breeding."

A Grandly-Bred Dog.

The following pedigree presents a combination of the best known blood-lines for field dogs. Bob Gates Jr. is owned by Mr. George Crocker, the well-known capitalist of this city and thorough lover of field sports. This dog has been placed in the hands of Mr. D. M. Walters, of Galt, for the purpose of acquainting him with the field work as presented in this State and to otherwise have him conform to local customs. No reflection on Eastern methods.

Mr. Crocker has a young dog also recently received from the East which Mr. Walters is training for the field trials of 1893.

We are pleased, indeed, and congratulate all lovers of field sports because Mr. Crocker has thrown his influence and interest in this direction. The field trials of this coast are rapidly growing better and better.

High Class vs. Plug Dogs.

The probability or improbability of injury following the training or breaking of a good dog to retrieve has now become quite prominent, owing to the position taken by Mr. J. M. Avent, in his expressions regarding this subject in the early days of the present year. The claim made by Mr. Avent is one worthy of consideration, and that is that the breaking to retrieve, what he is pleased to term "high class dogs" is likely to injure them permanently for field work. First, let us inquire what is field work? That it should be considered anything different from working the dogs over the ground and upon the birds in such a manner as to secure the greatest possible number of points, is a matter which strikes us as being extremely peculiar and strange. The strangeness and peculiarity of which is shown in ought that would deviate from the above definition. Field trial competition fails of its central object, which should be to produce the finest type of field dogs, the essential qualities of which is the development and use of bird sense or scent which is primarily the object of all hunting dogs of this nature. To say that a dog ranges too far and wide and swift to use his nose properly, or in other words to run over the birds without discovering them, is a fault so grievous that he who would term such a dog a high class field dog, has certainly lost sight of the object for which field dogs are trained and used.

Mr. Avent, in an article upon this subject, refers to the Manitoba Field Trials, in the heat between Novelist, winner of the first in All Age Stake, and Sam, a dog he is pleased to term "an old slow Gordan." Novelist, he says, "showed to be four or at least three times as fast as Sam, in other words, he says she is a high class field trial bitch, while Sam is an old Gordan which none would have as a gift," adding "he never ranfast enough to get so hot that he could not smell. He was very obedient, the birds were very wild, and he being so slow, out pointed Novelist." To my mind it would seem that the qualities above attributed to the old slow Gordan are just the qualities which show superiority as a bird dog. Mr. Avent speaks of the singular action of Roderigo when ordered to retrieve, showing clearly that the breaking of that dog to retrieve had been of the most cruel and severe nature. No one questions the fact of his being a great dog. Mr. Avent's confession as to his failure in causing dogs to retrieve, and at the same time retaining their confidence is singular to say the least. Other less famous trainers succeed in accomplishing this fact every day, and that too with the very best dogs in the country. Evidently something must be radically wrong with Mr. Avent's method of training his dogs to retrieve, or he has become so prejudiced on the subject of retrieving that he does not give it the patience and consideration which it deserves in training his dogs. It would appear that his efforts have been to do away with retrieving in field trials. When the day arrives that retrieving is dropped from the education of field trial dogs, the less interest will be taken with field trials, in the minds of true sportsmen. Mr. Avent acknowledges this fact, for he says that the day is long since past when field trials were to develop plug shooting dogs. He claims that field trial dogs are not long used for that purpose thus negatively admitting the fact that the test of many of our field trials are made solely for the purpose of placing a breeders dog or dogs in a position where the most money can be made out of them for the impracticable purpose of running in field trials where no longer shooting or legitimate sports are essential elements in the education, training or knowledge of the dogs.

If the above remarks of Mr. Avent be true, then sportsmen should cease to take an interest in field trials. Let the breeders of dogs alone run their dogs ,and be interested in them, for every particle of sport is eliminated from them when they are no longer looked upon and intended as a means of developing shooting dogs.

"High-class dogs," according to Mr. Anent, are wide, swift rangers, so much so that one is led to the belief that they might run over birds and all around them, but being so intent on the graceful execution of dress parade movements as they dash about over the ground, that this little matter of ignoring birds should be readily overlooked, for they are "high-class," and may point or not. Any old slow plug which insists in fooling away his time pointing birds should be demerited, for he is supposedly a low-class dog. In addition to this fool error, he may be so "low class," so much of a "plug," that he will obey his master, which no "high class" dog will do. It is not possible to have him do so for fear you will break his spirits and lose his confidence!

Not only is "forced retrieving" bad, but, according to this authority, natural retrievers are bad. To quote his own words: "Rowdy Rod was a natural retriever, and it injured him badly."

More arrant nonsense was never written to disparage one of the best qualities of a good hunting dog. According to Avent, a "high class" dog runs too fast to point well, and to retrieve is a bad quality!

We had been simple enough to suppose that the best, the highest quality to be found in a dog was the faculty to locate and point birds—the more the better—and that after shooting them to have the dog bring them to hand. Nothing is more aggravating to a true sportsman than to be compelled to leave a crippled bird. In short, any dog which will not retrieve is well nigh valueless to a real sportsman. But we suppose from the context that Mr. Avent cares nothing about hunting dogs, and ignores the general rule that all heats in field trials shall be run as a good sportsman would do in ordinary hunting.

This matter has gone far enough. It is high time that the true sportsmen should wrest the management of the field trials from the impractical theorists who are seeking to use the same solely as an advertising medium for a certain type of dogs which have evolved other and inferior qualities over and above the essential one of bird sense and scent. Give us the very best hunting dog possible. Let every rule governing the field trials be made to conform to those conditions which go to enhance and magnify the pleasures of field sports with dog and gun.

Sales.

Dr. James W. Ward, San Francisco, purchased of Mr. E. P. Schell a St. Bernard dog puppy, Royal C., 23251; also Lucy W., 23,046.

One of the natural results of the difference between the P. K. C. and the A. K. C. is chronicled as follows by Forest and Stream:

When the Philadelphia Kennel Club resigned from the A. K. C., a new kennel club was organized in the city, to be called the Keystone Kennel Club, with the ostensible purpose of holding a dog show. It was to secure membership in the A. K. C. and then hold a show on the dates claimed by the Philadelphia Kennel Club. Before arrangements could be made, however, the Chesapeake Bay Dog Club claimed the dates, and nothing further was done. Now that the Chesapeak Bay Dog Club have abandoned their show, a meeting of the executive committee of the Keystone Club was called last Monday, with a view to authorize the officers to go on at once with their preparations for a show, and it was decided to hold a show on March 1st to 4th. We understand that the Philadelphia Tattersall's building will be the place where the show will be held, and as there is ample room to hold a very large show, a first-class gathering of dogs may be expected. The idea at present is to ask Mr. George Raper to be one of the judges. If the club intends applying to the A. K. C. for admission, they must do so on or before February 15th, as after that date their application cannot be passed upon till the May meeting. The new club is no way antagonistic to the older club, but simply wishes to encourage kennel interests by holding a show. Mr. James Watson, we believe, is one of the promoters of the club.

A well-known handler of dogs says he appreciates Mr. James Watson's grit and interest in field sports in making his offer to run his black pointers in a match, as proposed recently in these columns. He says that it would be more practical for Mr. Watson to enter the proposed number of dogs in the trials and let the result there shown determine the matter. He adds, be sure and say to Mr. Watson that we all want to see him personally at the trials.

Mr. Paul Hacke, the owner and fancier of the recently much advertised and discussed Borzois or Russian wolf hounds, some time since issued a general challenge for a wolf coursing contest, and the same has been accepted and posted money, $100 covered by Mr. George Macdougall, of Butte, Montana. Such a course would be most interesting.

Mr. Henry Huber has sold a pointer puppy out of Sally Brass II, by Duke of Vernon, to Mr. George Sperry, of Stockton.

The Country Club.

The Country Club met in annual session on the 11th inst., and proceeded to the election of officers for the following year. The following list of officers expresses the choice of the membership: President, Frederick R. Webster; Vice-President, Austin C. Tubbs; Secretary-Treasurer, J. M. Quay. Directors, Frederick R. Webster, Austin C. Tubbs, J. M. Adams, Clinton E. Worden.

The report of the Secretary of the club, Hon. J. M. Quay reveals a healthy and prosperous condition of every branch of work undertaken by that body. Over 20,000 trout have been planted in the waters of the preserve while Black Bass have been planted in great numbers in three or more lakes of the preserve. Plans for stocking a portion of the waters with land-locked salmon were outlined.

Mongolian pheasants, Arizona quail and Chinese quail have been added to the game interest of the preserve during the year. English pheasant and partridge eggs will be obtained and efforts be made to hatch them under domestic fowls during the coming season.

A dam will be constructed on Bear creek some time during the year for the purpose of forming a suitable body of water for tsout culture.

The amount of game taken on the preserve since July 1890 is as follows: Deer (previous to March 31, 1891), 5; quail, 2,825; snipe, 1,603; duck—canvass back 19, mallard 70, sprig 134, widgeon 155, teal 147, black jacks 16; black swan 1; geese, 3: rail, 66; wild pigeons 8; doves, 75; plover, 13; robins, 92; trout, 4,036.

In the same period 10 coyotes, 16 wild cats, 39 foxes, 21 'coons, 7 skunks, 240 hawks and 359 blue jays have been destroyed to preserve game.

Handicap of San Francisco Gun Club.

The following is the handicap of the Gun Club for season of 1892:

Thirty yards—H. Babcock, F. S. Butler, J. O. Cadman, E. W. Chapin, J. H. Jellett, R. B. Woodward, C. D. Laing, Jno. K. Orr, F. G. Sanborn, F. H. Swett, F. W. Tallant, F. L. Wooster.

Twenty-eight yards—H. Black, E. Donohoe, W. J. Golcher, A. Hamilton, J. M. Kilgariff, E. N. Moor, F. R. Webster, W. B. Bourn, R. A. Eddy, D. B. Gillette, Jr., J. Downey Harvey, Geo. Leviston, A. C. Tubbs, H. W. Woodward.

Twenty-six yards—Wm. Leviston, T. B. Riordan.

The shooting season on game is now drawing rapidly to a close, but a few more days remain in which sports afield may be enjoyed until the next game season opens. In this connection, however, it is safe to say that ten guns are fired at the traps to one in the field, and this is just the opening for this pleasurable class of work. In speaking of sports in general, covering the field of the gun, we do not hesitate to place California against any State in the Union for good shooters. In short, we do not hesitate to state that we believe fully, and without question, that we have in this State ten men who can defeat any team of a like number selected from the sportsmen of any other State in the Union. We have hitherto been slow to state the merits of the shooters of this coast, but there can be no question but that we have here a number of first-class pigeon shots, whose records speak for themselves, and a California record speaks louder by far than those made in New England, or elsewhere for that matter. The pigeons here presented from the traps are fully one-third swifter, stronger and more vigorous than those found in the East, Middle or so-called Western States.

The temperate climate of this State never presents a day when the birds may not, with comfort, seek out their natural food and fly with pleasure, thus strengthening and invigorating them to the highest degree.

In the so-called "records" of the champion shots of the east every possible condition has been in favor of the shooter and against the birds.

Poor birds; eighty yards boundary; gun held in any position, and any and all other attendant conditions to favor the shooters. Do not be alarmed at the reports of marvelous shooting eastward, their eyes are no clearer and their nerves no more steady than your own.

"Any yellow cur can be taught to retrieve" said a "high-doss" dog man in our hearing recently. Grant the truth of the statement but does that fact render the ability and knowledge of retrieving in a "high-class" dog objectionable? We think not. This cry of "retrievers for retrieving" has become noised about owing to the fact that its English doncher know? Qnite the propah thing doucher see? Cawn't well be otherwise doucher understand?

Bosh we are not English "doucher know" and we don't believe that the sportsmen of this country or any considerable portion of them ever propose to take along an entra dog in hunting just to retrieve.

Mr. J. B. Martin, the active and aggressive leader in the Foxterrier fancy of this Coast is still unremitting in his efforts to enlarge the interest in this direction. His efforts have been instrumental in placing most of the good blood of this breed in this State. He is a genial, courteous gentleman with whom to do busine s is a pleasure.

President E. P. Schell, of the California Kennel Club informs us that the outlook for the coming bench show was never so bright as now. More men are coming into the circle of the kennel world to-day than ever before and the prospects were never more encouraging for this club's interests than at present.

In "Ten Bore's" communication, appearing in last week's issue under the caption of "Small Bores and Nitros," in speaking of the unsatisfactory use of nitro powders in shells of American manufacture, says "missfires are too common to be pleasant," should read "hangfires are too common to be pleasant."

THE FARM.

The Song of the Farm.

The poppies that peep from the wheat at morn,
With pearls of the night dew glittering still,
The shadows that race o'er the waving corn
And the shy little runnel down under the hill,
The hoary old orchard whose trees are bent,
And the clover fields where the honeybees swarm
Cry, "Come to the cradle of calm content!
Come see Mother Nature at home on a farm!

"Here are billows of meadow whose waves are so sweet
They perfume the air, here are mountains of hay;
Here are little winds lost upon oceans of wheat
And butterflies shipwrecked in hollyhock spray;
Here is peace in the air and a smile in the sky,
And never a fear of deception or harm.
From the cares and the woes of a city life fly
To old Mother Nature, who lives on a farm!"

And so the old song from the cherry tree tops
And arbors where Bacchus might gather a treat,
From old fashioned sparrows that lived in a copse
And not in the dirt of an ill-smelling street.
From the bees and the kine and the sentinel cry
Of the cock, whose shrill clarion bodes no alarm,
Rings out to the city folk ever and aye:
"Come back to Dame Nature; she lives on a farm!"

Killing Animals for Home Use.

The annual butchering was one of the great events of the year on the farm within the memory of those who are yet called young. Its importance has been much lessened. One cause contributing to this is the greater use of fresh meat on the farm now-a-days. Forty years ago the annual butchering provided a supply of cured meat for a year; a bite of fresh meat was a rare treat. Now poultry is eaten freely, a sheep is killed occasionally, and the season of fresh beef and pork is lengthened by exchanges with neighbors. This partial change from cured to fresh meat is beneficial and commendable. The second cause of the decadence of the annual butchering—the increased purchase of cured meats—is not so certainly commendable. It is true that Swift and Armour can butcher more economically than we can on the farm, and that they get their profit by utilizing those parts that we cannot; but when we sell them our live animals and buy their cured meats, transportation both ways must be paid, and we probably pay more for the meat than if we killed and cured it ourselves. Further, when we do our own butchering we may know what we are eating. The big packing establishments are kept scrupulously clean, it is true; but many diseased animals are put on the market, and the buyer cannot detect their diseased condition, or is careless about it. I know that it is not so very uncommon for a herd of hogs to be rushed to Chicago when "cholera" has broken out among them. If we buy cured meat it may be from a diseased animal. If we kill our own meat, we may know that it is wholesome.

But to have wholesome meat we must do the butchering properly. The first point is to get the meat cooled as quickly as possible. This is important in the case of all meats, but most important in the case of mutton. If mutton is not quickly cooled, the meat has a peculiar, disagreeable, though slight, flavor. I was for years skeptical about this flavor, but I once got hold of some mutton that had not been properly butchered, and that soon destroyed my skepticism. As soon as the sheep's head is off it should be strung up by the hind legs, an opening into the belly made between the hind legs and cold water poured from a pitcher through the opening until the body is filled. Then get the pelt off and the internal organs out as soon as possible. Wash the carcass down thoroughly inside and out with cold water, and dash cold water against it. When killing hogs or beeves, it is not so necessary to have the carcasses cooled at once, but the quicker they are cooled the better. One should have sufficient help to handle the carcasses expeditiously, to get the outside of the carcass in condition and the internal organs removed within twenty to thirty minutes after the animal is killed, in the case of hogs; a little more time is allowable in the case of beeves. As soon as the internal organs are removed, insert a stick a foot long to hold the halves of the carcass apart, and wash the carcass thoroughly with cold water.

The meat will cool more quickly, and be less liable to taint or spoil if the animals have empty stomachs when they are killed. I do not feed animals the evening before they are to be killed. Full stomachs make the animals' temperature higher, and the fermentation of the mass in the stomach may taint the meat before the stomach can be removed; while if the animal has not been fed for eighteen hours before it is killed, its stomach and intestines can be removed more easily than if full.

There is only one proper way to kill a sheep—lay its neck across a block and cut off the head with one blow of a sharp axe. The best way to kill a hog or beef is with a rifle. We have not the skill of those men who, in the big packing houses, kill beeves or hogs all day with a blow of a hammer; and if we try "knocking the animal in the head," the chances are that we will cause cruel suffering, and bruise the front of the head so that the meat cannot be used. However, this last is not a very weighty consideration. Killing with the shotgun is objectionable, as the shot are scattered through the carcass, and not infrequently where one is lodged a clot is formed that leads to the spoiling of the meat for several inches from it. Most certainly the animals should not be chased about a lot in order to get a good shot or to reach the head with an axe. If the axe or sledge is used, have the beef tied and blindfolded, or the hog held by the hind leg. A good, sure shot one should be careful to get, but he can get it if the animal is in a small enclosure without chasing and worrying it. Chasing the animal makes it hot, and its meat may not cure so nicely. I give a beef some bran or salt, and this gives opportunity for a sure shot. The bran should be in a vessel raised two feet or more from the ground, else one is apt to shoot too low, or the bullet may be deflected from the skull.

One must be careful not to get the water in which the hogs are scalded too warm, else it will "set" the hair. Putting ashes into water helps very little, if any, and makes the carcasses so grimy that it does not pay. If one is a little careful about the temperature of the water, he will have no trouble in loosening the hair. Except about the head, etc., a corn-knife is better and speedier than a butcher-knife for scraping off the hair. One should to pull the hair out, not to shave it off. A hairy stubble takes from the appearance of the meat. It is a good plan to have some clean rocks heating in the fire under the kettle. Throwing one of them into the tank occasionally will keep the water at the proper temperature and saves the labor of removing it to the kettles. The tank should be kept covered whenever possible, the better to retain the heat and steam. If a hogshead is used, a piece of carpet may be hung over its mouth.

The carcasses should not be cut up until they have thoroughly cooled and stiffened, but they should not be allowed to freeze. As the pieces are cut out they should be spread out in a place where the temperature is just above the freezing point. Sprinkle salt over the flesh sides and rub it in about the ends of the bones. Care of Growing Pigs.

A pig is never too young to have a full feed. Keep him always fat and sell when the market is favorable. Never hold for a favorable market after he has reached 200 pounds weight.

If the hogs are confined to a small lot or to houses, it is highly important that they have roots or some other bulky food to take the place of the green food they would gather if they had the freedom of the fields.

It is dangerous to feed either sorghum seed or cotton seed to hogs. Hogs often contract blind staggers from feeding on these seed. While cotton seed is dangerous, a small quantity of the cotton seed oil cake is beneficial.

A young pig is easily stunted, and especially if the weather is cold. For this reason it is very important to provide a warm, dry shelter early in the season, and neglect to do this is in many cases the cause of failure to make a profit from fall pigs. Animal heat can be supplied by furnishing warm quarters, and in this way the cost of wintering will be materially reduced. To feed hogs through the winter without securing a good gain is to keep them at a loss, and while it is, of course, necessary to winter at as low cost as possible, it is not good economy to lessen the cost at the expense of growth.

In summer, oats, barley, peas, mill feed and bran, in connection with good pasturage make the best feed for growing pigs. In winter, corn should be added in order to secure animal heat, and this is one of the best grains that can be supplied for this purpose. Too much of it should not be given as it is a fattening grain instead of a growing one. It should not be an exclusive, but only a finishing food, both to fattening and wintering hogs.

Many inquiries are made as to feeding flaxseed to hogs. Flaxseed can be fed to great advantage to growing pigs. It is rich in mineral elements, phosphate of lime, magnesia and other minerals well calculated to build the frames of animals. It is also a great advantage in fattening shoats on corn to add oilmeal to their swill in order to keep them strong and healthy; and if the manure is rightly cared for, feeding oilmeal and flaxseed is a doubly profitable investment.

It has been noticed by pig-feeders that health and thrift are prolonged to a remarkable degree by allowing constant access to ashes, and if salt is mixed with them, the effect is still more marked, and the composition is partaken of with greater relish. All feeders who have tried it pronounce the benefits unmistakable and results most gratifying.

What is a Good Cow Worth?

"The cow that can make 500 pounds of butter in a year is worth fully $500 as an investment, for her calf, if well sired, is worth all it costs to keep the mother a year."

At first glance it might seem that this was not true, but when we come to inquire into the business we find that it is true that as a business investment a cow that will make 500 pounds of butter in a year is well worth $500. The butter at the low average price of 25 cents a pound would be worth $125, or at 30 cents it would be worth $150. Five hundred pounds is about the yield of four scrub cows, and we only have the one cow to feed, but that is no objection at all; in dairying we use cows to convert feed into milk. As there is just so much butter in a bushel of feed, if we can get out more profitably by feeding it to one cow instead of four, we make that much gain, because in the one case we have only one cow to supply with a life ration, while in the other we have three or four.

And there is one other point to which we wish to call attention. If we have a few extra good cows instead of a large lot of average ones, the risk of loss is less by the various diseases to which cows are subject. If we only have ten good cows, the losses would, in all probability, be less in proportion than if we had twenty or thirty average cows, for we could—and no doubt would—give the ten good cows more personal attention than the larger lot of the others, it holds good in all cases that we give better care to that which pays us best.

To go back—while we would not advise the purchase of cows for dairy work at $500 a head (though a 500-pound cow is worth it), yet we would advise the purchase of extra good cows at an extra price rather than to buy average cows at an average price. Each one must be governed by his own circumstances in regard to experience in handling cows, making and marketing butter, and all that pertains to first-class dairying as to what price he shall pay for cows, but he must understand one thing plainly, that a cow must be up to a certain standard in order to pay any profit. When she goes beyond that standard she rapidly increases in value until finally we arrive at the cow that will make 500 pounds of butter in a year and be worth as an investment $500.—Thrifty Farmer.

Rations for Milk.

Experiments to determine the value of various rations for milk production have been in progress at the Iowa Experiment Station, the results of which have been recorded in Bulletin 14. This experiment extended over a period of eighteen months, the cow being weighed and the milk tested at intervals while the different rations were being fed. This experiment indicates that corn meal fed with corn fodder, or corn ensilage, results in the more rapid decrease of milk, and its fat and solids, than the advance in the period of lactation justifies. That corn meal fed with sorghum ensilage results in very rapid decrease in milk fat and solids, and that the combination is not profitable. That corn meal fed with roots and clover hay is palatable and gives good results. That the substitution of bran and oil-meal for half the amount of corn meal resulted in a marked increase in both quantity and quality of milk, increase in quality being even more marked than increase in quantity. That good pasture can be substituted for part of grain ration. That farmers who feed corn exclusively may have better yields, but sustained, by also using clover hay, oil meal and bran, or other albuminous feeds.

A Good Conditioner.

Take six bushels cob charcoal, or three bushels common charcoal, eight pounds salt, two quarts air-slacked lime and one bushel wood-ashes. Break the coal into quite small pieces and thoroughly mix the other ingredients with it. Then take twenty ounces of copperas, dissolve it in hot water, and with an ordinary watering pot sprinkle it over the whole mass, again mixing thoroughly. Put the mixture, or so much of it as you can, in a box—an ordinary dry goods case will do excellently—supplied with a feeding trough at the bottom, or in any similar way that ingenuity may suggest. The box must be covered, set on supports a few inches from the ground and securely fastened by stakes driven in the ground.

This preparation is kept where the hogs can get it at will, and is one of the best regulators of digestion and promoters of health and thrift that we have ever found. In many years of extensive hog-raising we have never had a case of hog cholera, and rarely ever any other disease, and that fortunate result is, in our opinion, largely due to this "condition powder," and the means it affords the hogs for getting certain mineral substances that in their wild state they find in the earth, and that are essential to their health and well-doing. This paper should be preserved, not only for this formula, but for the many other good things in it.

MATING SOWS.—The period of gestation of the sow is a trifle more than sixteen weeks, usually about 115 days. They should be mated as early in December as possible. This will bring pigs the last of March or early in April. A record should be kept of each sow so that her time for farrowing may be known and an especially warm shelter provided for her then. A March pig is worth much more if well cared for early than is one a month or six weeks younger. The first will acquire strength of digestion required for a corn diet in fall. To the younger pig corn may be too difficult of digestion, stunting rather than fallowing him.

Azoturia.

The subject I have chosen for this week's Western Farmer is of vast importance to every one who owns or drives a horse It is a disease that has given rise to quite a diversity of opinion among veterinarians as to its cause. In a practice of more than twenty years I have never met with anyone, except the well-informed veterinarian, that knew anything whatever as to its correct treatment. Nine out of ten would do just what they ought not to do—try to keep the animal in motion when perfect quietude is of the utmost importance.

Azoturia, unlike a great many diseases which are due to exposure, hard driving, unsound or insufficient food, usually occurs in fat, well-kept highly-kept horses. Numerous writers have tried to point out the true pathology of the disease; but we are still in the dark as to its cause. It has been termed by some albuminaria, others hysteria; by the Germans, "swaz herwindi." To-day it is called azoturia. Professors Vouatt, Dadd, Jennings, Stewart or any of the old veterinarians do not mention it in any of their works. They, no doubt, regarded it as either appoplexy or some form of spinal or kidney disease. We were taught at the college that it is caused by a hypernitrogeneous condition of the blood in the system in general from eating too highly of food rich in nitrogen.

As the true pathology seems to be in doubt, we must content ourselves with the symptoms and the treatment which has been the most satisfactory. Azoturia is more prevalent in the winter, spring and fall. I have met with quite a number of cases in winter when the ground was covered with ice to such an extent as to render traveling or turning horses out for exercise dangerous. When the ice began to thaw and the horse taken out of the stable for work or exercise he seems in perfect health. "Felt so good I could scarcely hold him" is often the expression of the driver. He goes well up to the bit, when often without any premonitory symptoms he falls, unable to rise with or without assistance.

Often the first signs you will observe after leaving the stable in such high spirits, he will at once begin to fag, breaks out in a high state of perspiration, trembles all over, pants, blows and gets so stiff and lame as to be unable to be unable to move without falling. Note now the muscles over the quarters and loins; they appears wollen and as hard as a board. Occasionally, but rarely, it effects the forward extremities. Most of the muscles over the arm will then become swollen. The color of the urine is characteristic, it being dark red, tinged with blood or black as coffee. The latter color denotes an aggravated state of the disease.

The conditions liable to be confounded with azoturia are apoplexy, simple paralysis, due to nervous lesions, spinal and cerebro spinal menigitis, or some disease of the kidneys. From apoplexy it may be distinguished by the retention of sensory functions and the absence of oral breathing and the character of urine. From simple paralysis by the fact that in azoturia neither sensation nor motion are totally in abeyance, and again by the character of the urine. From cerebro spinal meningitis it may be differentiated by the difference in temperature—in cerebro spinal meningitis temperature is normal or below normal, in azoturia always elevated; in cerebro spinal meningitis there is usually difficulty in deglutition. The swellings of the muscles are also absent.

Remember in azoturia the horse always leaves the stable in high spirits, and will go from one or two blocks to perhaps a half mile or mile before you notice anything wrong. It never affects the horse until some degree of exercise is taken. The horse has always (in cases I have met) rested from one to several days and been closed up in his stall, eating the same amount of food as when at work or exercise.

When your horse shows the above-mentioned symptoms, your first duty is to stop then and there and clothe your horse up warm. Do not try to get him home or to some near neighbors, for just so sure as you keep on moving him he will fall, unable to rise, and you considerably lessen his chances for a recovery. Your next step should be to obtain a veterinary surgeon, for complications may arise which would be impossible for anyone to give a correct line of treatment without an examination of the case. I have had several recoveries after being down five or six days, but such recoveries are rare.

Let me strongly impress upon you that it is not a kidney affection. The kidneys are doing their work; are working up to the very limits of their power. Do not aggravate them by the use of diuretics, especially those of a resinous character.—R. B. BOOKER, V. S., in Western Farmer.

EQUINE STUDIES.

Pacers Standard—"Tangential Breeding"—Enlarge the Circle.

Pacers Standard.—I was tempted to write "Tempest in a Tea-Pot" as the side-head for this essay, but came to the conclusion that there was little question that some of the writers on this turbulent topic imagine that it was a huge lake, an inland sea or maybe a veritable ocean which they were stirring into big billows. They may possibly be right in their view and I a long way out of the way in mine, and therefore will compromise by the caption adopted. In comparison with other mooted questions I regard the admission of 2:25 pacers to the Trotting Register and with standard rank granted them on that condition, provided the applicant is a mare or gelding, and with further qualifications if a stallion, as of little moment. The idea which originally prevailed in the minds of a number of objectors was that it made standard trotters out of horses that had no pretensions to trotting rank either by inheritance or performance. As I understand it the revised standard is something analagous to the conditions which govern in the thoroughbred Stud Book, or to apply the proper title, the Stud Book, in admitting Arabs, Turks and Barbs to its pages. In the first volume of the English Stud Book they are given a part by themselves, although, of course, they figure in the pedigrees of nearly all that are included in the book. In the fourth volume of the American Stud Book are the two horses presented to General Grant by the Sultan of Turkey, and some others and the Keene Richards importations of Arabs in previous volumes. The get of Leopard or Linden Tree from a thoroughbred mare and the produce of Esna or Saieda by a thoroughbred horse, however obscure, would be as much entitled to a place as the foal I saw by the side of Miss Woodford which had the grand Salvator for a sire. Now the Arab cannot race in the sense the word is used now, and the sons and daughters of Arabs, although the other side of the house may be of winning strains, cannot race with any success against those which have kindred crosses further back, and consequently the breeders of racehorses and the purchasers of racehorses will not breed or buy them. The late A. Keene Richards gave the Arabs a fair trial. They were selected with care by expert judges, and price was not questioned when the animal was satisfactory. I cannot recall where the first progeny gained even the shadow of distinction, and without taking the trouble necessary to state authoritatively by a search through the stud books and racing calenders, am under the impression that Transylvania by the imported Arab, Massoud, her dam Peytona, by Glencoe, was the most successful as a broodmare. She was foaled in 1855 and had her first foal in 1860, and from that until 1879, when she "slipped" twins by her son, Limestone,she never missed. Nineteen living foals by such sires as imp. Knight of St. George, Lexington, imp. Mickey Free, War Dance and Melbourne Jr., and in 1872 and 1873 foals by Mambrino Patchen. Again trusting to memory I think that Limestone was her only representative which would be accorded a place as a racehorse. Objectionable as a near cross of Arab would now be held, what injury has come from admission into the Stud Book? No demand has been made for excluding them, and if such had been made no attention would have been paid to it by the compiler. The admission did not lower the standing of others, thoroughbred did not lose its significance. In admitting Leopard, Linden Tree et al. not a word is written of their blood lines, not a sentence descriptive of performance. This is a stud book, recognized by every breeder of thoroughbreds and by the courts, notwithstanding the incorporation of which is rated inferior, but the good sense of breeder and buyer leads them to discriminate—there are thoroughbreds and thoroughbreds.

Somewhat analogous is the term I used, and still there is a small proportion of analogy when merit is compared. A few breeders of fast trotters stand on the same ground,when pacers are mentioned, as the breeders of racehorses occupy anent the Arab. A large majority of trotting-horse breeders regard the blood in a measure desirable, quite a number who rate it very good; a few who claim that it has no superior, while the remainder extol it as the ne plus ultra, an indispensable element in establishing a very high rate of trotting speed. The objections to admission to the standard under the present rule can be classed with the first division. If of as little account as the Arab, no one would advocate admission. Those who would exclude them from sentimental feelings, and those who do not care whether they are admitted or not, may be rated among the second class. The third would favor admission; the fourth advocate the cause of the pacer with enthusiasm, and the last argue that the pacer should "rank" all the others. There are reasonable grounds to justify any of these positions, excepting the first and last. The only argument having weight enough to call it an argument, which the first could advance, would be that from a fast pacing sire or dam the progeny would be more apt to pace than to trot, and clinch that by saying, "I despise a pacer." An answer to that is that all the great sires of trotters, with the exception of Electioneer, have got quite a proportion of fast pacers, while Blue Bull, a pacer himself, stands well up with 55 trotters and 8 pacers to his credit, the Year Book for 1890 being the authority. When the Year Book for 1891 is received, I will be enabled to make a better comparison, though it will not be out of place to state that among all the pacing and pacing-bred mares which had foals by Electioneer not one of them paced, the dam of his single pacer being by Thorndale, he a son of Edwin Forrest, her dam by Alexander's Abdallah. The course of tutorship at Palo Alto may have more influence in deciding the gait than inheritance. With the second class it is more of a matter of sentiment, and accordingly stand neutral while the war is going on.

The third division will be the corps I will join, and, therefore, give individual reasons for taking that position. It would evidently be beyond the bounds of a short essay to present even a small portion of the examples which the past has presented of the advantages of pacing strains in breeding fast trotters and the close analogy between the two gaits.

Restricting the field to California, and there are abundant proofs of the value of pacing blood, and also of its relationship to trotting, as shown by readiness to exchange the lateral motion for a diagonal movement, and vice versa. The St. Clairs, Signals, Chieftain (Hiatoga) and others, especially the St. Clairs, have taken a good place in the trotting annals. There is little necessity for going to the records to substantinate that claim, and as I consider it of more importance to show the close relationship between trotting and pacing, when admission to standard rank is the issue, will present a few illustrations. Chieftain got Defiance, who paced in 2:17¾ and trotted in 2:24. Director got Direct, pacing 2:06, trotting 2:18¼. Steinway got Cricket, pacer, 2:10, Cæsar, pacer, 2:16½, and Charles Derby, trotter, 2:20. Sidney, however, presents such an array of facts to support the position that it will be superfluous to offer further testimony. From the same mare he got Adonis, pacer, 2:11½, Cupid, trotter, 2:19, both race records. From the same mare he gets Faustino, trotter, 2:14¾, at three years of age, Fausta, pacer, 2:22¾, when a yearling. He shows the champion yearling trotter, Frou-Frou, 2:25¼, and from the breeding of their dams who would have thought or dreamed that that should be the result? Frou-Frou, with a lot of Flaxtail blood, the dam of Fausta by Crown Point, a square trotter and "trotting-bred," and the next dam by A. W. Richmond. And now there is another puzzle. I brought Richmond to California, knew him from the time he suckled his dam, and am also familiar with many of his near relations on both sides, and never knew one to pace at either a slow or fast gait. All of his known blood was thoroughbred with the exception of the sire of his second dam, her breeder calling it Arabian, as was the custom in some parts of the country to designate a breed of peculiarly marked horses, while further south Opelousas was the name. Richmond was a square trotter when free from lameness, and his sister, Nourmahal, had as perfect trotting action as I have ever observed. Richmond was bred to a mare three-quarters thoroughbred, and then came Arrow, pacer, 2:13¼, and Elwood, pacer, 2:17¾. From Gretchen Richmond got Romero, trotter, 2:19½, and Gretchen's great graadson is Rupee, pacer, 2:14¾, by Guy Wilkes. The Chieftain mare, Daisy, was bred to Nutwood, the produce Mt. Vernon, trotter, 2:18; bred to a son of Nutwood, Hawthorne, and then came a two-year-old, Chief Thorne, which paced in 2:20. To these could be added many illustrations, but these I trust will be sufficient, and pondering over them, and cognate examples, come to the conclusion that pacing and trotting are so nearly allied that a slight variation in the conditions when the foal is in embryo, or even prior to that time, one of the spermatozoa when nourished by the ovum the basis to form the pacer, the next minute particle under the same influence takes the nearly allied type. Whether the influence rests with the male or female is difficult to determine, but I am inclined to the belief that in some cases the sire preponderates, in others the dam,

There may have been such a preponderance of the trotting spermatozoa in the case of Electioneer, that whatever the envelope might be it could not be overcome while in Sidney they are equally divided: in Tom Hal, Tempest and others, the trotting germ is not found. The gift to trot and pace fast, as exemplified by Direct under this view, might come from the male germ, and the ovum, exerting almost the same influence that there was nearly an equal balance.

Rather too fanciful to be of any practical benefit are theories which are based on suppositions, and I am free to confess that my knowledge of the mysteries of reproduction is far too slight to build even a theory upon. Very fortunate, however, that Nature has hidden her inner workings behind a screen which will never be penetrated, but so far as this question is concerned it is sufficient to know that pacing and trotting movements are so intimately connected that either may predominate, and that there is not a single family of trotters which can be depended upon to reproduce that action with absolute certainty. It is also admitted that education is a potent factor, and the time may not be far away when the science of teaching will be so far advanced that the change from pacing to trotting or from trotting to pacing will be readily accomplished. Direct could be forced to trot, heavy shoes, weights, &c., being the means employed. The incumbrance to natural action and the evils following disgusted the pupil, and when that was removed back he went to the manner of progression that was natural. Had he been educated at Palo Alto, his first lessons on a small circle, with the "footing" so deep that pacing was out of the question, the bias might have been overcome. But few will deny that a trotting record of 2:12 would have failed to give the distinction he has won by taking the first place in the pacing world.

What great injury comes from the admission of 2:25 pacers to the standard? The standard is debased, cries one; there is no standard, is the reply of the other. When a strain is admitted to the Stud Book which is universally admitted to be inferior it does not depreciate the blood of those who are far removed from the objectionable class, why should it follow that a good mixture should prove so detrimental? For myself I should greatly prefer a mare to breed fast trotters from that had paced in 2:25—especially if that record had been made in a "hotly-contested race," from one of equally good form that could not trot if even she had seven or seventeen crosses of standard blood. Individual merit is my choice, and all the glamourie of royal ancestry does not weaken it. No one who has greater respect for birth and breeding in man or horse, provided man or animal sustains the position birth should give, but when there is palpable degeneration, throw it out and use another strain.

But in following analogies, which are found in the ranks of both division of fast light harness horses, one must not lose sight of another resemblance still closer, if possible, than is shown by the above mentioned characteristics. If in the prodigious numbers of spermatozoa, one spermtazoid will form the nucleus of the pacer, and the adjacent germ the foundation of the trotter, or, in compound instances, when both proclivities are inherited, and that so nearly balanced that the bias in either direction can be easily overcome. The laws, rules which govern trotters and pacers, are identical. Every thing alike. Rearing, training, management in races, artifical appliances to correct the action, every strap in the harness, every point of the vehicle absolutely the same. Uses the same. While a large proportion of "road-drivers" favor the trotter' fashion has a good deal to do in establishing the preference. "Before the war," in many of the Southern cities, New Orleans especially, pacers were all the rage, and one of the most successful livery stable proprietors in the last named city told me that the fast pacers in his stable were more in demand by those who hired horses than in his fast trotters, and that they were readier of sale at equal prices. That was in 1859, not long after the days when Pocahontas, Hero, Silvertail, Dolly Spanker and others were delighting racegoers with their flights of speed and keenly-contested races. There is a good deal of prejudice and not a little sentiment in denouncing pacers as unfit for the road, and it strikes me that there is "a right smart" share of these feelings which prompt exclusion from the standard, or rather which lead advocates in the direction of exclusion. While an "overwhelming majority," they term it in politics, may be in favor of trotters for road-horses, when actual racing is the measuring-rod there is not nearly so many objectors. Marvin might look out of place behind a pacer. Goldsmith drives Hazel Wilkes, Una Wilkes, Rupee and Allanah with the same degree of fervor, and Hickok brings his whole energy to bear whether it is one of his fast trotters he urges to victory or the speedy and game Adonis he cheers to the front. It may have been fancy, but I thought there was a deeper glow on the cheek, a brighter sparkle in the eye of George Starr when Direct's" name was mentioned in offering him congratulations on his return from the campaign of 1891, and notwithstanding that Vic H. and Little Albert had done wondrously well, the pacer was his pride, and it is the longest kind of odds that Mr. Salisbury shared in that feeling. The bulk of the spectators which throng the tracks, when big events are to come off, are more interested in exciting battles,and rapid and close finishes than the gait which accompanies the strife, and it is fairly safe to assert that Direct and Hal Pointer would bring nearly as many people together as the champions of the trotting division.

So far as I have seen published, the arguments advanced adverse to the admission of 2:25 pacers into the standard is, that the standard would be lowered, but on what ground that opinion is founded has not been clearly demonstrated. It cannot be on that of numbers, as there will still be such an overwhelming majority of diagonalities that the lateralists will be in a "hopeless minority," hundreds against thousands when the computation is made. The argument, if such it can be called, which ascribes a lowering of prices at auction sales to the admission of pacers into the standard, does not require much consideration to warrant dismissing it without reply. Just as reasonable to say that Arion would not have brought $125,000, his brother $25,000 at auction, nor $25,000 paid for the brother to St. Bel and the $75,000 refused for Advertiser if pacers had been kept out of the fold.

Should the admission of pacers prove so disastrous to the trotting interests, and the denunciations of that course be justified by future results, then the business of breeding and raising trotters stands on a precarious foundation, liable to be overturned by a tremor.

When Mr. Wallace separated the two families, heretofore united in the Year Book, I thought well of the change. Since this agitation I cordially agree with the editor of the Kentucky Stock Farm that it is far more convenient to follow the old plan. When comparisons have to be made there is the additional trouble of going from one department of the book to the other, and if there were two Registers and two Year Books that would be increased, and at an increased expenditure for two books in place of one. The convenience for reference which the former plan affords will be granted by everyone who has to "go to the books" for information. In Vol. V., Y. B. 1889, page 391, Nutwood is found, and his "list" at the close of that there are twenty-seven trotters, four pacers. On the next page Onward twenty-one trotters, three pacers. Page 335 has Blue Bull fifty-four trotters five pacers, and owing to the names being ranged alphabetically, there is little delay or hindrance in the search. In Vol. VI., 1890, Y. B., page 407, Blue Bull stands fifty-five trotters, nothing to suggest that he ever got a pacer on the page; Page 470 Nutwood is shown with forty-four trotters, and on page 471 and 472 Onward with twenty-eight trotters. In both volumes the caption "The Great Table." Following that division are "Table of Sires of Dams," "Table of Great Broodmares," "Table of Champion Trotters," "Table of Fastest Records," "Fastest Records at Different Decades Since 1800," "Alphabetical List of 2:30 Pacers to Close of 1890," and then "Table of 2:30 Pacers Under Their Sires (corresponding with Great Table)," page 571, Blue Bull appears with eight pacers; page 578 Nutwood seven pacers, and on the same page Onward four pacers. This is sufficient to prove that the search for data to make comparisons is simplified when the old system prevails.

I have no hesitation to assert that if anyone, no matter what his impressions may have heretofore been, will give close study to the breeding of light harness horses, the history of light harness sport, he will come to the conclusion that the admission of 2:25 pacers to standard rank was wisely ordered, and though it may be very difficult to surrender positions which have been strengthened and sustained by previous arguments, oral and written, candor will compel acquiescence in the decree.

"Tangential Breeding."—A point within a circle, the point representing a person who has duties which cannot be given proper attention if he wanders beyond the bounds which are marked by the circumference of the circle. Within is safety, without, peril. Lately there has been a disposition to compare the breeding of trotters to a point within a circle, the point the station from which the observer takes his view, the circle within the bounds of his own peculiar vision. The mark was outside the curved line which he had drawn, and for several years was placed beyond the boundary of his little world. After it was established, and 2:08¾ blazoned upon it, Anno Domini 1885, he could not see it; the tangent, according to his ideas, should have gone wide of the mark, projected into space, lost in the darkness of the unknown. Round and round the circle the trotters went, spreading the circle, it is true, coming nearer and nearer the mark, but unable to reach it or disturb the figures which the tangent had established. Six years in heroic efforts by those who had stuck to the well-trodden path, and as one fell another was ready to break a spear upon the shield which bore the emblem of championship.

Then came another tangential creation and 2:08¼ was the record; another, still worse than "flying off at a tangent," as in the estimation of the critic in place of a straight line it was a reverse curve, and he should have gone wide of all the marks, but in lieu of that the 1885 prize was the reward.

One, two, three, is the placing on the tangential board, and though those who have stuck to the circle are close up, give honor where honor has so gallantly been won.

PACIFIC COAST BLOOD HORSE ASSOCIATION.

The New Set of Rules They Adopted at Last Tuesday Night's Meeting—Regulations That We Have Been Fighting for Adopted at Last—Popular Movements.

The Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association was called to order by President D. M. Burns last Tuesday night at the rooms of the organization, 313 Bush Street, for the purpose of hearing the report of the Committee on Rules, of which Joseph Cairn Simpson was chairman and R. B. Milroy, Henry Schwartz, H. I. Thornton and Thomas H. Williams members.

The meeting was well attended, and the members of the association entered into the business of adopting or killing the rules placed before them with spirit and no little enthusiasm. However, the committee's work was quite satisfactory, and very few changes were made in the rules it set forth. Among those present we might mention Col. D. M. Burns, Joseph Cairn Simpson, Robert Milroy, Matt Storn, James P. Kerr, Will Ashe. W. H. Brown, Henry Schwartz, Henry Walsh, W. H. Overton, Adolph B. Spreckles, Charles Chase, Ira Ramsdell, little Joe McCarty and several representatives of the press.

The first radical change was a clause in No. 50, Rules of Racing, which now reads:

"Except in handicaps, and in races where the weights are fixed absolutely in the conditions, fillies two years old shall be allowed three pounds, and mares three years old and upward shall be allowed five pounds before the 1st of September and three pounds afterward."

A paragraph in No. 51 says:

"When a jockey has weighed in and the number of the horse and the jockey's name has been posted, said jockey must then ride unless excused by the judges."

Third on the list of new rules was the following important one, No. 57, which is sure to be popular with race-goers:

"When the order to mount is given, the starter and clerk of the course shall note the time, and when thirty minutes have elapsed without a start, the horses shall be ridden or led up, as the starter may direct, on a walk, and when the line marked by the starter is reached he shall drop his flag, and any horse left at the post shall be considered as having started."

Under Rule 74 is the following, which should have been passed years ago, as it prevents the combining of jockeys to run their horses merely to interfere or help pocket horses that are trying to win:

"Every heat must be contested by every horse in the race, and in no case will laying up a heat be countenanced.

"This shall not be construed to be an order that the jockey must ride in an attempt to win the heat when his horse is hopelessly beaten, or when so far behind at the start or at any other period of the race that there is no chance to win, but the intention of this is to do away with the pernicious practice of a premeditated intention to lose the heat and take no part in the contest.

"The judge shall decide whether this mandate has been complied with or not, and, in case the parties are found guilty, punish by fine, suspension or expulsion the parties implicated."

All the above rules were passed without a dissenting voice.

Matt Storn called attention to the non-enforcement in the past of the rule protecting owners from parties who seek to get their employes away from them by offering larger wages than such workers were previously receiving. Rules 85, 86 and 87 cover almost every dispute that is likely to arise between employer and employe. Mr. Storn was told by the President that these rules would be enforced in future.

The following part of Rule 88 was passed after some little discussion by Matt Storn, W. H. Brown and Joseph Cairn Simpson. Mr. Storn stated that it was high time that something was done in the line of protecting owners who did pay their debts to the Association, for he had a great deal of money owing him in forfeits, covering a period of fifteen years.

"Any person found guilty and ruled off the track must remain outside the gates or enclosure, and will not be permitted to share in any privileges as a spectator or otherwise.

"Forfeits—Money must accompany nominations; no entry received otherwise, and associations agree to pay in full."

The following, also part of Rule 88 created considerable discussson:

"Every person who shall either personally or by or through another make a charge of fraud or dishonest practice against any judge, timekeeper, horse-owner, manager of a stable, driver, jockey, pool-seller, book-maker, or any other person engaged in any manner in conducting or in any form in assisting in conducting a meeting or race of any association governed by our rules, or against any person engaged in conducting or in any form in assisting in conducting any of the privileges of said meeting or race, shall be, and he is hereby required to make the same to, and demand investigation thereof by the judges of such race or meeting or by the Board of Directors or other governing body of such association.

"If he fail so to do, or if upon such investigation he fail to establish the charge so made, he may, upon complaint therefor, in the discretion of the Board of Directors, be either fined or expelled."

The conclusion of this last paragraph was amended. The original read: "If he fail to do so, or upon such investigation he fail to establish the charge so made, he shall, upon the complaint therefor, be ruled off the track of the Association."

In regard to this rule, Henry Schwartz cited a case that came under his observation. It was that of a newspaper man who had repeatedly made charges against judges, owners and jockeys, and had, when finally called upon to prove his charges, been unable to do so in any case. He thought ruling-off almost too good for such a person.

W. H. Brown, President Burns and Joseph C. Simpson spoke on the rule under discussion, and as it was considered to be a little severe, it was amended as stated above.

Under the heading, "Regulations of the Course," Rule 4, came the most important change from the old system (to our minds) made in the whole set of rules.

"The presiding judge shall decide which horse wins, and, with the aid of his assistants, place as many of the others as they may think proper, except when in running the best of heats it is necessary to place all the horses. The presiding judge may solicit the opinion of his associates, but should both of them disagree with him his judgment shall prevail, the intention of this section being to give the presiding judge full power and hold him responsible."

President Burns, speaking on the above, said that it had always been an exceedingly hard matter to get competent associate judges, and in consequence men were often in the stand in the capacity of judges who know no more about the rules governing racing than a porker did of the dead languages. President Burns was followed by Joseph Cairn Simpson and Henry Schwartz, both gentlemen favoring this rule, which makes the responsibility rest upon the presiding judge alone.

Among the "Betting Rules," numbers 24 and 25, were radical changes. They are as follows:

"Any bookmaker or pool-seller who shall refuse to pay a bet according to the decision of the directors, shall be ruled off until said bet or wager be settled.

"Any person who shall make a bet or wager or have made a bet or wager with any pool-selling or book-making firm, and fails to pay the same after having been given a notice of five days, shall, if deemed in arrears by the directors, be ruled off by them until such bet or wager be paid.

The following good rule was added to the printed rules:

"No betting or pool-selling shall be permitted on individual heats in any heat race, but wagers shall only be made upon the final result of any such race."

The scale of weights in vogue at Morris, Monmouth and Jerome Parks and Coney Island were adopted after a little discussion over the raising of the weights on two-year-olds in races for horses of this age exclusively to 118 pounds. Put to a vote, the Eastern weights for horses of this tender age were adopted—six to four. Messrs. Kerr and Ashe were opposed to the change, because the California youngsters are raced two or three months earlier than those at the East. The following weights shall be carried when not stated in the conditions of the race:

In races of intermediate lengths the weights for the shorter distance shall be carried.

In races exclusively for three-year-olds or for four-year-olds, the weight shall be 122 pounds, and for two-year-olds 118 pounds.

Except in handicaps, and in races where the weights are fixed absolutely in the conditions, fillies two years old shall be allowed three pounds, and mares three years old and upward shall be allowed five pounds before the first of September and three pounds afterward.

Welter weight shall be twenty-eight pounds added to weight for age.

The Committee on Rules was authorized to act until the rules are printed. These regulations will have side-notes, so that it will be extremely easy to find any rule in the volume.

During the evening it was announced that a special meeting of the directors of the Blood Horse Association would be called at an early day to consider the programme for the spring meeting now being prepared by Secretary Robert B. Milroy. At that time it is likely that this organization will be asked to co-operate with the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association in securing a lease of ground necessary to build a first-class race track near Baden, San Mateo county. A liberal offer has been made by Peter Iler, head of and representing the Baden syndicate.

Dates Not Changed.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., February 15, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The statement is a mistake that "the State Fair has pushed its dates a week earlier into the summer, etc." We have set our dates the first Monday in September, as has been the custom for years past.

At the State Fair we must give attention to other departments than racing. The Horticultural Department is quite an important factor, and we think it should be given as much attention as should the racing department at least.

Associations that have nothing but racing and Live Stock Exhibitions should not be particular as to dates.

We have not, nor will we take any advantage over the District Associations in any way. The State Fair is annually increasing in its departments, and we have been unjustly charged, in years past, with devoting too much attention to racing. We have given the other departments equal attention, and they are beginning to show in volume and importance with that of racing.

As I said, the State Fair is set for exactly the same time as it has been heretofore, namely, the first Monday in September.

In my opinion it is useless to talk about throwing the whole State into one circuit. The principal places can come in a circuit before and including the State Fair.

The northern part of the State desires a separate circuit, as they have local horses enough to give them a good exhibition. In conversation with some of the Directors of the Northern Associations they expressed a desire to have a circuit to begin at Willows and end at Glenbrook.

The principal circuit could begin at San Jose and end at Fresno.

Very respectfully,
EDWIN F. SMITH, Sec'y.

DR. H. T. WELCH, the inventor of that famous "Palo Alto Veterinary Inhaler" favored us with a call. The Doctor expresses himself more than pleased at the success of his Inhaler. He has just perfected arrangements to place his invention on the European market. If the sales of this novel and efficacious vehicle for applying the medicine directly to the seat of the ailment is commensurate with the merits we know his medicine and instrument to possess we confidently bespeak a large and constantly increasing demand for them.

Woodard & Shanklin's Sale.

Last Saturday was the closing event of the six days' successful auction sale in Kentucky. The offering of five choicely bred trotters, the property of M. Salisbury of Pleasanton, Cal. The gem of the sale was Margaret S., 2:12½, the fastest mare ever sold at public auction. H. S. Henry of Morrisville, Pa., started her at $5,000. She then ran up to $10,000, the bidders being Don J. Leathers and Henry A. H. Moore of Philadelphia. The latter then cried "Two-fifty," and she was knocked down to him at $10,250, which makes Mr. Moore the owner of more high-priced mares, all with low records, than any breeder in the United States.

The fine head sold by Mr. Salisbury realized $19,400, an average of $3,880. During the day seventeen horses changed hands for $28,490, an average of $1,675. The six days of the Woodard & Shanklin sale aggregated 339 head for $381,445, an average of $1,125, which makes it the greatest combination sale of trotters ever held.

Last week Brasfield & Co., sold 347 head for $218,030, which makes a grand total for the two weeks of 686 trotters for $599,475, a grand average of $873. Taken as a whole this series of sales has been remarkably successful, and in nearly every instance good horses have brought what they were worth. Monroe Salisbury's consignment:

La Siesta Farm Catalogue.

The first catalogue issued by the owner of this noted stock farm has just been received. Its typographical appearance, cover and paper are of the very best, while every page of its contents contains the names of some of the celebrated mares that have been recognized by trotting horsemen as game trotters; many of them are already noted as the dams of some of the best horses in the State. Among them we notice Sister (dam of Albert W. 2:20); Olita (dam of Cæsar, 2:16½); May Queen (dam of Directress, 2:28¾); Ripple (sister to Creole, 2:20); Lady Stevens (sister to Minnehaha, the wonderful broodmare) and others. The first page is embellished with a beautiful picture of Eros 5326, record 2:29½, and the pedigree which fills two pages is instructive and exhaustive. There are five mares with records and the dams of eleven, besides three grandams of 2:30 performers. There are seventeen mares by developed sires, embracing all the horses of note that have made California famous. The list of mares out of producing dams is a feature that few stock farms of its size can boast of. The prize-winnings at the different fairs by Eros fill two pages. Taking the catalogue all in all, we must congralulate Mr. Burke on its completeness in every detail.

They Close March 1, 1892.

Remember that the above is the date set for the closing of entries for the various races that are to take place under the auspices of that solid organization, the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association of California. Every owner of a horse, mare, colt and filly in this State should endeavor to enhance the value of these animals by reading the advertisement in another column and forthwith making an entry in some of the events. Last fall it was called the "season of regret" by many who neglected to attend to an announcement similar to the one now advertised, and this year all will have an opportunity of making entries and having a "season of rejoicing," socially and financially. The conditions are most liberal, the payments easy, and the dates selected for holding the races are suitable for everyone. So read, study and take advantage of the liberal terms offered, and make your entries before March 1st. Remember this is an important date.

Entire Plant for Sale.

Particular attention is called to the sale of the Gurney Cab Co. This sale is one of particular interest to our interior towns where race meetings are held. At this sale an opportunity will be offered for some enterprising man to establish himself in a good paying business—as by buying two or three of these handy and stylish cabs and the large and well-bred horses one would be able to do enough business to pay for the plant in a short time. The horses are well adapted for carriage and driving purposes, and will be sold singly, with the privilege of the span. Killip & Co. are to handle the sale, which will take place on the 26th of this month.

Don't Forget the Date.

This admonition does not refer to a variety of fruit, but to the fact that on March 1st entries for the Chicago Racing Association's spring meeting closes. The races will begin June 4th and end June 23d, and every one from this State who has attended the wide-awake city and its magnificent race course can testify to the pleasure they experienced while there. There will be no stake less than $1,500, and there are some fifteen stake races on the programme. The terms are easy, and horsemen will be standing in their own light if they do not read the advertisement published in another column of this journal, make their entries and prepare to go East and have a good time on the circuit. Remember the date when the entries close—March 1, 1892.

Training Racehorses.

William Day, the author of "The Racehorse in Training," writes to the London Sporting Life on "The Racehorse of To-day." Among other things he says:

"People who are old enough to remember 'the Squire of Wantage,' as 'Argus' used factiously to call T. Parr in the Morning Post when in the height of his success, will know how rough his horses looked when brought out to run. The stables wherein I saw them was a barn, actually drafty and cold. Yet his horses were always ready to run when wanted. He had little or no illness, no roarers—unless he had happened to have bought one with the infirmity—nor do I remember hearing of him having a horse with bad eyes.

"Yearlings in June or July with a ten-stone man on their backs making, with their saddle, another, are seen cantering or galloping three furlongs—a system of management no one would approve who really considered the point. Older trainers I have heard condemn the practice, and I cannot think it is a good one. Even to superficial observers the horses of the present day must seem inferior and wanting in stamina, for how few are our cup horses compared with those that were running about thirty or forty years ago, that were continually competing for such and long-distance handicaps, of which in those days there were so many?

"I see by the Racing Calender up to the end of October in the present year that only one horse (Tottenham) ran as many as twenty races, and these were mostly over short distances, and won one selling race of the value of £100, five furlongs. But in 1856, when heats were in vogue, I find Coal-black Rose ran in twenty-three races, Caledonia twenty, Evelyn (a two-year-old), twenty, Fisherman thirty-four, out of which number he won twenty-three, Gemma di Vergny winning thirteen out of eighteen (another two-year-old), Mary twenty-six, Our Sal twenty-four, Plausible twenty-four, Prince of Orange twenty-four, Stork twenty-two, Usurer twenty-nine and Yeutick ran in twenty-seven, winning, like the rest of the horses I have named, more than a fair share of stakes—notwithstanding two-year-olds were allowed to run with older horses in May a mile, and nearly all the races for older horses were two, two and a half and three miles. Many of T. Parr's other horses ran nearly as often as Fisherman, and with success, viz., Rataplan, Toby, Clothworker, Malacca, Gaspard, Avalanche, Weather-gauge and Saucebox. The latter ran as a three-year-old no less than twenty-eight times, and mostly over two-mile courses, winning eleven of the races, among which was the St. Leger. Then could be seen two-year-olds running twenty races a year, and none the worse for it the next or the following seasons. From this comparison it will appear that the present system of breeding and rearing the yearling is not a judicious one, or that he is badly managed after he goes into training, for we see we have fewer old horses running now than formerly, yet the stakes run for are more valuable now than ever they were before; nor are the same number of horses found at the post to contend for great races as were formerly to be seen. Admiral Rous has told us how many pounds a horse may be improved in a fortnight; but what is of more importance, he has told us how it was done—not by easing the horse in his preparation, but by increasing his work by a couple of sweats. The remedy for this state of things is to have longer races, and to have more of them. This would test the stamina of the animals as well as the ability of the trainer, and only those that were successful would gain or deserve credit for properly training their horses. You would then see no pampered animals running away with the stakes, to the disgust of owners who had not backed them, and owners would then see who among trainers did and who did not train their horses. We have seen that horses can run many times a year without injury to themselves, and win more long races than animals that are only trained for short courses over five furlongs. Even for such races we see horses run totally unfit; they get beaten and disappoint their owners, and by losing again are termed "rogues," but by winning their next and other races from better condition, prove in the estimation of their detractors that their opinion of their demerits was correct, and that roguishness and nothing else beat them in their early races. This serves to show that, although from outward appearances a horse may be fit, inwardly he is as fat as an ox, which time and work can only remove. Running horses out of condition turns many roarers, and others are made more savage by this practice than from the abuse of any other treatment. The system of training in the present day is for looks; utility is sacrified for such a trifling object; the stables are kept hot for the purpose. Horses kept in an artificial state are not, and cannot be, as healthily treated as those having plenty of air and exercise. Three-year-olds, having no sort of preparation, are brought out to run two miles or over, never having galloped faster than at half speed for a mile. No one who knows anything of training believes that horses ran be got fit by such preparation. It is an impossibility. Who can tell how much horses, in after life, suffer from such treatment?

"The late Mr. Sawrey Cookson, than whom in his day there was no better judge of breeding, and few who knew more of training and racing, said no mares should be bred from that had not been broken and trained, so that their frames might be properly developed. May not his excellent remarks apply with equal force to many of our race horses, in particular to those that run short courses? That a horse that has had a good preparation to run two or three miles, and does so successfully, would not only be better as a racehorse than one that had only been jumped off and run short courses, half prepared, to the detriment of his physical powers and the injury of his temper, but be infinitely better at the stud, must be apparent. 'Like begets like;' improve your stock and you improve their produce. We have as many good horses now as we had thirty or forty years ago, and the breed has improved rather than deteriorated, and is capable of greater improvement.

"It is the opinion of one trainer, and the policy is followed by others, that no horse wants to gallop more than a mile, even if he has two miles or further distance to run. But I find in the present day trainers who give their horses most work win most long races, yes, and short ones too, and have been doing so for years past, and this must always be the case. This is no secret, but plain facts that anyone may see who likes to look and judge for himself. There are but few trainers who know how horses were formerly trained, and of these only the oldest and most successful. One plan it may not be uninteresting to relate here. After cantering twice, the horses gallop whatever distance they may have to run half speed, and again a second time at a faster pace, further being sweated once a week, from which two-year-olds were not exempted. Now tell me any one who does this in the present day? I know there are none. Yet, with the exception of sweating, which I have no faith in, the system is a good one, and pretty closely followed by some of our oldest and best trainers tn the present day. Of young trainers there are many estible men, I have no doubt, and some who train pretty much after the same way; but there are many more who do not. If they did they would not have so much unaccountable in-and-out running at different meetings.

"I dare say I shall be told that horses trained on the easy system win races—aye, and many I know and confess. But so they would if half the horses training were shut up in a box, and brought out to run without a gallop of any sort. There can be no doubt of this—something must win, and would, if they were donkeys, and to beat occassionally a few half-prepared horses does not redound greatly to the reputation of a trainer—old or young.

"As to breeding—did Touchstone, Venison and other horses get worse stock from such a severe course of training? Or did Beeswing and Alice Hawthorn, and many other mares, breed worse stock from running and winning so many cups and plates as they did over long courses? Then why should running horses oftener in the present day prejudicially affect them as stallions, and why should the mares, if running over longer courses and oftener, be the worst for breeding purposes? Bay Middleton only ran one year for further than a mile and a half, with horses of his own age, and was never beaten; yet, considering the chances he had, he was anything but a success at the stud.

"Now most of the stallions, after winning perhaps a two-year-old race or two and a like number the next year, meeting only horses of the same age, without defeat, are called wonders. What a fallacious test of merit! I should want better proof of the value of a stallion than that if I were about to purchase or send a mare to one. I should like to see him win the Ascot or some other cup for which horses of a different age contend; a two-mile handicap, carrying top weight, as we know Paradox did, and Sterling, who distinguished himself much in the same way as other good horses have done. Above all, I would neither breed from a roarer, coming from a roaring family, nor a bad-tempered horse, whose parents were the same, nor one that had hereditary disease of any sort. Keep from such defective stock, and use sound horses only, that have shown that they are so by the number of races they have run, and from the stock they have descended; judge from the public performances, and put such sound and speedy mares to the above, and we shall soon find an improvement of our thoroughbred stock."

The Simon Pure Morgan.

The true Morgan horse for all business purposes is the best horse that there is, writes A. G. T. in an exchange. One cannot but admire and love him for his many good and fine qualities. Not fast for a mile, but for an all day's drive, and a number of them will outlast any of the fast ones. His kind and pleasant disposition, great intelligence, fine road qualities, so free and easy to drive, smooth and easy way of going, which carries one as easy in the wagon as it does when on his back, and his great courage and endurance—these qualities make me love him. His great beauty, style, proud and lofty bearing one cannot but admire, His head shows his Arabian origin—large nostrils, intelligent face, wide between the eyes; eyes showing spirit, energy and at times fire; ears short, thick and rounding, indicating a strong constitution, placed well apart and pointing towards each other; neck arching, thick and heavy at the body; breast very wide, showing great strength and lung power; withers high and rounding; back sharp; hips smooth and rounding; setting on the tail not high or low; the hind parts heavy like the fore parts, they are in proportion, correspond well as to looks and size; legs short and heavy, indicating great strength, fore legs some distance apart, which make them so sure-footed; hind legs not straight, but free from all hock unsoundness; feet of the very best texture for holding the shoe; in size there are more under fifteen hands than over, and their general weight was under 1,000 pounds, yet they were heavy horses for their size. Fifty or seventy-five years ago they were the horses seen at the musters and training. Justin Morgan, the founder of the family, was very often the saddle horse of the commanding officer, was sent for from a great distance for this purpose, as was his son old Woodbury, his grandson, old Gifford, and his great-grandson, old Green Mountain. It was considered one of the greatest sights to see the horses named on those big days show their great style, action and spirit, which was kept up through the day, A great grandson of old Green Mountain, the Slope horse, was ridden at the centennial at Bennington, Va., 1877, and he showed all the beauty, style, action and spirit of his ancestors. It was a grand sight to see the Morgans at the first fairs, as they seemed to vie in trying to show off the most style and action, and as they passed the stand their eyes seemed to flash fire and their nostrils to emit smoke. Some would step as daintily as though the ground was not good enough for them to tread on, while the tread of some would be so powerful as to make the ground quake. It was then that one thought of the description of the horse in Job. It would be an interesting fact to know how long it would take them to go a mile their fine, stylish way. It is presumed they never were timed, but it is safe to say that it took sometimes half an hour, and it caused some to say they could trot all day in a half bushel. The Morgan breed of horses have been allowed almost to die out on account of their lack of speed for a mile and their somewhat lack of size. This is wrong, as so valuable a breed of horses should not be lost. There are specimens enough of the breed in the country, if rightly bred, to soon have the Morgans back as fine as they were fifty years ago. Breeders will do well to breed the blood more frequently.

Old Lucy and Beulah.

It has been a long time since anything was heard from Beulah, 2:19½, by General Knox, dam Lucia, out of Lucy, 2:18¼. Beulah was owned at Fashion Stud Farm, and made her record there October 26, 1888, says the Newark Call. It was about as fine a piece of trotting as anyone would wish to see. The mare was driven by "Tommy" Dunbar at a regular meeting given on the farm track. She had as a competitor Gene Smith. These two and no more. The match was for $100. Beulah won in three heats, 2:19½, 2:23¼, 2:21½. She did not skip in the three heats. The last heard from Beulah she had taked on the cares of maternity. When Tom Dunbar severed his connection with Fashion Farm he was desirous of taking Beulah with him. He thought she had a great future, and with the attention and skill that he could bestow on her would eventually trot very low down in the teens. The grandam of Beulah made one of the trio of great mares whose contests and triumphs for years constituted the chief glory of the American turf—Goldsmith Maid, Lucy and Lady Thorn. Lucy, although not such a persistent victor, was not a whit behind her two great sisters in racing qualities. She did not win as often as Goldsmith Maid, but in her races with the latter she finished so often at her shoulder that in time and racing quality defeat was about the same as victory. Lucy could get no record under these circumstances, but she must have frequently trotted much faster than 2:18¼. On the day she trotted to her record, August 9, 1872, she had against her Goldsmith Maid, American Girl and Henry. American Girl took the second heat in 2:17¼, and Lucy the first, third and fourth, and the race, in 2:18¼, 2:19¾ and 2:22.

Lucy was one of the greatest race mares that ever lived. She was the only horse that could keep anywhere near Goldsmith Maid, when the latter was in her prime, and the fastest save one of her time. Lucy was foaled in 1857, and was bred by Job Butterworth, of Burlington, N. J. Job Butterworth was a quaint old fellow, odd in his way, and a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He owned a fine lot of woodland in Kent county, Delaware, near Felton. There was a great demand for ship timber about the time the war commenced, and Butterworth moved down to Felton in 1860 and engaged in the lumber business. The logs were hauled to Frederika landing, five miles from Felton, by mule teams. The mules were hitched tandem and the lead mule was a very important animal. It was his business to pick his way through the woods, and a great deal depended on the manner in which he did it. He was guided entirely by the word, and was required to be well broken. There were several wealthy men engaged in the lumber business in that vicinity, and there was quite a rivalry among them for the possession of the best leader for the team. One of the foremost timber men in that section when Butterworth moved there was a man by the name of Burnite. He and Butterworth were members of the same church. A little dispute arose between them at one time, not of very great consequence, and in order to settle it satisfactorily it was left to the quarterly conference of the church. In the adjustment and final settlement of the difficulty Burnite came out ahead. Butterworth was an old Christian, and meekly bowed to the judgment of the tribunal. When the decision was announced he arose, and, with a voice full of tears, said: "Brother Burnite, I don't bear you any ill-will. I suppose I was wrong and you were right. Yes, Brother Burnite, you were right and you got the best of me in this matter, but, thank God, I've got the best leader."

The Breeding Farms.

Does it pay to farm unless you are born with a love to do so?

Breeding trotters is closely allied to operating a farm, and unless the breeder has some kmowledge of what it requires to manage and successfully carry on a good stock farm he will see many ups and downs in the breeding business. The breeder of trotters in most cases has nearly all of the many necessary qualifications, except the practical part—the actual experience among the stock on the farm—but in too many instances he has other business to look after, and is dependent entirely on hired help to run the farm and look after his breeding interests. Here is where the grief comes in. It is not because there is not plenty of good young men, who are willing to work on the farm for fair wages, but it is because these young men have never had any experience with trotters. They can plant corn, saw wood and do a good honest days' work on the farm, at any kind of ordinary work, but they are not educated up to the point where they can see any difference between taking care of a trotter and taking care of a plough horse. We do not mean to say that the plough horse does not need good care, but a plough horse will do his days' work even if the care is not so good. It is different with the trotter; he has had altogether different care from colthood up and his work is altogether different, and unless he receives the proper care he will fail to develop into a trotter. The great fault probably is due to the fact that farmers, as a rule, have in many cases succeeded in raising stock because circumstances were in their favor. But things have changed, the farmer boy wants a fine stepper hitched to a fine buggy now, when he comes to town, and he wants to raise a trotter or two and he goes about it, just as he was taught to go about raising pigs and calves, and Clydesdales. He soon discovers that the trotter can't root; for himself, neither can he live with the calves, and the Clydesdale is slow, and he wonders what is wrong. The whole sum and substance is that raising trotters and raising pigs and calves are two different things—Kell's Iowa Turf.

In a recent conversation, the old-time breeder, trainer and driver, Jack Hook, of Paris, Ky., gave utterance to the following interesting speech: "Give me a good pedigree, but be sure to have the horse hung to it, for I want the genuine article, not his kinfolks. Full brothers are good things to sell, but, as a rule, they are not just the property to buy. You all know Dr. Sparks, and Sparks has two full brothers. One is just good enough to haul women to church and children to school; the other promises better, and is gaited like Sparks. I expect to win some races with him, if he lives and keeps his health, but I don't want to lay any bets that he will make a second Sparks, and be a race horse at all ages, and every day in the year. When a man gets the article itself, he is lucky to find a full brother just like him. Mares don't breed that way. You never saw one mare have two sensational race horses. Take the records, look them through, and you will see that many mares have produced several 2:30 trotters, but how many produce two first-class race horses by the same sire? No, sir, they don't breed that way, and oftentimes you see some terrible suckers that are full brothers to great race horses. Then what is true of race horses is usually true of sires, but the difference is not so plain, because very often the poorer horse gets the better mares. Alcantara and Alcyone are the exceptions, both being great sires, and there may be another exception or two, but the records prove my rule, and it won't do to back kin-folks in horseflesh. Give me the horse, not his full brother."

Prompter (son of Blue Bull), whose daughter Daisy, 2:38¼, held the yearling pacing record for three years, is coming to the State of Indiana, and will be in charge of David Bay, North Vernon.

ARION, SUNOL, PALO ALTO.

Very Few People Know How to Pronounce the Names or the Origin.

"Bring up your h-o-r-s-e-s! Pally Allty will now start to lower his record."

"Who?"

"Pally Alter."

"Who's he?"

"Paler Alty, I said! Paler Alter will now start to lower his record."

People who attended the record meeting at the kite-shaped track need not be told who the speaker-in-chief was. But he is by no means the only man who does not know how to pronounce the gallant old stallion's name. In fact, the man who does know is the exception.

It is odd that the names of the three most celebrated horses in the world to-day are mispronounced as a general thing. Those three are Palo Alto, Sunol and Arion. Column after column has been written about them ever since last fall, but it is probable that of the writers themselves, not one in ten know how the names of the great trio should be pronounced. And it is equally probable that not one in ten know what significance the names carry with them.

It may shock the horse-world horribly to learn that the great two-year-old stallion's name when correctly pronounced sounds almost as Irish as the name of the constellation Orion. The latter is pronounced as if it were spelled O'Ryan. The name Arion is pronounced the same as Orion, save that the initial sound is that of A instead of that of O. The ictus is on the second syllable, and the i has the long sound, as in the word "wine." Most people in speaking of Arion put the ictus on the A and give it the long sound. This pronunciation is incorrect.

"Arion" is a Greek proper name. The owner of that name was a famous musician of Lesbos and a friend of Coriander, King of Corinth, The myth is told of him that when returning home from Sicily, where he had amassed great riches, the sailors determined to throw him overboard and seize his treasures. Discovering the plot, he begged permission to play one melodious tune before it was put in execution, and, having done so, threw himself into the sea. The dolphins, charmed by his music, carried him on their backs to Taenarus, whence he passed over to Corinth; and on the arrival of the ship he had the sailors put to death.

The name of the world-beating two-year-old stallion has been so generally mispronounced, however, that most likely the correct pronounciation has been permanently lost sight of. Even Charles Marvin himself, who brought the youngster up in the way he should go, calls him A-rion.

The two words Palo Alto are Spanish and should be pronounced as such. The a should have the broad sound, as the a in "father," and the final letter, o, should have the long sound as o in "tone." The ictus should be on the first syllable. Properly pronounced the words are Pah-lo Ahl-to. They mean "tall tree." The work palo means literally a stick, but it is also used to designate any tree having a tall, straight trunk. The Palo Alto stables got their name from the place where they were located, and that place was named Palo Alto because there was an exceptionally tall and straight tree growing on it. The early Californian were accustomed to name their ranches in accordance with some circustance often trivial in itself. For instance, El Rancho de Los Posos was so named because of the many water-holes on it, the word (a well) beiug used to designate such a hole; El Rancho Pescadero, because a fisherman lived on it, pescadero meaning "fisherman;" ElRancho del Campo de Los Franbeses, because some Frenchmen had established a camp on it; Yerba Buena (the old name for San Francisco), because of the fact that the herb known as yerba buena (good herb) grew plentifully at that place. In like manner the place Palo Alto most likely derived its name.

The name Sunol is also Spanish, and should be pronounced with the ictus on the last syllable, and by giving the letter n the sound of ny. The word is pronounced as if it were written soon-yole, the double-o in "soon" having the sound of double-o in "foot"—not the broad sound of double-o in "moon."

Sunol is a Spanish proper name which was well known to the early Californians—that is, those who lived in California before the days of the gold fever. Antonio Maria Sunol was a native of Spain and served in the French navy. He came to this State in the French naval vessel Bordelais in 1817, and deserted the service the following year. During his lifetime he held various prominent offices in this State under Mexican rule and acquired large possessions. He died in 1865, leaving an excellent reputation. The Sunol valley was named after him.—Stockton Mail.

The State Falr.

When the report of the proceedings of the State Agricultural Society closed yesterday the Directors were discussing the question of abolishing season tickets and substituting single ticket admitsions with no reduction to any but life members and exhibitors. If the issue had been pressed it would probably have been decided to dispense with season tickets, but Boggs' proposition to postpone action was adopted.

Chris. Green nominated Fred Cox for re-election as President of the Board, and the choice was made unanimous. Mr. Cox expressed pleasure at the satisfaction shown with his service as presiding officer, and promised to give the society, as he had done heretofore, the same careful attention that he gives to his personal aflairs.

G. W. Hancock and Chris Green were re-elected Superintendent of the Park and Pavilion respectively.

The next State Fair will open on Monday, September 5th, and continue two weeks. The racing programme will begin on Thursday and continue nine days.

Beginning March 1st, stalls at the Park in the old cottage stable and new annex will be charged for at $2 a month and other stalls at $1. Renters of the $2 stalls who enter horses at the fair are to be entitled to a rebate of one-half. It was explained that owing to the expense of keeping the stables in repair, made necessary partly by the recklessness of occupants of stalls, a charge had to be made for the stalls.

D. Johnston & Co. and J. C. Hoag presented bids for the privilege of printing a paper in the pavilion. Hoag offered $355 and got the privilege, his bid being $105 over the amount realized last year.

The report of Superintendent of Ramie Culture Murray was received.

It was decided to offer the customary two, three and four-year-old pacing purses. For the 2:30 class entries close March 15th.

It was decided that hereafter when any animal receives the blue ribbon as the best of its individual class, it cannot again compete in the same class. This is a concession that for many years has been demanded by breeders.

The Board adjourned to March 21st.

After the adjournment the Directors were entertained at the Sutter Club by President Cox.—Sacramento Bee.

Corns on Horses.

In the horse a corn is the result of a bruise involving the structure of the sensitive sole. It appears as a reddish or brownish spot in the triangular space situated between the bars and the wall at the heel. Its color is due to permeation of the horn with the blood which comes from some of the capillaries ruptured by the bruise. A corn is always considered as an unsoundness, although the animal may not go lame. At first a corn may be simply a bruise, but in some cases it terminates very seriously, as, for instance, in suppuration, partial necrosis or death of the parts, or by extending to the surface of the coffin bone and causing through inflammation the formation of a roughened bony tissue. Cases of this sort are very difficult to treat and seldom it ever recover. Ordinary cases of corns can be treated with very little trouble, but those in which suppuration occurs often proves tedious, not merely on account of the local injury, but for the reason that the suppurative process extends and causes a breaking down of the adjacent tissues, and then again blood poisoning may set in.

There are various causes of corns, different conditions that exist predispose an animal to them. For instance, wide feet with low heels and a flat sole are usually afflicted with corns; then again feet with thin, brittle or weakened walls at the heels unable to sustain the pressure of the shoe are apt to have corns. High heels, altering the natural relative position of the bones, causes a great increase of concussion to those parts. Contracted heels also render a horse liable to corns by increasing the pressure on the soft tissues at the heels. The commonest cause of corns can be attributed to errors in shoeing, erroneously paring and rasping away the foot, paring away the sole and frog, which is the elastic cushion intended by nature to support the heels. A shoe when properly applied should only rest on the wall of the hoof, and not upon the sole or bars. Various forms of shoes give rise to corns. Shoes whose concavity extends too far back on the heels; shoes with high calks; shoes with thin heels which tend to bury themselves in the soles of the foot; shoes too short in the heels, with a calk immediately under the foot, and any form of shoe which presses on the sole or one which has been so long that the horn has overgrown it; these are generally the variety which produce corns. In treating an ordinary case of corn, remove the shoe and apply hot poultices to the foot for two or three days, or till it is apparent the animal is relieved.

In shoeing the animal later, a very good plan is to have a leather sole applied, which is retained in position by the shoe nailed over it; but care must be taken so that there will be no bearing on the injured part. If the horse has a good large frog, it is a very good plan to shoe him with a bar shoe. In some cases the application of a three-quarter shoe will be found quite practicable, and we prefer its use whenever the opportunity presents; by this method the shoe only presses on the sound part of the foot and leaves the injured part absolutely without pressure, and acts as a protection by elevating it from the ground. In the treatment of moist or suppurative corn, the animal suffers intense pain, and it is this fact which generally leads one to search for pus, for, if not discovered and relieved, it is apt to work its way and break out at the top of the heel. Sometimes one's attention is called to such a case where there is a swelling over one of the heels and the horse is suffering severe pain. Here it is that an opening must be made on the sole over the seat of corn, in order to allow the escape of pus, or, if necessary, an opening may be made on top, especially if the parts "pit" on pressure. After the foot has been treated surgically it should be soaked in warm water for an hour daily and afterwards poulticed. A very good plan also is to syringe the parts with a strong solution of bichloride of mercury, one to two hundred, or to cauterize with lunar caustic (nitrate of silver.) All diseased tissue or horn must be removed and the soaking, poulticing and cauterizing continued until the soreness subsides and the wounds take on a healthy appearance. The after treatment will consist in dressing the foot with tar and oakum, and when the horse is able to bear it have him shod. Now, it is all very well to give directions as to the treatment of a case of corns, but the most important of all things is to discover the cause, and, if possible, to avoid it for the future. So, in shoeing an animal recovering from corns, the blacksmith must be careful that the bearing shall not be on the injured parts, but only on the sound part of the foot. Go occasionally and see your horses shod yourself—an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure.

To THOSE whs know Charles Marvin, the reports of his going up into Main and shouting aloud to the populace that he wanted to buy Warrener, brother to Sunol, and was willing to give $60,000 for him, are regarded just about as truthful as a rumor would be of John M. Mackay and W. S. Hobart shouting at the top of their voices on Pine street that they wanted to buy the——mine; that they knew it was a bonanza, and were prepared to pay two millions for it.

C. A. ROBINSON, of Merced, is to have his young chestnut stallion, Alcantara Wilkes worked for speed this fall. He intends to give him only a short season in the stud so as that he can prepare him for the races. Alcantara Wilkes is one of best-looking stallions in Merced county, and all that is needed is a good race track to make this beautiful section the headquarters for a large number of good ones like this youngster to make themselves famous.

EX-SENATOR E. J. ROSE, of Los Angeles county, was in town this week, and appeared to be in fair health. A good-sized string of thoroughbreds belonging to this gentlemen is being trained at Los Angeler, and several will doubtless be heard from both in California and the far East, if Dame Rumor does not prevaricate.

GEO. GOOD'S mare Jubilee, by Altamont, is in trainer Hawk's stable at Hallacks, Oregon. She is working as square as can be, and will surely get in the 30 list.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Santa Rosa gives promise of being quite a "sporty" place this season. Henry Kroncke, proprietor of Kroncke's Park, has made arrangements to have thirty excursion picnics held here during the summer, the first, or grand opening one, to come off in April under the auspices of the National Club of San Francisco.

Santa Rosa was formerly the Mecca for thousands of Sunday excursionists from San Francisco, but a reform city council took steps against them, and for the past two years they have ignored the "City of Roses." This summer, in the language of our German friends, es geht wielder los bier, and as a consequence restaurant and hotel men and caterers of all kinds are chuckling in anticipation of the harvest they will gather from the hungry and thirsty city folks.

Baseball men are figuring and scheming to get the old Santa Rosa Amateur Club on its legs again, and if they can succeed in breathing new life into the old organization, it will join one of the amateur leagues. Time was when the name of the Santa Rosa Amateurs inspired terror in the ranks of the Vallejos, Burlingtons, Allens and other amateur teams, for our twirlers were the cream of the non-professionals. It is the intention to make the team of this year even better than the others were.

The trotting horse men, and the owners of the gallopers as well, are also going to be in the swim. One hears a good deal about colts and colt stakes these days. The trotting club will make an effort to give a number of stakes for Sonoma county stakes to be competed for the coming autumn. The county swarms with good youngsters, and if the horsemen will put their heads together and throw out a burst or spurt of enterprise, they can get up some colt races equal to any.

One hears less fear expressed in regard to giving young animals records early in the season than formerly. Last season, when the club endeavored to get up a few races, plenty of men were found who had good, fast horses, but they would not enter them in the races for fear they would get records, and dear me, that would never do. Oh, no! that would ruin their chances on the circuit. In some cases, however, it would have been more profitable if some of them could have obtained records early in the season. But much of the talk about being afraid of obtaining records is only talk, nothing more.

The trotting horse has become a very important factor in Sonoma county, and the time is not far distant when there will be a driving club in every town. Healdsburg has recently organized such a club composed of some of the best known horsemen in the northern part of the county. Santa Rosa's club has over one hundred members, and when Petaluma and other points organize clubs, it will be a very easy matter for the different associations to combine once or twice each year and give a county meeting of considerable magnitude.

Charlie Farmer, one of our prominent young farmers and stockmen, lost a valuable standard-bred colt a few days ago. It was struck by a locomotive on the "Donohue" line. Not many weeks ago S. H. Sheplar lost a fine young horse in the same way, and less than three weeks ago a train dashed into a troop of horses belonging to Wilfred Page near Penn's Grove, injuring them so that five had to be killed. Sonoma county horses and locomotives do not seem to have much respect for each other.

Thos. Bonner and G. W. Fraser spent Friday at Napa, where they sized up some of the horses at that place. Mr. Fraser reports that Coombs Brothers have sold their home place to San Francisco parties, and in speaking of their stock, grows eloquent over a colt out of Lillie Stanley and sired by Director. Fraser is an ardent admirer of the Director stock, and there are many in Sonoma county of the same opinion. That is not strange, for that stock is well represented in the county.

There has been considerable shifting around among the horses of the county this winter. Shaner with his "string" has gone to San Francisco. Foster has taken his horses away and a number of stallions have left for other prrts. Allen Wilkes, Pierce Bros.' black stallion by Mambrino Wilkes, has been sold to H. Freelson, who took him to Napa; Captain Grosse's Sunset has gone to Solano county, his Anteeof to San Bernardino, and a Kern county man is negotiating for his horse Anteeof; George Guerne sold an Anteeo stallion that went South, M. J. Streining did likewise, and I. DeTurk's game little stallion Anteeo Button has gone to help build up the trotting interests in another part of the State.

Pierce Bros, are constantly making additions to their stock here. Among the latest brought here were three bought at the Hicks sale in San Francisco. They were the filly Rose Bay, by Bay Rose, Teresa by Prompter, and Sallie Scott by Nutwood. Their track is in pretty good condition and the horsemen will soon be making things lively out there. Now and then the boys, and some of the older chaps too, have a little race, and only a few mornings since three of our prominent citizens had a smart brush with their colts. There is nothing more exhilarating than an early morning horse race.

Mr. Doe, of San Francisco, owner of the promising green trotter "Smoothy" was here a few days ago and found time to give his horse a few fast miles. Smoothy will "take in" the northwestern circuit this year.

Dr. Davenport, veterinarian at this place, says there is no "grip" among Santa Rosa horses, and that there is very little sickness of any kind. There is less, in fact, than there was one year ago. Veterinarians are not rushed now, but the new crop of horses will be coming in shortly, and then they will be kept busy

John Dunbar has been driving his big Daly colt every day of late. He is very large and speedy. He resembles his sire in disposition, for he is as gentle as a lamb and has as much sense as some statesmen.

Myrtle will not go East this year, that seems to be pretty generally understood. We are glad she will not, for we should like to see genial "Mc," who brought her out and drove her to her to the great record as a three-year-old, share more glories with her.

Will We Have a Racetrack?

The subject of having a suitable race track for this metropolis has become almost as threadbare as the carpets in the grand stand at the Bay District track. For weeks, months—aye, for years—it has "bobbed up serenely" and then been quietly anchored in the great pool of time, while the westerly winds howled a requiem o'er the unroofed sheds by night and whistled mournfully through the well-ventilated fences by day. The boards on the club-house balcony have warped and twisted into as many shapes as the moss-covered shingles on the shady side of the gable roof. The saloon has been closed in respect to its departed glories; the laughter, the joking and the reminiscences that have been heard within its pictured walls do not echo to the clinking of the glasses. Many of the stalls wherein the kings and queens, princes and princesses of the turf were wont to eat hay and inhale the effervescence of bay rum are now deserted, except by the lonely rodents or festive gophers. A few trainers and drivers have stabled their horses in some of the stalls, and thus kept up their reputation for bravery in and out of the sulky. The little pond, that from its origin near the pool-boxes has been called the "bookmakers' fount of joy," has now become a stagnant sheet of green scum wherein the frogs enjoy their croakings night and day. The judges' stand, with its double flat surrounded by broken panes of glass, stands silent and alone, defying the winds that eddy and whirl around its shaking sides. The broken doorway and dilapidated fence are evidences of the ravages of Time. The track itself needs a trainer's care to put it in condition. It has to be brushed and scraped before a sulky goes over it. In some places the sweenied hollows are numerous from constant wear, and in others, soft puffs, hard spavins and enlargements strike the wheel very unpleasantly when rounding the turns or coming down the homestretch, no matter how much care is exercised.

There will soon be an end to all complaints about this famous course, for famous it always was, and now, in its decline it even enlists our attention. The long-talked-of Baden race track is beginning to assume some shape, and the gentlemen who comprise the committee to inspect the grounds will no doubt return to their association a full and complete report.

The Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association is the largest of its kind in America, and the people composing it are horsemen who love the trotting horse industry and have taken a pride in the growth and development of the fascinating study of breeding. They are Californians in every sense of the word, and wherever they are, either at home or abroad, the news of one of our trotters breaking a record either here or in the East, sends a thrill through them and a flush of pride to their cheeks; for everyone of these trotting and pacing phenomenons were bred and owned by some one they knew.

The Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association is composed of horsemen who take pride in California and its horses also, and it has been their desire for a long time to have a new track. There seems to have been a wierd and chilling "hoodoo" connected with the Bay District track that had its birth in the days when the four-mile races were run to enrich the shrewd management, rob the public that paid to get inside the gates and cursed the open-handed robbers as they clambered around the judges' stand and filed slowly out, uttering imprecations upon the heads of those who had so shamefully stultified themselves and strangled the infant industry of breeding and racing thoroughbreds in this State. This association will, it is hoped, take an active interest in this proposed track at Baden, and, with their hearty co-operation, the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association will have the encouragement they need. The building of a model race track, second to no other in the world, will then be in keeping with the class of horses we raise. As a winter track it will be the magnet to draw large strings of horses from the East, and their coming will revive the interest that has lately been allowed to flag.

There has never been a more auspicious time for the work to commence than at the present. A town will grow outside of the gates, called Baden; railroad cars as well as steamboats will convey all lovers of the sport to within a short distance of it. Once let it be known that there will be a track built, and that the stock is upon the market, a revival of the hopes of our enthusiastic horsemen will result. A committee has been appointed, and in a few weeks we hope to have the pleasure of announcing that San Francisco will have the finest-appointed race track, grand stand, club-houses, etc., west of Chicago. Plans will be drawn up that will embody all the salient features that have made the best race tracks in the East so popular.

The New Set of Rules.

Several important rules were adopted by the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association at their meeting last Tuesday night—many that for fairness cannot but be greatly commended by the public. While these regulations are voluminous and cover almost every point that can arise, we will only call attention in this article to the more important changes. First under this head we will mention the one which gives the power to the Presiding Judge alone to decide which horse wins. While there will be two associate judges, as heretofore, these men will only be used as assistants in placing the second, third and fourth horses and observing the committal of fouls. They will have no voice in making a decision, however, and when a foul is declared by one or both to have been committed, the testimony of the starter and others of known reliability present will be taken in the matter when the Presiding Judge, through some cause, fails to see such foul. The clause winds up with: "The Presiding Judge may solicit the opinion of his associates, but should both of them disagree with him his judgment shall prevail, the intention of this section being to give the Presiding Judge full power and hold him responsible." In the past it has been exceedingly hard to secure associate judges who knew anything of the rules and how to interpret them correctly. Frequently these "assistants" have voted the Presiding Judge down, and thereby cast not a little stigma on the association, and this bad feature is now a thing of the past, for which every lover of fair play should be thankful. All that now remains to give the association a veritable "boom" is the appointment of a gentleman to the position of Presiding Judge who understands the rules thoroughly and will enforce them; a man who is vigilant and quick to detect fraud. In this connection we would suggest that whoever is appointed should not only have the above requirements, but he should have a fair idea of the ability and condition of the horses under his jurisdiction and method of riding of the jockeys. This knowledge can only be gained by watching and timing the animals in their work and a close scrutiny of the jockeys whenever the opportunity presents itself. Therefore the Presiding Judge, upon whom a great responsibility now rests, should be a very busy and watchful man and well paid for his thankless work.

Another important rule is the one passed abolishing betting on the outcome of any particular heat. This will put an end to more jobbery than almost any regulation that could have been devised, and it is pleasant to feel that we have not clamored in vain for such a rule. Another rule was passed making the "laying up" of a heat punishable by fine, suspension or expulsion, in the discretion of the Judge, but a horse who is not in the hunt at any time need not to be lashed and spurred when it is apparent to the officials that he has no chance to win.

"Welshing" bookmakers and outside bettors are liable to a ruling-off or suspension until they make good their arrears, and any person ruled off on any charge must remain outside the gates or inclosure until he is reinstated.

There will be no more delays at the post of from three-quarters of an hour to an hour and a half, occasioned by the incompetency of the starter or the obstinacy of horse or rider, for under a new rule the Clerk of the Course will note the time the horses consume at the post, and when thirty minutes have elapsed without a start, the horses will be ridden or led up to the line marked by the starter, and when that point is reached, down will fly the flag and Beelzebub take the hindmost. If anybody is left at the post it makes no difference except to those who have wagered on the "left" beast's chances of winning.

The raising of the scale of weights is a good move, as better jockeys can now be secured in most instances.

We applaud and congratulate the Blood Horse Association on the passage of the above rules, and now nothing is left but to see to the enforcement of them, and the appointment of some good man as Presiding Judge who will have his eyes open and run down any robber or robbers that may be disguising themselves as lovers of racing and at the same time are engaged in jobberies most foul.

ATTENTION is called to the great combination sale advertised by Killip & Co. to take place on the 10th of March.

GOOD, fat purse races, with no entrance fees, have done much to encourage small breeders and owners of thoroughbreds in America. That is admitted. A veteran trotting horseman was asked the other day if this system of letting horses compete without charging their owners anything in the way of entrance money would not be popular and encouraging to trotting horse-owners. "No," answered the gentlemen, "I saw that tried years ago, and the result was that every race had from a dozen to twenty starters, and the man who drew a bad position was seldom in the hunt." That may be correct, but we believe if there were one or two class trotting or pacing races every day during the course of a meeting with $10 or $15 entrance and $400 or such a sum added there would be good fields contending, more excitement about the races, larger crowds to witness the contests, greater interest on all sides and far more satisfaction. But one thing must be devised—a better system of starting and a limit to scoring horses. This "scoring by the pole horse" is a bad idea, for half the time this animal is a slow scorer and delays the start until the audience is either maddened or tired out. Then again a powerful but not very speedy horse is often held back by his driver with the view of "scoring his field to death" and then capturing the race by dint of superior strength, not speed. A man should be in the judges' stand capable of seeing into these little "tricks of the trade," and of metaphorically sitting on the cute "tradesman" without delay. Fields should be sent away when there is a good bunch at the wire, and if the pole horse, with his natural advantage, can not hold his position he should be relegated to the tail-end of the horse procession. When three-fourths of the scoring in races is done away with and the interests of the owner of the pole horse are not considered of paramount importance, then will trotting races have a greater boom than ever.

THE PAID starter and presiding judge we must and will have. The race-going public have declared for them, and now our leading breeders are falling rapidly into line and are making known their desires in this direction in no unmistakable terms. The Colonels, Captains, Majors and Doctors with nothing to qualify them for either of these responsible positions will now have to be content with seats in the grand stand, where they can bottle up their wrath and clamor against the professional starter and presiding judge with more fiery rhetoric than sound, logical arguments for the continuance of the moss-covered system, where Justice was too often blind to the faults of famous drivers, popular reinsmen and wealthy owners to suit the common race-goer, upon whom the associations rely mostly for support. One cannot be expected to become thoroughly acquainted with all the rules (which should be at a judge's fingers' ends) when he is not called upon to act as judge but one week out of fifty-two, especially where that man is engaged in conducting a large business house or a breeding establishment or large law practice the year around, and it is very hard to expect him to "hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may," when he is not associated with the men who do most of the laying-up of heats, pulling and fouling and generalcrooked work, and with whose methods he is not intimately acquainted. If such judges have the best of intentions, and desire every thing to be on the level, it is little wonder that they cannot discern the misdeeds of men whom they are not associated with and know little about. Hence, the firm, fearless, well-posted, professional judge is a necessity, and we must have him.

CLAMORERS against "tin-cup" records should not waste their substance and strain their lungs so severely in the future as in the past. Pause, in your mad careers, oh hot-headed friends, tap your foreheads, and think it over. Give breeders and buyers of trotting horses credit for having average powers of discernment. They know the horses whose records are made against the fossilized scythe-bearer, and bear them in their minds, and if they consider the horses purely exhibition animals, with little gameness or courage, there will be no demand for that performer or its progeny. Not one buyer or breeder in ten thousand will be hoodwinked an iota, and the average horseman can be safely trusted to pick out the race-horse nine times out of ten.

FRANK W. COVEY, son of the late Harris R. Covey, has been appointed Superintendent of the Trotting Horse Department of Palo Alto Stock Farm. Mr. Covey is a thorough horseman, a good business man, and is endowed with rare executive ability. No better appointment could have been made, and we congratulate Senator Strnford on his selection.

THE scissors editor of the American Sportsman who loves to copy columns of matter from this journal is hereby informed that the name of this paper is the "BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN," and not "a California paper." We wish also to inform this man of brains and muscle that this is a great State, and by the latest census reports there are several "papers" here, although few of them, thank Heaven, have descended so low as to steal the work of others and brand it as their own.

D. D. WITHERS, the famous millionaire breeder of thoroughbreds, died at the Brevoort House, New York, last Thursday.

McCarty Stud Farm.

Before the train from San Francisco to Livermore reaches Pleasanton the attention of the passengers is called to a long row of new barns or sheds on the side of a hill close to a pretty residence almost hidden beneath the shade of oaks and manzanitas. Below the house on a level piece of land are at least one hundred and fifty horses, knee deep in the luxuriant grasses and alfalfa; between that field and the residence a green row of willows marks the course of a living stream of water, the virtues of which are known throughout the valley. This is the lower portion of the Hearst place now known as McCarty's Stud Farm.

There are few men in the United States that have had more "ups and downs" than the proprietor of this place, the genial wearer of the "white hat." His enterprise, shrewdness and ambition have earned for him a name that is known everywhere. Honorable in his dealings, devoted to his family, keen in his judgment of horses and their values, a natural trader and a genius for advertising, Daniel will hew his way through all obstacles, and retire wealthy in a few years. He has been gathering horses of all descriptions—choice thoroughbreds, fast trotters, pacers, and handsome, well-bred stallions from all parts of California, until, as he says himself, "he will give any man $100 that will sell him another horse." He intends to send ten carloads of youngsters to the East to be sold, and then he will have enough left to stock his large farm.

Some time ago he purchased Dexter Prince and a number of this horse's progeny, from L. M. Morse, of Lodi, and an inspection of a few of some of the latter in San Francisco revealed the fact that his eyes were wide open when he did so. He has a black mare called Parthenia, by Dexter Prince, out of a daughter of Richard's Elector; second dam, by Sargent's Patchen; third dam by Jack Hawkins, that will enter the 2:20 list this fall. Another exceedingly fine-looking trotting bay mare, which he calls Cleopatra, is our type of a trotter, and will add another jewel to Dexter Prince's tiara of bright ones.

Chloe, 2:24, and Maggie, 2:27½, two other daughters of this fine stallion, are stabled in the same building with Voucher, 2:21½; a Gaviota filly out of a George M. Patchen Jr. mare, is being driven daily as a mate to his handsome, stylish Bay Rose colt, through the Golden Gate Park, and no finer team enters the avenue.

Dexterita is the name of a rangy filly—full sister to Cleopatra; her dam is by Silverthreads; second dam by Young Hunter; third dam by Owen Dale; fourth dam by old Kentucky Hunter. Mr. McCarty has her dam at Pleasanton, heavy in foal to Dexter Prince, and also a broken-legged daughter of Electioneer that he aptly calls Lady Fracture; she is the dam of the fast gelding Fitzsimmons.

The stallions at the stud farm occupies one of the new buildings. Dexter Prince was the first led out for our inspection and exceeded all our expectations. We had so often seen his progeny win in the hottest company and all of them were so large boned and very deceptive as to height and weight, we expected to see a much larger horse, but instead we were pleased to see he was just sixteen hands high, a beautiful shade of bay with black points, his clean-finished appearance, splendid head, neck and ears, fine shoulder, short back, heavy quarters denoted at once his royal lineage, and why breeders have neglected this horse for so many years, is past understanding. His worth will be more fully and better appreciated now that his colts are to be trained.

Cupid, 2:18, the game son of that sire of extreme and early speed, Sidney, was in an adjoining stall; he is totally unlike his brother Adonis in conformation, and is a horse of a higher finish, being more symmetrical and stylish in his make up and shows that the blending of that handsome mother of his—the game, untiring Venus—with Sidney has proved a most happy one in his case. In that memorable six-heat race last fall, at the Bay District race, Cupid found a warm spot in the heart of every spectator for his gameness and pluck in snatching the banner of victory from his dogged companions and leading them all for three heats while his feet were inflamed and his legs all swollen.

If a person wanted to select a stallion that would suit the trainer, the farmer, and the lover of a high-class of harness horses, he would unhesitatingly pick out Pleasanton, by Richard's Elector, whose first colts in Contra Costa county are already attracting much attention. For color, size, style, conformation and trotting action there are few better five-year-old stallions in the State.

Nephwood is a handsome bay horse, also five years old, by Nephew, out of Clytie II, by Nutwood, a combination of blood lines that will become famous in time. Mr. McCarty stands him at the remarkably low price of fifty dollars and should get a large number of mares for him at that figure.

In the last stall was the thoroughbred, brown, four-year-old stallion, Conrad, by Flood, out of imp. Goula, by Exminster. There are few stallions in the State that come from as great producing families and have been so closely related to great weight carriers and consistent performers. For his price of service, to Conrad can the claim be made that he is the best bred and grandest individual for that price standing for service in California. It takes time to prove a sire's worth and therefore Conrad's reputation must be tested in the crucible of time.

Anteeo Wilkes.

The two families of to-day are the Wilkes and the Electioneers; no other sires have approached their prepotency as producers of extreme speed at the trotting gait.

Nearly one out of every three of Electioneer's living colts have entered the 2:30 list.

George Wilkes is the sire and grand sire of 521 in the 2:30 list.

All the world's trotting records, except one, are possessed by these two families.

The four big best prices ever paid for trotting stallions were for sons and grandsons of George Wilkes and Electioneer. Anteeo, $60,000; Bell Boy, $51,000; Axtell, $105,000 and Arion, $125,000.

As George Wilkes and Electioneer were superior to their sire, the greatest sire in his day, so will some son of theirs surpass them as transmitters of trotting speed.

No son of George Wilkes combining record and his 2:20 list of colt trotters, can equal Guy Wilkes' record 2:15¼, and no stallion has ever equaled his 2:20 list at his age. Guy Wilkes has also the honor to be the full brother to the sire of Axtell, three-year-old record 2:12.

Of Electioneer's sons, Anteeo's race record of 2:16¼ combined with his 2:20 list shows beyond dispute that he is the one who promises most to inherit the qualities that produced Sunol 2:08¼, Palo Alto 2:08¾ and Arion, two-year-old record 2:10¾.

The blending of the blood of Guy Wilkes and Anteeo could not be surpassed when extreme speed and gameness are the qualities sought for.

The only stallion in the United States possessing this superb cross of blood is the Anteeo Wilkes, the property of Oscar Mansfeldt, of Oakland, Cal.

Anteeo Wilkes is a three-year-old stallion; he is 15.3 hands high, of noble proportions, and a jet black in color.

He has never been driven by a professional driver, but last fall, with no regular work, he trotted a mile in 2:52, and a quarter in thirty-nine seconds, with such purity of gait, that a very low record is confidently expected of him at the close of the present season. To give him the benefit of a season's training, he has been limited to twelve mares, the season to close June 15th.

Mr. Mansfeldt has had several tempting offers for this horse, but has such faith in his future as a trotter and sire that he has determined to retain him, and give him all the advantages that choice mares and training can do for him, with a firm conviction that he will take a place in the front rank of the great trotters and sires of the future.

To students of breeding, the claim that Anteeo Wilkes combines the blood of the greatest son of George Wilkes, and the greatest son of Electioneer, will speak volumes.

The Stanford Broodmare Sale.

On Wednesday, February 24th, at 10 A. M., a rare opportunity will be offered breeders and all interested in the trotting horse of purchasing at public auction a choice selection of well-bred matrons from the famous Palo Alto Stock Farm. The consignment includes the get of such well-known sires as Almont 33, Kentucky Prince 2170, A. W. Richmond 1687, Gen. Benton 1755, Milton Medium 4382, Piedmont 904, Arthurton 365, Benefit 5327, Whipple's Hambletonian 725, Paul's Abdallah, Mohawk Chief, Don Victor, etc. Many of the mares are in foal to such noted sons of Electioneer, as Palo Alto 5353, the King, 2:08¾, Whips 13407, 2:27½ (sire of Navidad, 2:22½, at four years old, Warlock, 2:28¼, six years old), Electricity 5344, 2:17¾, Amigo, 2:16¾, Azmoor 13467, 2:20½, Lottery and Alban 5332, 2:24. The other young sires represented are Mac Benton 1370 and Wildnut 13474, Woodnut, and Wildflower. The list includes mares that are known producers of speed, and many of the get of these mares have been sold at New York horse sales for large prices varying from $3,100 to $400 for colts of which nearly all were but two years of age. It has been to a great extent the fate of many of the produce of these mares now offered for sale to have been put to breeding without ever having been developed like the illustrious Electioneer; they have suffered in this regard.

The excellent average of the two year-old produce of Palo Alto, 2:08¾ at the late Stanford sale of $1,154 must be proof of the high esteem in which he is held by Eastern buyers nor can the good average of Azmoor's (2:20½) two-year-old produce of $851 be ignored by enlightened purchasers.

A great deal of the blood of the mares to be sold remains at Palo Alto and many of these highly-bred matrons are only disposed of because their near relations and in some cases full sisters form a portion of the Palo Alto harem. The sale affords a rare chance to obtain the blood of the mighty Electioneer crossed upon the greatest of thoroughbred strains and mingled with some of the best-known combinations of trotting blood of the day. It also offers an opportunity to obtain the blood of Electioneer and Pilot Jr. that great broodmare producer; combined with some of the most fashionable trotting crosses. Thus the advocates of both the thoroughbred and the trotting crosses may please their fancies. Aside from the produce of these mares they are themselves intrinsically a valuable lot of well-formed and highly-bred matrons worthy the careful inspection and consideration of all breeders and intending purchasers. The consignment will arrive February 21th, and will be on exhibition every day till day of sale at salesyard of Killip & Co., corner Van Ness and Market street, San Francisco.

ATHLETICS.

The Bay City cyclers were out in full force last Sunday. Several of the boys visited Golden Gate Park, while some took long spins over the country roads.

The Reliance Athletic Club of Oakland is thinking about leasing a tract of land on the line of one of the electric roads with the intention of establishing outside grounds of its own. The club at the present time cannot boast of having many good athletes on its membership roll, but it is thought that if the proposed out-door scheme is carried into effect that many of the athletes belonging to other clubs will desert and adopt the colors of the Reliance Club.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the Olympic and University foot-ball teams will play at Central Park. So far the O. A. C. team has been successful, but when they meet the U. C. boys this afternoon it will be nip and tuck from start to finish.

The field-day of the class of '95 will be held at the U. C. cinder track, Berkeley, this afternoon. The entries from this side are not very numerous, but the students are in good condition, and some excellent racing may be looked forward to. The following is the programme of the games: (See presented list on next sheet.)

Washington's Birthday will be a rather dull day as far as athletic sports are concerned. This will be the first year in many that no athletic programme will be carried out.

At the recent Ladies' Night of the Acme Club of Oakland vice-president T. F. Scanlan was presented with a handsome diamond locket by the members of the club.

At a conference of the directors of the Young Men's Christian Ass'n, held at the Association building, 232 Sutter Street, on January 18th last, it was decided to hold an Annual Field Day about the 1st of April, taking in all the Associations in this part of the State. There were quite a number of requests from different cities for the Field Day, but San Jose carried off the palm, and it was unanimously decided to hold the first Field Day at the Garden City. The date has not yet been fixed, but it will probably be about the 1st of April. The following are among some of the sports suggested:

BANNER EVENTS. 100 yard dash, 1-mile run, throwing hammer (12 lbs.), running high jump, pole vault, 220-yard dash, putting shot (16 lbs.), standing broad jump, running broad jump, running hop, step nd jump; hurdle race, 100 yards, 10 hurdles, 3¼ feet high, throwing ase ball.

Each competitor is required to take part in at least five of the above events.

Fine prizes will be awarded to the different winners. It is probable that a mile walk will also be added to the programme.

Washington Park Entries.

Following are the Pacific Slope entries to the various rich stakes to be fought for at Washington Park, Chicago, this season. It will be seen that several owners that have heretofore confined themselves to racing in California and other Pacific Coast States intend to try their fortunes and the mettle of their horses on the other side of the Rockies. The large number of entries from this section develops two important facts—that rich stakes will bring horses thousands of miles and that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is a great advertising medium:

THE WHEELER HANDICAP, $5,000.—A sweepstakes for three-year-olds and upward, $100 each, $25 forfeit, or only $10 if declared; $5,000 added; the second horse to receive $750 and the third $250 out of the stakes. Weights to be announced Monday, July 11th; declarations to be made on or before Saturday, July 16th. Starters to be named through the entry-box Friday, July 22d, and all horses so named to be liable for the starting fee. A winner of any race after the announcement of weights of the value of $1,500 to carry 5 lbs extra. To be run Saturday, July 22d. 137 nominations. One Mile and a Quarter.

Guarding Against Ringers.

ALBANY, N. Y., January 21, 1892.

A bill to punish men who enter horses under wrong pedigrees or who represent them to be other than they really are has been introduced in the Senate here by Mr. Van Gerder, and has been read twice, referred to the Committee on Judiciary and ordered printed. It is quite a sweeping bill in its provisions, and if it becomes a law will make men who have been used to taking ringers about the country give this State a wide berth. The full bill is given below:

State of New York, No. 30, Int. 34. In Senate, January 12, 1892.—Introduced by Mr. Van Gerder, read twice and referred to the Committee on Judiciary and ordered printed.

An act to prevent fraudulent practices at agricultural society meetings, or upon the grounds of any racing associations.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1—Whoever makes entries of animals or articles as competitors for premiums or purses offered by an agricultural society, or by any person or association in this state, shall be holden to pay the entry fee in accordance with the advertised rules and regulations of any such society, person or association not in conflict with the laws of this State.

SEC. 2—Whoever, for the purpose of competing for purses or premiums, knowingly and designedly enters or drives any horse that shall have been painted or disguised, or represents any other or different horse from the one which is purported to be entered, or shall knowingly or designedly, for the purpose of competing for premiums or purses, enter or drive a horse in a class to which it does not properly belong, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500, or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by both such a fine and imprisonment.

Agricultural societies, persons and associations holding public affairs for competition for premiums or purses are authorized to conduct in accordance with the advertised rules and regulations, not to conflict with the laws of this state.

This act shall take effect immediately.

A CURIOUS mistake, common among blacksmiths, was pointed out recently by a practicing veterinary surgeon. He drew attention to the fact that most farriers, being right-handed, unintentionally lower the left side of the foot more than the right side. As the result the pastern does not fit evenly on the coffin bone, or the bone suspended inside the wall of the hoof, and in time the concussion of the foot on the street produces soreness in the joint which could not exist if the feet were level. A trifle out of joint, so to speak, the foot at night cannot repair the injury received or the fatigue of the day; it gradually gets feverish and then tender, and the horse is suddenly seen to limp. The lameness disappears in a few days if the cause be removed by leveling up the foot carefully. A person will experience the same difficulty in his ankle if he wears for a few days a boot that has run over at the heel. Neither man nor horse is permanently injured unless the faulty conditions continue. How such an error, almost unnoticeable, should be so frequently committed is easily understood when it is seen how much faster the knife removes the horn while being drawn than pushed. The shoer lifts the foot and draws the knife toward himself on the bottom of what is then the right side, but which is really the left of the hoof, as his back is toward the horse's head. To pare the left (right) side of the hoof is more difficult or unhandy, and it is, as a consequence, left thick. The horse's feet are so constructed that if they must turn over, to turn out is less hurtful than to turn in; hence, the first indication of lameness from this cause is usually noticeable in the right foot, the left side of that foot being the lower, thus inclining to roll in. The lesson is, hire competent farriers and be sure to keep the horse's feet level from side to side as well as front and rear.

ATHLETICS.

Athletic Sports and Other Pastimes.

EDITED BY ARPHIPPUS.

FIXTURES FOR THE FUTURE.

March.—Acme Athletic Club, gentlemen's night, in the club rooms, Oakland, Cal.

March 8—Olympic Club, boxing and wrestling exhibition in the club rooms.

May 30—Pacific Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, second out-door championship games at the O. A. C. grounds.

SUMMARY.

The amateur athletes have already begun to train for coming events, and the new field-captain of the O. A. C., John Elliott, is preparing to organize a team that will uphold the colors of the O. A. C. against the boys from across the bay. The cricketers have had several meetings during the past couple of weeks, and the California, Burnaby, Pacific and Alameda Cricket Clubs will be strongly represented during the coming season, which will open up next month. The wheelmen, as usual, are attending to their work and the Alameda cyclers will shortly hold a race meet, which will be open to all riders. The oarsmen are beginning to show themselves more regularly at Long Bridge, and the amateur crews will shortly begin to practice for the championship race, which will probably be held next month.

THE AMATEUR ATHLETES, WHEELMEN, OARSMEN, CRICKETERS, ETC.

The bicycle school in connection with the skating rink in the Mechanics' Pavilion is doing a rushing business. Professor Knapp is turning out wheelmen by the score, and the racing ranks will be greatly swelled during the coming season.

A mixed wrestling and boxing exhibition will be given by the Olympic Club on the evening of March 8th. Several well-known boxers have already been matched for four-round contests, and a good night's sport may be looked forward to. These match contests generally prove more interesting than the ordinary championship tournaments, and the members will be spared the necessity of witnessing the usual preliminary bouts which are generally slow and monotonous.

Bob McArthur has been elected president of the P. A. A. A. U., vice Mr. Stowe resigned. Mr. McArthur is certainly the right man in the right place and there is no doubt but under his jurisdiction the association will soon begin to show signs of life again.

A handball tournament, for members only, by the Acme Athletic Club of Oakland, was commenced Wednesday evening, February 17. The contests will be continued every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evening thereafter until the championship is decided. The same club will give a "Gentlemen's Night" entertainment about the middle of next month when a very interesting programme will be arranged. The principal event of the evening will be a wrestling match between A. P. Swain and J. M. Shanley to decide the feather-weight championship of the club. Both men are clever wrestlers, and the match is looked forward to with much interest by the members.

The initiation fee of the Acme Club will be raised from $5 to $10 about May 1st. Outside of the Olympic Club the Acme is one of the most popular on the Pacific Coast, and in the course of a year or so it is expected that the Club will be in a position to build a handsome club-house of its own. The Acme members are making every effort to popularize athletic sports on the coast and they deserve the support of every legitimate amateur in California. A field-day will be held under the auspices of the club on Decoration Day.

The cricketing season will open up about March 1st. The Alameda grounds will be retained for practice and will be put into repair very soon at the expense of the Association Clubs.

The Pacific Association of the Amateur Athletic Union will probably not hold any indoor championship meeting this year. The meeting last year was a failure because those who had charge of the arrangements went about their business in a very bungling manner, and the consequence was that the undertaking bankrupted the treasury of the Association. If the officers of the P. A. A. A. U. were to exert themselves, there is no reason why an indoor meeting should not be a success. The sport-loving public should certainly not begrudge one night to the ambitious amateur athletes, and we cannot see why a properly advertised evening tournament should not attract a good-sized crowd to the Mechanics' Pavilion. The annual indoor championship meeting of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U., a sister association to the P. A. A. A. U., held in Madison Square Garden, New York City, on the evening of January 23d last, was well attended, and the arrangements were carried out to perfection. For the benefit of local athletes we append a summary of the results that they may be compared with those of the meeting held in the Mechanics' Pavilion last winter. It will be seen that in most of the events the records are ahead of ours, but still when it is taken into consideration that our army of athletes is very small compared with the combined athletes of New York, it is not to be wondered at that the Eastern records are the best. The record in the three-quarter and two-mile walks was slower than the records made last year by Coffin and Jervis.

Seventy-five yards run—First heat: H. T. Harding, M. A. C., first; M. P. Halpin, N. Y. A. C., second. Time, 8 1-5 s. Second heat: Peter Vredenburg, N. Y. A. C., first; Thomas J. Lee, N. Y. A. C., second. Time, 8 1-5 s. Final heat: Harding first, Vredenburg second, Lee third. Time, 8 1-5 s.

Three-quarter mile walk—Thomas Shearman, M. A. C., first; J. B. Keating, N. J. A. C., second, by five yards; F. A. Borchering, N. Y. A. C., third. Time, 5m. 12½s.

Six hundred yards ran—T. B. Turner, M. A. C., first; W. C. Downs, N. Y. A. C., second, five yards behind; H. E. Rillings, Jr., N. Y. A. C., third. Time, 1m. 21 1-5s.

Seventy yards hurdle race—First heat: F. C. Puffer, N. J. A. C., first; E. C. Barnes, N. J. A. C., second. Time, 9 4-5 s. Second heat: H. T. Harding, M. A. C., first; E. J. Mooney, Xavier, A. A., second; Barnes third. Time, 9 2-5s.

Throwing the 56lb. weight for height—J. S. Mitchell, N. Y. A. C., first, 15ft.; C. Coughlin, M. A. C., second, 14ft.; D. O'Sullivan, Xavier A. A., third, at 13ft.

One thousand yards run—W. C. Dohm, N. Y. A. C., first; T. R. Turner, M. A. C., second; J. S. Roddy, M. A. C., third. Time, 2m. 33¾s.

One hundred and fifty yards run—H. T. Harding, M. A. C., first; Peter Vredenburg, N. Y. A. C., second; G. R. Swain, M. A. C., third. Time, 17 1-5s.

Pole vault for distance—A. H. Green, M. A. C., first, 26ft. 4½in.; E. W. Goff, M. A. C., second, 24ft. 6in.; Robert M. A. Cuming, Acorn A. A., third, 24ft. 4in.

Putting the 20lb. shot—George R. Gray, N. Y. A. C., first, at 38ft. 7½in.; J. Barrett, Xavier A. A., second, at 33ft. 7in; E. J. Giawnini, N. Y. A. C., third at 32ft.

Three hundred yards hurdle race—E. E. Bornes, N. J. A. C., first; F. C. Puffer, N. J. A. C., second; C. T. Wiegand, N. J. A. C., third. Time, 40s.

One mile safety bicycle race—First heat: Charles M. Murphy, N. Y. A. C., first; P. J. Berlo, M. A. C., second. Time, 3m. 47 3-5s. Second heat: William F. Murphy, N. Y. A. C., first; J. W. Schoeffer, M. A. C., second. Time, 3m. 43 1-5s. Final heat: Murphy finished first, but was disqualified for fouling; Berlo second, Schoeffer third. Time, 3m. 42 1-5s.

Two mile walk—Thomas Shearman, M. A. C., first; S. Liebgold, Pastime A. C., second; Edward D. Lange, M. A. C., third. Time, 15m. 37 2-5s.

Three hundred yards run—Peter Vredenburg, N. Y. A. C., first; John H. Spellman, Varnum B. C., second; W. M. Christie, M. A. C., third. Time, 26 2-5s.

Two mile-run—A. B. George, M. A. C., first; Ernest Hjertsberg, N. J. A. C., second, by twenty yards; E. C. Carter, N. Y. A. C., third. Time, 10m. 5 4-5s.

Running hop, step and jump—E. W. Goff, M. A. C., first, 45ft. 4½in.; C. T. Wiegand, N. Y. A. C., second, 41ft. 10½in.; R. T. Lyons, N. Y. A. C., third, 41ft. 5½in.

Standing high jump—A. P. Schwaner, N. Y. A. C., first, 4ft. 11in.; H. G. Cornell, N. Y. A. C., second, 4ft. 9in.; H. L. Hallock, M. A. C., and C. T. Wiegand, N. Y. A. C., tied for third place, 4ft. 4in.

Tug of war—First pull: Won by Varuna B. C. team from the Acorn A. A. team; distance, ½in. Second pull: Won by N. Y. A. C. team from M. A. C. team; distance, 8in. Final pull: Won by N. Y. A. C. from Varuna B. C.; distance, 3½in.

Standing broad jump—A. P. Schwaner, N. Y. A. C., first, 10ft. 7¾in.; A. A. Zimmerman, N. Y. A. A., second, 10ft. 6½in.; R. K. Pritchard, M. A. C., third, 10ft. 1¼in.

Names Claimed.

I claim the name RELAMPAGO for bay yearling colt, white face, black points, foaled 1891, by Three Cheers, dam Narcola, by Norfolk, second dam Ada C., by Revenue etc. DAN MILLER, San Francisco, Cal.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Answers for this department MUST be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

F. F., Coyote, wants the breeding of Maid of Erin, by Simcoe, said to be the Bell Cook mare. Will some one please inform us on this point?

To Recent Inquirer.—Capri, foaled 1882, is by James Lick (son of Homer, by Hambletonian 10) dam Lady Budd by Belmont (Williamson's).

To F. E. S., Albany, Or.—We were right in stating that St. Florian was the largest winner in 1891 among imp. St. Blaise's sons and daughters. His Highness is by imp. The Ill-Used, and not by St. Blaise.

D. M., Grass Valley. Give record of Mr. Seales' Elmo, when and where made and number he has in 2:30 list. Answer.—Elmo made his record (2:27) at Oakland, Cal., June 5, 1883. He has six in the list to date.

To Dissenter, Pleasanton.—Alice N., dam of Applause, is also the dam of Cheerful, foaled 1885, but not the Cheerful that performed so well last season as a three-year-old. Her dam was Queen Emma, by Woodburn.

To F. H. J., Sacramento.—Sweetmeat was by General Knox, dam by Witheral Messenger (sire of Gentleman George, 2:20½). She was foaled in 1870, and sold for $8,000 by M. A. Littell, who imported Wildidle to California. She was brought to this State as a mate to Sisson Girl. Sweetmeat belonged to Charles McLaughlin, of this city, up to the time of his death.

J, D. C., Salinas.—Can you or any of your readers give me any information regarding the breeding of a horse called Peacock, formerly owned by J. C. Woods of the old Adams Express Co., and that stood around Menlo Park during the period between 1855 and 1865, said to be thoroughbred? Answer.—Peacock was by Chloroform (a thoroughbred imported from Australia), dam said to be thoroughbred.

Reader, Independence, Ia., writes us: "Belle Evans is a chestnut mare, foaled in 1882, bred by Tom Logan, Murphyboro, Ill., and sold to Dr. E. L. Denison, Marion, Ill. Belle Evans is by Hunphrey Evans, dam Nanny Harris, by Blind Tom." "Reader" is mistaken about Nancy Harris' breeding, as she is by Brigand out of Cricket, by Virginian, as will be found in volume 5, Bruce's American Stud Book, page 219, under her dam, Cricket.

L. M. F., Los Angeles, Cal.—Please inform me of the breeding of Highland Mary, bred by Murry Bros., of San Mateo, Cal., said to have a record of 2:34 or 2;35 at Sacramento, September 18, 1871, in dead heat with May Howard. Her breeding, I am informed, is by David Hill Jr. (857), also by Easton's David Hill. I see in your issue of January 2nd, David Hill Jr. has been registered No. 17,139. I am also informed this is her sire. Answer.—By David Hill 857, dam untraced.

J. S. B., Quincy, Cal.—Please state whether Don Pedro and John Nelson, or either of them, were standard and registered. Answer—John Nelson is registered No. 187 in Wallace's American Trotting Register. He was made eligible to registration by the performances of his progeny. There are two Don Pedros in Wallace one registered number 9933, the other 9179. The first-named was a Maine horse, the other was bred in Missouri. Neither was standard-bred, but their progeny made them eligible to registration.

G. U., Rohnerville, Cal.—Parties here have requested me to ask the BREEDER if there is a stallion standing in California that has three producing dams. Please answer this week. Answer.—Don Marvin, by Fallis, dam Cora (dam of Don Marvin 2:28); second dam Clarabel, (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24½), by Abdallah Star; third dam Fairy (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:29½, and the sire Sweepstakes), by Hambletonian 10. He is standing at Sacramento, and is owned by Charles I. Lowell. This is the only horse in the State with three producing dams that we know of.

C. P. C., Tacoma.—1. Who bred St. Clair 756? 2. What time did he make in the race when he trotted against and beat Whipple's filly, Harvest Queen, in the year 1867? He was entered by the name of Fred Low. 3. Is Jack Hawkins the sire of any 2:30 trotters? 4. How many mares has he sired that has produced 2:30 trotters or pacers? 5. Was Jack Hawkins foaled in California, and who bred him? Answer.—1. George Ingalls, of Sacramento. 2. 2:41¾, 2:44, 2:42¼. 3. No. 4. Three. 5. No. A. C. Keenon, of Kentucky.

J. F. Jr., Berkeley.—1. Has Beverley, owned by Senator Stanford, a record, and is he registered? 2. If so, what are they, please? 3. Should you advise the breeding of a mare by Echo, her dam by George M. Patchen Jr., to him? Answer.—He is a standard-bred horse, but up to this time we believe he has not been registered. 2. No record and no number that we are aware of. 3. We would, for he is from splendid producing families on both sides of the house. His first and second dams have produced 2:30 performers (Mount Hood, 2:23¾, and Norval, 2:17½).

L. M. W., San Luis Obispo.—Some time last fall F. Doyle was disbarred and suspended forever for foul driving at Los Angeles. The party he is working for wants to send their horse to our track to be worked and trained, only this (worked and trained) by Mr. Doyle. Some contend that according to Rule 51, Section 1, rules and regulations National Trotting Association, also Section 5, that he cannot be allowed even to work or train, others that these rules are only applicable to races or during the time of races. At all other times he (Mr. Doyle) has the right to use the track for training purposes, etc. Answer—Any person ruled off a rack track will not be allowed to work in any capacity at any time in or around the track of an association governed by National or American rules.

You ask, under Answers to Correspondents in your last number, for information about Maudie, by Robert Bonner, son of General Knox. I sent you (I think it was more than a year ago) an old hand-bill containing the pedigree and full description of this son of General Knox, in the hope that you would preserve or make a record of it for future use. The dam of Robert Bonner was there stated to be "Pet or the Drew mare" (2:32), by General McClellan; second dam by Allen's Messenger. Robert Bonner was foaled May 25, 1871, on the farm of Charles Hoxie, Fairfield, Maine. In his two-year-old form was awarded the premium at State Fair. With little training he showed a 2:40 gait. He was brought to the State of Nevada by Alfred Bowman (and Del. Stevens, his partner), and served a season in the stud, got a leg broken, then passed into the hands of Benjamin Palmer, of Sheridan Nevada, in whose hands he died not later than 1885. I shall see Mr. Palmer in a few days, and may learn something about the DAM of MAUDIE. Captain Winnie is not living, but he may have a son in Carson; if so, I will try to see him soon and will give you any information that may be obtained. Robert Bonner must have been a prepotent horse. It is doubtful if he ever served a registered standard-bred mare; yet people in this vicinity readily recognize a horse carrying one-fourth of his blood in their veins, and at first sight will remark: "There goes a Bonner." Box, four years old (with little training and without boots), by Robert Bonner, out of a thoroughbred mare, won in the trotting race for untried district horses at Carson City, Nev., October 2, 1890. If my memory serves me right the time was 2:44½, third heat. There were in the field Lemont, Anteeo Jr., Box, Prospect, Julian G. and Gibber. A gentleman named Wintershied took away from here some of these Bonner mares, and I understand they have fallen into the hands of Mr. L. U. Shippee. I would like to hear of them being bred to Hawthorne. I have heard it said General Knox was a Morgan horse. His sire, Vermont Hero, was by Sherman Black Hawk, by Justin Morgan. But I have figured out that through inbreeding he carries twenty-three-thirty-seconds, or three-fourths of the blood of Harris' Hambletonian, and I shouldn't wonder if that accounts for some of the speed of Monbars. Respectfully,

D. R. HAWKINS.
Markleeville, Cal.

Foals Reported.

Among the foals of 1891 at the establishment of Mr. R. E. Bybee, of Oregon, were the following: Br c, foaled February 6th, by St. Paul—Lina, by King Alfonso; b f, foaled February 12th, by St. Paul—Lenora, by imp. Kyrle Daly; b f, foaled February 22d, by Broadchurch—Keepsake, by Flood; ch f, foaled March 1st, by Oregon—Superba, by Flood; b c, foaled March 20th, by St. Paul—Neyella, by California (full brother to Joe Hooker); ch f, foaled March 25th, by Oregon—Oceanica, by Flood; b f, foaled April 1st, by St. Paul—Brunette, by Virgilian; b f, foaled April 17th; by St. Paul—Whynot, by George Wilkes (thoroughbred); ch c, foaled May 3d, by Oregon—Billow, by Norfolk.

Whynot's foal is thus a full sister to Misty Morn; Neyella's is a full brother to Rosebud and out of Raindrop's dam. These St. Paul foals are the last we shall have by that sterling sire. His death is a distinct loss to the resourses, not only of Oregon, but of America.

VETERINARY.

W. R.—1. Will you please give some simple remedy for rectum worms in which strong medicines liable to injure the animal are not used. Answer.—Give an injection of a solution of salt and water.

C. H. P., Oakland.—What do you mean by an occult spavin. Answer.—It is a term used to signify that condition of the hock in which no external evidence of disease can be observed, although the horse shows decided spavin lameness, the disease being between the bones of the joint.

E. D. K.—I have a mare, which without any known cause, has a bad eye. It has never been painful or watery, but in one night a film came over it which is sometimes thick, showing the eye ball beneath. Can you tell me through the columns of your paper what I can do for it, and the probable cause. It was probably caused by hitting the eye against some projection in the stall, or some strong stalk projecting from the hay. Apply a solution of nitrate of silver, three grains to the water, once a day for a week, then let us know how it looks.

C. C., San Mateo—Please give me an idea of the general treatment for lung fever in the horse. Answer.—If possible place the horse in a well ventilated, but not draughty, box stall. Blanket him and if the legs be cold hand rub and bandage them. Give him soft feed such as warm bran mashes, a little green grass when available and a carrot. Do not feed him grain or much hay. Take the chill off his drinking water. Keep him perfectly quiet and do not expose him to the cold air. Keep his chest warm, and in some cases apply liniment to it. Give some fever medicine, avoid purgatives, but see that the bowels are regular.

The Bashaw Family.

In the last issue of the Clark's Horse Review, a writer takes exceptions to an article that appeared in a preceding number of that journal and says:

In a recent issue you say "Green's Bashaw and his family produced a lot of speed in the ordinary acceptation of the term—that is, a large percentage of the Bashaw's could show a 2:40 gait, but when it came to putting the lever at a little higher notch and asking them to step to a 2:20 mark in order to get the money, they, like the Lamberts in the East, would hardly fill the bill, as Green's Bashaw only got one 2:20 or better trotter out of seventeen in the 2:30 list."

This article, while it may be literally true, is very misleading and gives an entirely erroneous opinion of Green's Bashaw. From it one would infer that Bashaw 50 was a very ordinary horse. Is that true? He was foaled in 1855, just six years after Hambletonian 10 was born, his grandam being the dam of that greatest of all sires. So in drawing comparisons he should be matched against sires of his own day and not with those of this era in trotting history, where the favored horse is mated with the best matrons obtainable and who bring to his embrace many strains of the most prepotent blood. I have prepared a table of all stallions that were foaled anywhere near the same time as Green's Bashaw. This list is not selected, but contains all sires of note of that day. With this severe test it will be seen that Green's Bashaw ranks with Hambletonian 10, Happy Medium, Belmont and Mambrino Patchen.

Hambletonian 10	1849	41	2:25 9-10
Volunteer	1854	31	2:24 1-10
George Wilkes	1856	74	2:24 1-12
Blue Bull	1856	65	2:24 1-5
Mambrino Chief, Jr.	1861	5	2:25 2-5
Mambrino Patchen	1862	18	2:26 2-5
Happy Medium	1863	71	2:26 1-4
Woodford Mambrino	1863	12	2:25 1-4
Almont	1864	38	2:24 3-4
Belmont	1864	38	2:25 3-5
Green's Bashaw	1865	17	2:25 3-5

All records credited to Green's Bashaw were made over poor Western half-mile tracks, while almost all the other records given in this table were made over good Eastern or Southern mile tracks, equal to two or three seconds, at least, in favor of Green's Bashaw trotters. Every one of the 2:30 performers of Green's Bashaw are trotters, and their marks were made in contested races. Every one of these horses were campaigners. Not only were Kirkwood, 2:24, and Bashaw Jr., 2:24¾, campaigners, ready and anxious to meet anything on the turf, but Bashaw Jr.'s mark of 2:24¾, made over an Iowa half-mile track, was the stallion record at the time it was made. Bashaw Jr. has a record of 2:21, made at Clinton, Ia., which Mr. Wallace, in his infinite judgment, did not see fit to accept. Would George Wilkes, with his 2:22 over the best mile track in the East, have had much of a walk-away with Bashaw's 2:21, made over Clinton's half-mile course?

When the class of mares out of which Bashaw 50 got his performers and producers is considered, he rises toward the phenomenal. Fred Douglas, 2:20¼, was out of a heavy, coarse-grained mare that would have graced a scavenger's cart much better than a sulky. The dam of Josephus, 2:19¾, was without that important adjunct, a pedigree. The dam of Rose of Washington, 2:21¾, was s. t. b. by a son of Bush Messenger, whatever good that may have done her. The dam of Governor, 2:24, was an s. t. b. Wagner's Bashaw, 2:25¾, had a dam by Champion (pacer), but as Champion was never heard from before, and has not accomplished anything in the speed line since, it may safely be presumed that his connection with Wagner's Bashaw's mark was not appreciable. Green Charley, Butler's Bashaw, Wild Oats and Tom Kirkwood are all from "untraced" dams. Those of Green's Bashaw trotters who have any breeding on their dam's side have at most a single cross of unfashionable and non-producing blood.

Bashaw 50 has twenty-five producing daughters, among them Bashaw Belle, dam of Strong Boy, 2:12, None Better, trial 2:24, and Carrie, 2:29¾, dam of Manager (3), 2:11½; Lady Gregory, dam of Joe Young, 2:19½; Flaxey, dam of Trampoline, 2:23, the first trotter to go quarters in 30 seconds.

The fifteen sons of Green's Bashaw who have sired 2:30 speed are almost utterly without breeding on their dam's side, and they, in turn, bred to cold-blooded mares, have still produced an amount of speed that would be considered creditable to well-bred stallions.

I have tried to show that Green's Bashaw was, considering his day and opportunity, among the great sires, and that his blood is breeding on through his sons and daughter. If I have succeeded I am glad; if not, I hope some older pen will undertake the task, as Green's Bashaw deserves to rank among the very best of his day and generation. C. E. B.

CHICAGO, ILL., January 30, 1892.

GENERAL J. F. ROBINSON, for twenty years President of the Kentucky Association, died at his home in Lexington, Ky., on the 5th inst., aged sixty. He was widely known wherever the thoroughbred was raced in America, and was an authority on turf law.

Director Jr. is Here.

California is now looked upon by on our Eastern friends as a great nursery for trotters and the training school of the very fastest. The great demand that has been made upon our breeding farms for the premier stallions has, to a great extent, practically left us with only their sons to carry on the good work, excepting, perhaps,in a few instances. The bright ge ms that shed their beams on the equine world from their homes on the Pacific Coast are now set amid clusters of other illustrious ones throughout the union, improving their race by transmitting their excellent qualities and enriching their owners by their valuable services; Nutwood we could almost claim as ours, Woodnut, Antevolo, Anteeo, Alfred G., Fallis, James Madison, Erector, Direct, Director, Redwood, Santa Claus, Reliance, Incas, Judge Salisbury, Sultan, Alcazar, Norval, Sphinx and at least a score of others are among the number. Stamboul, Guy Wilkes, Sidney and other sires have been placed beyond the limits of an average breeder's purse, but their sons are now standing for public service and will perpetuate the work their illustrious ancestors founded.

Perhaps the loss of no stallion was ever more keenly felt than that of the tried stallion and game campaigner, Director, 2:17, for he left but few sons in his stead to uphold his good name, and it is with pleasure and pride we can point to one that is in every way a fitting representative of this illustrious sire, and that is the young horse called Director Jr., that was recently brought from Oregon (where he has been making a name for himself as a sire).

Director Jr. is bred almost exactly like Direct, 2:06, the fastest harness horse in the world. He was sired by Director, 2:17, out of an Echo mare, so was Direct; his second dam was a thoroughbred, so was Direct's. Director has become famous as the sire of Direct, 2:06, Margaret S., 2:12½, Evangeline, 2:19, Guide, 2:16¼, Emma, 2:24¼, and seven others in the 2:30 list. Brainey, Director Jr.'s dam, was one of the speediest trotting mares that was ever driven on the road; she is the dam of Corrector, another very promising son of Director that has trotted quarters in thirty-three seconds. Brainey was by Echo, sire of Belle Echo, 2:20, Senator, 2:21½, Victor, 2:22, Gibraltar, 2:22 and Echora (dam of Direct, 2:06), 2:23¼, and nine other 2:30 performers; her dam was Lady Dudley, a thoroughbred mare brought to this State by Sprague & Akers, from Lawrence, Kansas, in 1876, and she was by Tom Dudley, out of a daughter of Bertrand Jr.; his second dam was a Pacolet Mare. Tom Dudley was hy Blacknose (sire of Medoc), his dam was Katie Clarkson by Moore's Whipster; second dam by Orphan Boy, third dam Kate Snyder hy Whip, etc. Echo was by Hambletonian 10, out of Fanny Felter, by Magnolia 64; second dam a daughter of Hector; Magnolia was by Seely's American Star 14, out of Jennie Lind by Bay Richmond; second dam by Post Boy, by Duroc.

Director was by Dictator (sire of Jay-Eye-See, 2:10; Director, 2:17; Phallas, 2:13¾; Code, 2:22½, and twenty-four others in the list), out of that famous broodmare, Dolly (dam of Onward, 2:25½, and Thorndale, 2:24½), by Mambrino Chief 11; second dam Fanny, by Ben Franklin, etc.

Dictator is rightfully considered one of the greatest sons of Hambletonian, his dam being Clara (dam of Dexter, 2:17¼, Alma, 2:29¾, Asteroid, 2:29½) by Seeley's American Star, 14; second dam, the McKinstry mare, dam of Shark, a horse that got a record of 2:27.

To the student of stout blood lines the above pedigree ought to be satistactory; it is doubtful if a stronger-bred stallion from approved ancestors of speed is now standing than Director. The completeness of his paternal line does not overshadow the gameness of his maternal crosses. Is it any wonder that Direct is such a game race horse? Can there be any doubts existing as to Director Jr.'s right to be also a game race horse? Has not such breeding called forth more encomiums from turf writers and received more endorsements from thoughtful breeders than any that has been known for years?

Director Jr.'s get is unsurpassed by that of any horse of his age in Oregon. They are handsome and blood-like and all have solid colors; they are pure-gaited, and every fortunate owner of them considers that they are more valuable now than ever, since so few of Director's sons are left on this Coast to perpetuate the breed. A few of his colts have been sold, one of them, a yearling, for $2,000; another for $1,500; and another for $1,200. These are all that are known to be sold. Our readers, therefore, can have an idea of how Director Jr's. get is appreciated.

Directwood, one of his sons, won all of his races in Oregon and Washington last fall, and is considered one of the coming horses of the Northwest. There is a three-year-old pacer by Director Jr. at Lodi, in this State, that can show a 2:20 clip easily.

Director Jr. is considered by all horsemen to be the handsomest son of Director. At the State Fair in Oregon he received the diploma offered for the best stallion and five of his family. His brother, Corrector, is considered by Mr. Salisbury and George Starr to be one of the most promising trotters at Pleasanton; he can trot halves in 1:10, and is of the proper size, gait and temperament to make a racehorse.

The desire that Mr. McDonald has in placing this horse for public service at the low figure he has set is most commendable, for Director Jr. is the best-bred son of Director now in Marin County, or, in fact, any place north of the bay, that is standing for public service. Breeders and owners of good mares should not let this golden opportunity pass to possess this game racehorse blood which blends so kindly with every other, and enriches all that it touches.

Director Jr. has been standing ever since his advent in Oregon at $100 for the season, but in order that the public may have an opportunity of breeding to a horse that is unexcelled in every particular his price of service has been placed at $50, with the usual return privilege. His advertisement is in another column, and a cordial invitation is extended to all horsemen to come and see this royally-bred and perfect model of a trotting horse. He has never been worked for speed, but this fall it is the intention to give him a record.*

P. C. T. H. B. ASSOCIATION.

What was Accomplished at the last Director's Meeting—The New Track at Baden Now Under Consideration.

The Director's meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association was held last Monday afternoon at one o'clock in their rooms 313 Bush street. Joseph Cairn Simpson presided and Directors Frank H. Burke, J. F. Boyd, A. T. Hatch, W. Corbitt, J. H. White and Gilbert Tompkins were present.

Director Giulio Valensin tendered his resignation, giving as a reason therefore his intended lengthy absence in the East, which would prevent his looking after his official duties. The resignation was accepted and a vote of thanks tendered Mr. Valensin for his past services to the association. Jesse Potter of this city was unanimously elected in his stead.

The whole of the programme of the fall meeting recently put forward was then adopted with the exception of the Stallion Produce Stakes for two and three-year-olds.

The alterations made can be seen by reference to the advertisement in our columns.

The fall meeting will take place during the second and third weeks in October, immediately after the close of the Central circuit.

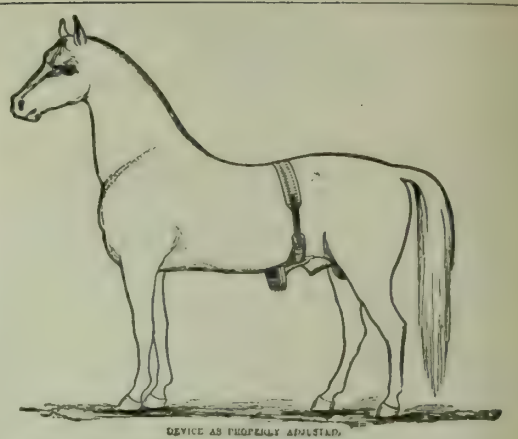
The summer meeting will commence Saturday, August 5. The programme will be announced in March, and entries will close on May 2.

Peter H. Iler then addressed the meeting on the proposed new race-track to be built at Baden. He explained how the course could be reached in thirty minutes by boats from the ferries, and in fifteen minutes by cars from Second and Townsend streets. He offered the society the use of the new track when completed and built to its own satisfaction, for five years at a rental of six per cent on a basis valuation of $1000 an acre, with an option of purchase at that price at any time during the term and trees will be planted, water piped, driveways built, etc., amounting in the aggregate to some $50,000.

The lease could be renewed for a second term of five years on a rental basis of $2,000 an acre under the same conditions. The society could have anywhere from 80 to 125 acres reserved for the race-course, and if an agreement should be arrived at work would be commenced thereon right away.

Several of the Directors and the President expressed themselves in favor of the proposal as being the most feasible ever offered for the building of a race-track near this city. A deputation, consisting of Directors Burke, Boyd and Tompkins, were appointed to attend the meeting of the Blood-Horse Directors and endeavor to secure their co-operation in accepting the scheme and report at the next meeting. The gathering then adjourned sine die.

MALARIA.
HOW TO KEEP IT OFF.



TAKE SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

A SIMPLE VEGETABLE REMEDY,
Yet powerful in its action to build up and restore the wasted energies and give tone and vigor to all its powers.

"I was attacked with Malarial Fever in the Summers of both 1882 and '83, and became very much reduced in flesh, and my friends thought I would die. I was induced to try Simmons Liver Regulator, and commenced improving at once. Before taking three bottles of Regulator I was entirely well of Malarial poison, and have not had an attack of it since. . . My son had a severe attack of Chills, and I gave him a few doses of Regulator, which completely cured him."—JOHN T. CHAPPELL, Poplar Mount, Va.

HE'S A FOAL-GETTER, and a sure one. More than that, he gets GOOD foals—colts that are strong and healthy, and likely to make a name for themselves. He's a winner, whether it's for work, speed or stud. He hasn't been broken down and weakened by that universal habit of self-abuse.

Now, to have a stallion like that, begin right. Put a Perfection Stallion Guard on him as a colt. Then he won't know what the habit means. But, if it's too late for that, do the next best thing. Stop it. The "Perfection" is a certainty. It's simple, effective, and humane. No metal and no torture.

DESCRIPTION—ROSEMEATH is a handsome bay, with black points, foaled 1889, stands 15.2 hands. He is a splendid type of a highly-finished horse; in conformation, style, gait and disposition he is faultless. Rosemeath was bred by L. J. Rose, of Los Angeles.

KHARTOUM.

KHARTOUM was sired by Soudan 5103, record, 2:27½, dam Black Bettie (dam of Mamie Comet, 2:23¼, dam of Macleay, 2:22 as a two-year-old), by Sportsman; second dam by St. Clair. Soudan was sired by Sultan, 2:24, dam Lady Babcock (dam of Morrow's Elector, 2:21½), by Hambletonian 725; second dam by a son of the Eaton Horse. Sportsman was by Easton's David Hill. DESCRIPTION—KHARTOUM is a handsome coal-black stallion, foaled 1889, 15.3 hands high, and is very symmetrically built, well muscled, heavy-boned, perfectly gaited and will make a low record this fall. Khartoum is considered one of the most promising young trotters in the State.

Both of these young stallions will make the season of 1892, ending July 15th, at $50, with usual return privileges, at the Moorland Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal. For further particulars address

D. J. MURPHY, Moorland Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal.

No. 4,541. WILKESDALE Rec'rd 2:29.

By ALCANTARA, 2:23, Sire of
MISS ALICE, 2:17¼, AUTOGRAPH 2:18½, NIGHTINGALE, 2:13¾, LIGHTNING, 2:19¼, and forty-three others in 2:30 list, and sire of the dams of PRINCE REGENT, five years, 2:16½, and ÆGON, three years, 2:18¼.

Dam ALMA MATER, Dam of
ALCANTARA, 2:23; ALCYONE, 2:27; ALMATER, 2:29¼; ALICIA, 2:30; ARBITER, 2:22½; ALMETA, 2 32¾; ALLINE, five years old (trial,) 2:25.

Wilkesdale's dam THORNDALE MAID, 2:30, Dam of
MISS ALICE, 2:17¼, THORNTON, 2:26¼, WILKESDALE, 2:29.

Second dam BRIDESMAID, Dam of
THORNDALE MAID, 2:30, and TRIXIE, (trial), 2:25½.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of
GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-five others in 2:30 list.

By MAMBRINO PATCHEN, Sire of
Eighteen in 2:30 list, and the dams of GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HOURI, 2:17, ASTRAL, 2:18, BARON WILKES, 2:18, and sixty others in 2:30 or better.

By THORNDALE, 2:22¼, Sire of
EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, DAISYDALE, 2:19¾, and five others in 2:30 list, by ALEXANDER'S ABDALLAH, sire of GOLDSMITH MAID, 2:14, ALMONT, etc., out of DOLLY, dam of DIRECTOR, 2:17, ONWARD, 2:25¼. THORNDALE, 2:24¼, and CZARINA, 2:21, by MAMBRINO CHIEF.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince, anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five praducing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12¼, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼ (who was shown trials the past season in 2:14); Thornton, 2:26¼, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:22¼, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12½, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, (the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams, Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, soft and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29½. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

For further particulars, or complete circulars, address

LANCELOT.

The Only Son of ELECTIONEER Standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION—LANCELOT is a seal-brown stallion, 15.1 hands high, foaled April 15, 1881. Bred by C. C. Bemis, San Francisco. He is a horse of fine conformation. He has a beautiful head and neck, fine loins, well-shaped body, deep through the heart, sloping shoulders, fine arms, large stifles and the very best of feet and legs. In action he is pure-gaited. As a three-year-old he trotted quarters in 32 seconds, but was injured and placed in the stud. His colts are all blood-like, large and fast trotters. Several of them are eligible and will enter the 2:30 list this Fall. Lancelot is one of the surest of foal-getters.

PEDIGREE—LANCELOT was sired by the immortal Electioneer (sire of 100 in the list), dam Lizzie Harris by Comus, second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus, the sire of Lizzie Harris, was a full brother to Iowa Chief 528 (sire of Corisande 2:21½, and others). His sire was Bashaw 50, sire of 17 in the 2:30 list, he by Vernol's Black Hawk, dam Belle by Webber's Tom Thumb; second dam Chas. Kent mare, the dam of Hambletonian 10. Vernol's Black Hawk by Long Island Black Hawk, dam by Webber's Kentucky Whip, son of Blackburn's Whip. Long Island Black Hawk, by Andrew Jackson, dam Sallie Miller by Tippo Saib; Andrew Jackson by Young Bashaw, son of Grand Bashaw. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportsmistress; she was out of Cub by Medoc; second dam Ann Merry by Sumpter; third dam Grecian Princess by Blackburn's Whip, and so on to the 15th dam.

SALADIN.

The Only Son of NUTWOOD Standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE—Chestnut stallion, 16.1 hands high, foaled April 9th, 1880. By Nutwood 600, the greatest living sire, bred by C. C. Bemis, San Francisco, First dam, Lady Utley Jr. by Speculation, son of Rydsyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley, grandam of Western Girl, record 2:27½. Saladin has now a number of yearling and two-year-old colts, all showing great uniformity in size, style and color. All of them are fast trotters, and several will trot in 2:30 this year. Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, by Belmont 64, dam Miss Russell (dam of Maud S., 2:08¾), by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell, by Boston. Nutwood is the sire of 77 in the 2:30 list. Belmont is the sire of 32 trotters in the 2:30 list and of 29 sires of 120 trotters. Lady Utley Jr. is by Speculation, dam Lady Utley, 2:38½, grandam of Western Girl, 2:27½. Speculation (sire of Crown Point, 2:24, Gracie S., 2:22, Oakland Maid, 2:22, and the dams of Alfred G., 2:19¾, and Waterford, 2:27), by Hambletonian 10, dam Martha Washington (dam of Hambletonian 725,), by Burr's Washington; he by Burr's Napoleon, by Young Mambrino, dam Willis mare, by Mambrino. TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON, for service of each of these stallions. No other opportunity is offered breeders to obtain these blood lines at such prices. Excellent care taken of mares in any manner that owners may desire, at reasonable rates. Usual return privilege. Call on or address C. C. BEMIS, Owner, at Private Stable, First Avenue, between Turk and Eddy Streets, where colts and fillies by these stallions can also be seen.

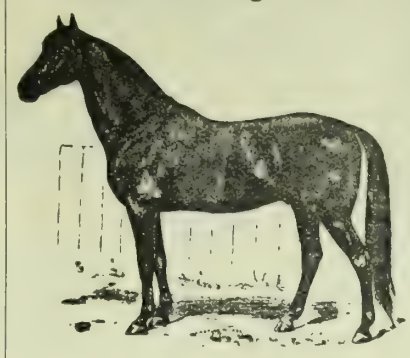
MARKS L.

Will make the Season of 1892, ending July 1st,

AT THE BAY DISTRICT TRACK.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

MARKS L. was foaled 1888; he is a handsome bay in color; stands 16.2 hands; weighs 1,150. He is a remarkably well-muscled, heavy-boned, clean-limbed horse, and a more perfect-formed or a more promising one is not standing for public service. In action he is a perfect line trotter, and although never having been handled for speed, there is little doubt but that he will trot close to 2:20 this fall.



MARKS L. was sired by Antevolo, 2:19½, out of Maggie L., by Grand Duke Alexis; second dam Vashti, by Chieftain 721; third dam by Nena Sahib (thoroughbred). Antevolo, by Electioneer 125. Grand Duke Alexis was by Stephen A. Douglas 422, out of Black Bessie, by Blucher. Stephen A. Douglas was by Hambletonian 10, out of Kate, by Balsora 1024; second dam Neva, by Vincente Nolte, etc. Chieftain 721 was by Hiatoga, out of a daughter of Trimble's Eclipse. Terms, $50 for the season. For further particulars, address

DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently-formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better-bred stallion stands for public service in California today. He is only six years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON,

with the usual return privilege. Excellent care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

ABDOL

17,716.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

Abdol was foaled in 1883, bred by John Watson, Oakland, and is one of the finest sons of the Grand Moor He is a handsome black in color, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a horse of splendid proportions, exquisite style and perfect trotting action. He is remarkably level-headed, intelligent and of kind disposition, and possesses the qualities of speed and gameness to a remarkable degree. His record is no mark of his speed. When it was made it was the intention to keep him in the 2:30 class. He has shown in his work last quarters in 34 seconds—a 2:16 gait—and can get away equally fast.

ABDOL, 17,716, Record 2.28.

NUTWOOD WIKES is a handsome chestnut in color, stands 15½ hands high, is level-headed, kind and intelligent.

RAPID TRANSIT,

Limited to Fifteen approved outside mares at $75 for the season.

RAPID TRANSIT is a fine-looking bay horse, stands 15½ hands high. He is by DIRECTOR 1989, 2:17; dam Lida W., record 2:18¼, dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½ at 3 years. (See above tabulated pedigree.) He is a horse of splendid individuality and excellent blood lines.

LONG BRANCH.

Limited to Fifteen outside mares at $50 for the season.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¼ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, sire of seven with records from 2:17¾ to 2:30), by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Zola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25¾ (sire of seven with records from 2:10 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty outside mares at $50 for the season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19, Annie C., 2:25, Albert H., 2:27¾, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¾ (sire of 77 with records from 2:11½ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11½ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track); dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30; the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23½, made in 1860; the fastest and gamest representative of the Clay family). This pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great broodmares. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains—the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race-horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and nineteen others from 2:18¼ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or ten per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

YOUNG STOCK FOR SALE.

Visitors welcome any day.

Delwin, 14,681, record 2:26 1-2, will, if he has no setbacks, pace in 2:15 or better, and beat 2:30 trotting over the fast Stockton kite track this fall. Delwin is one of the handsomest grandsons of the great Moor; in color, he is a dark dapple bay, sound as a dollar, outside of his broken hind leg, and the best of feet and legs; 15.1½ hands high, and weighs 1,000 pounds; he is one of the finest-formed horses for great speed in the land; has the same level head and intelligence that his half-brother, Guide, 2:16¼, has; in color and form he resembles Harry Clay 45 (sire of the dam of Electioneer and George Wilkes, 2:22), more than any horse that we ever saw. Delwin has the same blood lines as the handsome grandson of The Moor, Stamboul, 2:11; he has two crosses of American Star 14, also of Clay, one of Hambletonian 10, sire of the dam of Stamboul, 2:11; one to Mambrino Chief, sire of the dam of Director, 2:17, and two of the great Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Nutwood, 2:18¾, combining altogether the same blood lines that lay in the grandest stallions, living or dead—Arion, 2:10¾, Stamboul, 2:11; also the first yearling to beat 2:30, and who trotted the fastest last quarter in that mile than was ever trotted by any yearling, 34 seconds—Freedom, 2:29¾.

Del Sur, 2:24, sire of Don Tomas, 2:20, and Cousin Joe, 2:20¼, being a full brother to the dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, sire of Freedom, 2:29¾, and two others better than 2:28. Delwin's colts all show the trot out of any kind of mares.

Terms, $40, with usual return privilege.

Good water and pasturage at $5 per month, but will not be responsible for accidents or escapes. Mares can be shipped to the farm and home of Delwin, the Meese Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County, Cal., per S. P R. R., via Martinez. For further particulars, address,

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

By LEAR'S SIR WILLIAM, Son of
HOWARD'S SIR CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES (who died when but three years of age) was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot 2:27½, (sire of Hannis, 2:17½, and others), out of Juliett, by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2½ hands, and weighs 1,080 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well-built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well-shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:40 without boots of any kind. His first colt showed trials last fall in 2:20 in his 3-year-old form, and all of his 2-year-olds that have been handled any show lots of speed and a nice way of going. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

TERMS, $75 WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGE.

I have a good pasture to turn mares in at $5 each per month. The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

VOTER.

ELECT was sired by ELECTIONEER, dam INEZ, by NORDALE; second dam LIZZIE, by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT; third dam "THE THRIFT MARE," a thoroughbred brought from Kentucky.

NORDALE, by NORFOLK, dam BLUE DALE, by OWEN DALE; NORFOLK, by LEXINGTON, dam NOVICE, by IMP. GLENCOE; OWEN DALE by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT, dam MARIA DOWNING, by AMERICAN ECLIPSE. YOUNG TELESCOPE by IMP. TELESCOPE, dam by IMP. MESSENGER.

VOTER is a dark bay, solid color, with black points; foaled 1886; 15 hands 3 inches high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a horse of magnificent form, and is in every way a superior individual. In him is combined the HAMBLETONIAN, CLAY, MORGAN and thoroughbred blood. This horse was in Charles Marvin's care for about ten days during the record meeting at Stockton last fall the only time he was ever on a track and the first time he was speeded he showed Marvin an eighth of a mile in 19½ seconds. He was taken sick, and notwithstanding he showed such remarkable speed, had to be taken home.

VOTER will make the season from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

ANDY R.

(FULL BROTHER TO STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23.)

Sired by CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of STEVE WHIPPLE, four-year-old race record, 2:23, and KATE AGNEW, 2:28½), dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23, and VOTER), by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of 15 trotters in 2:30; of 9 sires of 12 2:30 trotters, and of 12 dams of 16 trotters in the list.)

CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN 10,178, by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of nine sires), dam FLORA (dam of three sires of 2:30 speed) by CHIEFTAIN 721; second dam a thoroughbred mare.

ANDY R. is a bright bay, with small star; foaled 1885; 15 hands 2½ inches high, and weighs 1,025 pounds. He is a beauty, and a perfect horse in every way. Will make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $40 FOR THE SEASON, FEBRUARY 1 TO JUNE 1.

PRINDEX.

PRINDEX is a dark brown horse, white hind feet; foaled 1888; 16 hands high, and weighs 1,400 pounds. He is a good-sized, fine-styled and well-gaited colt, and will certainly make a trotter and sire of speed. He will also make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st.

AT $40 FOR THE SEASON.

The reader will perceive that the four stallions mentioned herein are all from the same mare. Four individually better or nicer-looking stallions can not be found on any stock farm in California. Horsemen are especially invited to inspect the horses, and I wish to call special attention to their feet and legs. better were never put under a horse. Their dam, TWIST, at sixteen years old, is as sound as the day she was foaled. Their second, third and fourth dams were used for all purposes of farm and road work, and all lived to be over thirty years old—their limbs, at the time of death, being as free of blemishes or of any marks of unsoundness as a suckling colt's.

The disposition of these stallions are of the very best, and their produce are all good size, of fine conformation, have perfect feet and legs, and all show speed to a remarkable degree.

I do not favor extremely high service fees, and the prices on these stallions for this year are placed comparatively very low; that of STEVE WHIPPLE in particular being much less than of any other stallion of equal value or merit in this State.

Mares sent to my address, care of WEBER STABLES, STOCKTON, CAL., will be taken to my ranch at BELLOTA free of charge, provided two or three days' notice be given me by letter.

Pasturage on mares to be bred to VOTER, ANDY R., or PRINDEX free for two months, after that $3 per month. All bills payable at time of service or before the mares are removed.

Usual return privileges, provided mare or horse does not change hands, or money refunded at my option. For further particulars, address

C. E. NEEDHAM, Bellota, San Joaquin Co., Cal.

THE GUY WILKES STALLION

HOCK WILKES.

(Sire of Regal Wilkes, 2:17¾; Lillian Wilkes, 2:17¾; Sable Wilkes, 2:18; Vida Wilkes, 2:18¾; Hazel Wilkes, 2:20; Una Wilkes, 2:19¼; Alianna, 2:18; Rupee, 2:14¾, etc.) (Son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian and sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½; Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼; Wilson, 2:16¼; Richardson J. R., 2:16¾; Baron Wilkes, 2:18, and 71 others in 2:30 or better.)

Dam LADY BUNKER ..... By MAMBRINO PATCHEN. (Son of Mambrino Chief and sire of 18 in 2:30 list, and of the dams of Houri, 2:17; Astral 2:18; Baron Wilkes, 2:18, and 60 others in 2:30 list.)

HOCK WILKES' First Dam, EDA ..... By HOCK-HOCKING.
(Thoroughbred, sister to St. David.) (Having one cross each of Boston, imp. Trustee, imp, Glencoe, eight crosses of imp. Diomed, and being the sire of Beaconsfield, St. David, Batchelder, Arthur H. and Four Aces.)

Second Dam, EVA COOMBS ..... By BILLY CHEATHAM.
(Dam of St. David, Wildidler, Maid of the Mist, and second dam of Beaconsfield, Batchelder, Arthur H. and Four Aces.) (Having one cross of Boston, five of imp. Messenger, seven of imp. Dioned, and two of American Eclipse.)

Third Dam, RUBY, by Winnebago, son of imp. Glencoe and imp. Delight.

Fourth Dam, ELLEN JOURDAN, by Blacknose, by Medoc, son of Duroc by imp. Diomed, and Miller's Damsel, by imp. Messenger.

Fifth Dam, EMILY JOURDAN, by imp. Jourdan.

Sixth Dam, ELLEN TREE, by Henry, son of Sir Archy by imp. Diomed and of a daughter of imp. Diomed.

Seventh dam, Betsy Ransome by Virginian, son of Sir Archy by imp. Diomed; Eighth dam, Favorite, by imp. Bellair; Ninth dam, Fairy by imp. Bedford; Tenth dam, by imp. Pantaloon; Eleventh dam, by imp. Master Stephen; Twelfth dam, by imp. Juniper; Thirteenth dam, imp. Duchess, by Cullen Arabian, etc.

DESCRIPTION. HOCK WILKES, foaled 1888, is a handsome bay with black points, 15½ hands high, of speedy conformation, good bone and powerful muscular development. He is pure in trotting action, very speedy, and, but for difficulty with one fore pastern, he would now have a low record. He is one of the handsomest sons of Guy Wilkes, with the Wilkes substance and trotting instinct and the thoroughbred quality and type of conformation. The sire of Hock Wilkes, Guy Wilkes, stands at a service fee of $1,000, and he is conceded to be the best representative of the great Wilkes and Hambletonian family. The dam of Hock Wilkes is a large mare, 16¾ hands, of powerful build, a daughter of Hock-Hocking, who produced the speedy and long-distance performers St. David, Beaconsfield, Batchelder, Arthur H., Four Aces, etc., and whose dam was the third dam of Anteeo, 2:16¾, Antevolo, 2:19½, and Coral, 2:25.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON of 1892, from February 1st to July 1st, with return privilege for the season of 1893 on any mare not proving with foal, provided either the mare or stallion does not change ownership. The season of 1892 will be made at 2536 Market Street, San Francisco.

Address JOS. MICHEL, 2536 Market Street.

Woodnut B.

Will Make the Season of 1892 at my Ranch Four Miles south of Gridley, Butte County, Cal.,

..... AT $50 FOR THE SEASON. .....

PEDIGREE.

Woodnut B.

- WOODNUT, 2:16½ (In a race.) — Full brother to Manette (dam of Arion, 2 y o, 2:10¾), and Manon, 2:21.
  - NUTWOOD, 2:18¾. Sire 77 in the 2:30 list.
  - ADDIE. By Hasbrouck's Hambletonian.

Third dam by Langford, thoroughbred, the great four-miler.

DESCRIPTION.

WOODNUT B., 3 years old, is a handsome bright bay stallion with black points; no white; stands 16 hands 1 inch; weighs 1100 pounds. He is a remarkably symmetrical and well-finished horse, stylish and pure gaited. He has had but little training and shows great speed. He is closely related to the great Arion; his sire Woodnut, 2:16¾, being a wonderful race horse, and his dam from a leading producing family. With his splendid blood lines and individuality he is the peer of any young stallion standing for service in the State.

Excellent pasturage and the best of care taken of mares in any manner owners may desire, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

Wilkes-Electioneer Stallion.

COMBINED BLOOD
— Of the Greatest Son of
GEO. WILKES
— And the Greatest Son of
ELECTIONEER,

ANTEEO WILKES.

Black horse, foaled May, 1889; sired by GUY WILKES, race-record fourth heat, 2:15¼.

First dam Amy Fay, by ANTEEO, race record 2:16¼, sire of Myrtle, three-year-old record 2:19½, Alfred G., four-year-old record 2:19½, James Madison, record 2:17¾; second dam by Alexander, record 2:31½, son of George M. Patchen Jr., record 2:27, and grandsire of Yolo Maid 2:12; third dam by Naubuc, son of Toronto Chief, record 2:21¼, and Gypsy Queen, ten-mile record 28:39, and full brother to the famous trotter, Thomas Jefferson, record 2:24; fourth dam Sacramento Belle, ten-mile record 31.07, one-mile record 2:38.

Anteeo Wilkes as an individual is worthy of his great blood lines; he is 15:3 hands high and of perfect form. Although handled but little and never driven once by a professional driver he has trotted a mile in 2:52 quarters in forty seconds without shoes, as a two-year-old, with the marked purity of gait, for which the Guy Wilkes trotters are noted. At close of season will be trained for a great record.

SERVICE FEE $100.

Limited to twelve approved mares, season to end June 15th. Box stalls and corrals for mares. Address,
OSCAR MANSFELDT,
1163 Alice street, Oakland, or
723 Market street, San Francisco.

DIRECTOR JR.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1892 AT THE ASYLUM RANCH, SAN RAFAEL.

DESCRIPTION.

DIRECTOR JR. is a grandly-formed stallion, a handsome black in color; stands 15.3 hands; weighs 1,175 pounds. In appearance and disposition he is more like Director than any other son of that famous sire. He has never been trained for speed, but can easily show a 2:20 gait on the road, and will surely get a mark much below that this fall, as he will be put in training for this season's campaign. Up to the present time he has been in the stud in Oregon and never given an oppor tunity to show his speed. His colts, like himself, are all grand lookers, show great trotting action, intelligence and gameness. A three-year-old now in training has shown a mile in 2:21, and Directwood, a two-year-old son, won every race in which he was entered last year, and could have gone in the thirty list had his owner so desired. At the Oregon State Fair last year Director Jr. and five of his get were awarded first premiums.

PEDIGREE.

It will be seen that Director Jr. is bred on blood lines almost identically the same as Direct, 2:06, the Greatest Harness Horse in the World.

ARTHUR WILKES is a handsome dark bay with black points; 15.3 hands high and weighs 1100 pounds. In conformation he is perfect; in disposition he is kind and gentle. His trotting action is unsurpassed, and as soon as his stud season is over he will be handled for speed. He will trot close to 2:20 this year. He is a sure foal getter. His colts are all bays and browns. All of his progeny resemble him in every particular. His oldest colt is Wayland W., and is considered the fastest colt in Humboldt.

TERMS $100 FOR THE SEASON, with usual return privilege. The best of care taken of mares but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Pasturage $3 per month.

The Fastest Son of Nutwood, 2:18 3-4, now in California.

Will make the SEASON of 1892 at the stable of T. W. BARSTOW, San Jose, Cal.

TERMS, $75 FOR THE SEASON,

With the usual return privilege, providing the stallion or mare does not change ownership.

DESCRIPTION—Coal black horse, small star; stands 15¾ hands high; weighs 1,100 pounds; well-formed and of good disposition. This horse got a record of 2:17¾ with only four weeks' work; he can show a half-mile in 1:06½ and one-eighth in 16 seconds.

PEDIGREE—Got by Nutwood 600, first dam Belle, by Jack Roberts; second dam Young Nance, by Shakespeare, thoroughbred. Jack Roberts by Eclair, and he by old pacing Pilot; the dam of Jack Roberts was by Copperbottom. CYRUS R. has two crosses of the great Pilot blood, once through Nutwood and again through Belle, his dam.

SPECIAL NOTICE—No service fee if this horse does not trot in 2:12 or better in 1892, barring accidents.

ANTEROS NUTWOOD.

PEDIGREE—By Anteros 6020, full brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, Antevolo, 2:19½, by Electioneer, the greates sire the world has ever known. First dam Newark Belle, by Nutwood, 2:18¾, the greatest living sire; second dam Tillie, 2:40, by San Bruno, he by David Hill, and he by Vermont Black Hawk; third dam by Young Grey Eagle.

DESCRIPTION ANTEROS NUTWOOD is a handsome bay horse with black points, no white; stands sixteen hands one inch high; weighs 1,150 pounds. He is a horse of immense power, and yet so highly finished as to give him the appearance of a thoroughbred. He gives promise of trotting as fast as the celebrated Arion 2:10¾, as he can show better than a 2:20 clip to a road cart without training, and is of the same blood as the phenomenal Arion, 2:10¾, two years old. No service fee will be charged if this horse does not secure a record of twenty-five or better in 1892, barring accidents.

LIMITED TO 20 OUTSIDE MARES AT $50 EACH FOR THE SEASON,

With the usual return privileges by paying difference in price if any. Season to commence February 1st and end June 1st, 1892.

Will Make the Season of 1892 at the

Agnew Stock Farm,

HILLSDALE, SANTA CLARA COUNTY.

SERVICE FEE $150. LIMITED TO 20 MARES.

DAWN has a record of 2:18¾, and three heats of a race in 2:20 or better. His sire, Nutwood has a record of 2:18¾ in a third heat, and is now regarded as the greatest of living sires, having put seventy-seven into the list altogether, of which twenty-six entered the list in 1892. At his present fee Dawn really is the CHEAPEST OF AMERICAN STALLIONS, and, as a recent writer has said, "his form baffles description." Being by the great Nutwood 600, now standing at $1,000, out of Countess (dam of Strathway, 2:20, Placida and Morna, driven as a double team a trial mile in 2:26), Dawn shows that his family is a trotting one on each side of the house. Countess was by Whipple's Hambletonian, sire of Graves, 2:19, and fourteen others in the 2:30 list. The chestnut stallion

BOSWELL, JR.

BOSWELL JR., sired by Boswell (a son of Almont 33), dam Nellie B., by Kirtley's Patchen; grandam Sophie (grandam of Nancy Hanks, 2:09), by Alexander's Edwin Forrest; great grandam by Parker's Brown Pilot. This stallion Boswell was purchased by King Kalakaua from Gen. W. T. Withers, Fairlawn Stock Farm, Lexington, Kentucky. Boswell Jr.'s dam, Maude, 2:20, by Bertrand 3262, sire of Frank Fisk, 2:29; second dam by Hamilton Chief, son of Royal George 9; third dam the Dooley Mare. MAUDE started in twenty-one races and won eighteen first moneys, and is well known to all horsemen. BOSWELL JR. showed miles in 2:26 and quarters in 35 seconds on two weeks' work.

Mares stabled or pastured (as owners may desire) on reasonable terms. All bills payable before the animal is removed. No liability for accidents. Best fences in the country. Address,

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show: he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18½, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:24¼ and 2:24½. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. Leo Wilkes, Brown horse, six years, 16 hands, full brother to Sable Wilkes. Allowed to serve thirty mares at $100 a season.

Regal Wilkes, Bay horse, four years old. (Champion two-year-old record, 2:20¾; three-year-old record, 2:17½). By Guy Wilkes; first dam Margaret, by Sultan; second dam by The Moor; third dam by Belmont. Limited to twenty approved mares at $250 for season 1892.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties engaging the services of any of the above horses must send a deposit of 10 per cent. of service money with engagement. Pasturage $6 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain, or both, are fed, the charge will be $12.50 per month. Good care will be taken of all mares sent to the farm, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes.

Mares may be shipped direct to me at Oak Grove Station, San Mateo County.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are paid.

Season commences February 1st and ends August 1, 1893. For particulars and catalogues address

The Best Representatives of the Great Almont Family in California,

ALCONA 730.

Sire of ALCONA JR., record 2:24; FLORA BELLE, record 2:24; CLAY DUKE, record 2:29; PRINCE WARWICK, trial 2:18; ALMONTTION, 3-year-old trial 2:22.

Grandsire of SILAS SKINNER, record 2:17; DEL REY, record 2:29; MARK MEDIUM, record 2:24.

"ALCONA" made a 2-year-old race record of 2:32½, with 17 days' track work. Every one of the above descendants of ALCONA were trained by different men, in different parts of the country, and all made their records in races over regulation tracks. ALCONA is 11 years old and has already two producing sons and a producing daughter. TERMS, $75 FOR THE SEASON.

GRANDISSIMO 14,995.

Sired by La Grande 2868, dam Norma, by Arthurton 365; grandam Nourmahal, full sister to A. W. Richmond 1687.

GRANDISSIMO got his first work last season better than 3 minutes November 11, 1891. Was worked out four times and trotted to a record of 2:27¾ in a race Thanksgiving Day at Napa, finishing the last quarter in 36 seconds. Fifteen days training,—certainly a remarkable showing. I expect him to get a low mark next season. His colts are fine lookers and natural trotters. He will be bred to a limited number of mares at the low price of $50 FOR THE SEASON.

ALCONEER 15120.

(FULL BROTHER TO ALCONA JR., 2:24, SIRE OF SILAS SKINNER, 2:17.) Sired by ALCONA 730, dam Madonna (dam of Alcona Jr., 2:24, Del Rey, 2:29), by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22; grandam by Joe Downing 710.

ALCONEER is a handsome, good-sized horse, and a natural trotter. With two months training last fall as a 3-year-old he trotted a mile in 2:41; last quarter in 37 seconds. TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CADUCAS 10,840.

Sired by ALMONT MEDIUM 2133, record 2:28½, dam Amelia T. (full sister to Prince Warwick, trial 2:18), by Alcona 730; grandam by Almont Mambrino 761; g g d by Delmonico 109; g g g d by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22. CADUCAS is a handsome individual, and will make a trotter. His pedigree is all one could desire. He will be bred to a few mares at the low price of $25 FOR THE SEASON.

PRIVATE STALLION.

Sired by WHIPPLETON 1883, dam Kate Chapman, by Nauhuc 501; grandam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31 g g d by Ethan Allen 2303.

The season to commence February 1st. ALCONA'S season to close September 1st. GRANDISSIMO, ALCONEER and CADUCAS' season to close July 1st, as I expect to trot them during the circuit. Mares can be shipped by rail from any part of the state direct to St. Helena or by boat to Napa City, where they will be looked after. The very best of pasturage at $4 per month; hay and grain $8 per month for mares if necessary. Mares kept same as my own at $60 per year. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the following season free. Should any of my stallions die or be sold, mares will be returnable to any of my other stallions by paying difference in service, if any. For further particulars, address

*Balkan.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14½ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, 2:12 three years, and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¼. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¼. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Christman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½. Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:40 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan, it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000,

AND HIS SERVICE IS OFFERED AT $100 FOR THE SEASON.

The services of no other young horse of his conformation, breeding and quality, with such a record, is offered at so low a figure.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

The Thoroughbred Stallion

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1892 at

WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,

715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

THREE CHEERS

Young Fashion		Hurrah (imp.)
Fashion	Monarch	Jovial	Newminster
Bonnets o'Blue	Trustee (imp.)	Delphine	Priam	Sister to Grey Momus	Bay Middleton	Beeswing	Touchstone

HURRAH, sire of Three Cheers, produced the great winners Bonnie Lizzie, Chaquita, Ohio Boy, Nellie Peyton, Little Buttercup, Red Fox, Medusa, Brad, Referee, Monk, Hostage, Lady Middleton and many others.

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS.

Seventy-five Dollars for the Season.

Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

The Antevolo Stallion

SIROCCO

Will make the season of 1892 at Egbert Rancho, near Rio Vista, from February 1st to June 15th at $50 for the season.

PEDIGREE AND DESCRIPTION.

SIROCCO, by Antevolo 7648, 2:19¼, by Electioneer 125, sire of 100 in the 2:30 list, dam by Rifleman (thoroughbred), sire of Col. Lewis, 2:18¾.

SIROCCO is a handsome bay with black points stands 16-1 hands high, 16 2½ over the hip; weigh about 1,150; five years old, and one of the best and speediest sons of Antevolo. He is remarkably intelligent, kind, and a splendid individual. Trial, quarter at three years old .37 to 150-pound cart without regular work. Good pasturage and the best of care taken of mares at $2 per month, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

ALVIN EGBERT,
Rio Vista.

SONS OF ELECTIONEER ✣1892✣

✣1892✣ AT THE SOUTHER FARM

All mares bred to the Souther Farm Stallions in the season of 1892 will be kept free of charge from March 1st to July 1st. Mares may be sent to the farm at any time, and will be kept at reasonable rates until March 1st, when the free care begins. Best of attention given to mares at foaling time.

The Reputation of the Souther Farm is a guarantee of fair treatment for all animals sent there.

EL BENTON

(Three-quarter brother to SUNOL, 2:08¼; NORVAL, 2:17½.)

- ELECTIONEER 125 — 99 in 2:30.
  - HAMBLETONIAN 10 — 41 in 2:30 list.
    - ABDALLAH 1
    - CHAS. KENT MARE
  - GREEN MOUNTAIN MAID — 8 in 2:30.
    - HARRY CLAY 45
    - SHANGHAI MARY
- NELLIE BENTON — Trial for Charles Marvin, 2:18.
  - GENERAL BENTON 1755 — 17 in 2:30 list and dam of Sunol, 2:08¼.
    - JIM SCOTT 836
    - LADY BENTON
  - NORMA, 2:33¼ — Dam of Norval, 2:17½; Norris, 2:22¼; also Lucy Cuyler, trial for Robert Bonner, 2:15½; Nellie Benton, trial for Chas. Marvin, 2:18.
    - ALEXANDER'S NORMAN — Lula, 2:15; May Queen, 2:20.
    - BY TODHUNTER'S SIR WALLACE

Fourth dam Eagletta by Grey Eagle, sire of grandam of Ansel, 2:20.
Fifth dam Mary Howe, by Tiger.
Sixth dam Lady Robin, by Robin Gray, sire of third dam of the great Lexington.
Seventh dam by Quicksilver, son of imp. Medley.
Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¾; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

$200 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

GLEN FORTUNE

(25 per cent. of the blood of Shanghai Mary; the exact amount carried by Electioneer himself.)

- ELECTIONEER 125 — Sunol, 2:08¾; Palo Alto, 2:08¾.
  - HAMBLETONIAN 10 — His sons have produced nearly 1,000 in 2:30
    - ABDALLAH 1
    - CHAS. KENT MARE
  - GREEN MOUNTAIN MAID — 8 in 2:30.
    - HARRY CLAY 45
    - SHANGHAI MARY
- GLENNE — Out of a half-sister to Green Mountain Maid.
  - MESSENGER DUROC 106 — 20 in 2:30; dams of 19 in 2:30.
    - HAMBLETONIAN 10
    - BY ROE'S ABDALLAH CHIEF
  - GLENELLA — Out of the dam of Green Mountain Maid.
    - WOODWARD STAR — Son of Seely's American Star.
    - SHANGHAI MARY — Grandam of Electioneer.

As the dam of Green Mountain Maid and grandam of Electioneer, Shanghai Mary may be called the foundation stone of the Electioneer family, which now holds practically every best on record. Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

Glen Fortune's oldest colts were foaled in 1891, and show up splendidly in the kindergarten, where they may be seen any week day.

$100 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

grandam of Prætor, 2:29½.
Fourth to fourteenth dams thoroughbred.

By The Grand Moor.

MOORLAND, $40.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¾.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

An entirely new and original system of balancing and conditioning will be shown in a few weeks. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

Most of the mares are now in foal to Wilkie Collins and Russia. Several excellently bred geldings with speed enough to go out and earn money, and fine enough for any gentleman's road horse. Any and all animals will be sold; well worth the money. Send for a catalogue, pick out the animal you like and send for description and price; or, better still, come out to the farm and examine the stock for yourself. New catalogue will be mailed on application as soon as published. It is now being compiled. Address

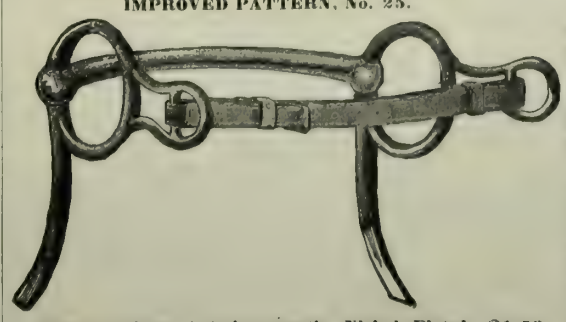
WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU



That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is glori ously mistaken. However, don't point ou the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect be aring o both heels and the entire wearing surface.

THE KING OF BITS.

The Unrivaled Woodmansee Patent Bridle Bit.

WRITE FOR SPECIAL LIST.

C. A. WILLIS, "Archibald" of the "Turf, Field and Farm," writes as follows:

MR. P. HAYDEN, Newark, N. J.

DEAR SIR: I am truly glad to see you advertising the merits of the Woodmansee Bit. For the past ten years I have never been without one or more of them, and have frequently given them to my friends and re-purchased for myself.

I have purchased every new style of Bit since I was sixteen years old (forty-four now), and I find a large majority of those that are liberally advertised and largely sold are WORTHLESS. The Woodmansee is a long way the best bit for general use, either for single or double or other driving, and ought to be used by every owner of horses. My inclination prompts me to write you thus, hoping it may encourage you to place the merits of the Woodmansee Bit before the public. It is the King of Bits, and deserves all that can be said of it. A pair of them on a team I was driving once saved my life in California. Yours truly,

C. A. WILLIS,
NEW YORK, June 27, 1888.

3:00 CLASS STALLION PURSE	$1000

PACING.

2:25 CLASS STALLION PURSE	$1000

CONDITIONS.

In all 3-in-5 races a horse not winning one heat in three shall be sent to the stable regardless of number of starters, but if eight or more start, no horse shall be sent to the stable if placed second in one of the first three heats.

In all races of mile heats, 2 in 3, a horse not winning a heat in two shall be sent to the stable, but if eight or more start, no horse which has been placed second in one of the first two heats shall be sent to the stable.

The right reserved to start each stake or purse in trial heats if more than nine declared to start, starters to be divided by the Board of Directors.

First payment, whether for purses payable in installments or for stakes, MUST ACCOMPANY NOMINATIONS, or they will not be considered.

Omission to make any payment as above stipulated, incurs forfeiture of any previous payments and of the right to start.

Horses and colts owned outside of the Pacific coast are eligible to all stakes and purses without requirement of membership; persons residing in States and Territories lying in whole or in part west of the Rocky Mountains, MUST become members of the P. C. T. H. B. A. to entitle them to make entries.

No added money will be paid for a walk-over. If only three horses start in a stake race, only first, second and third money shall be paid—if but two start, the Directors reserve the right to call it a walk-over and divide the stake money paid in; two-thirds to the winner, and one-third to the second horse. In case of a walk-over, only the moneys received from entries to said stake will be paid. In purse races, three horses will be required to start. The right is reserved to call two starters a walk-over.

A horse distancing the field shall only be entitled to first and third moneys.

The Directors reserve the right to change the hour and day of any race except when it becomes necessary to anti date a race, in which instance the nominator will receive three days notice of change by mail to address of entry.

Entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race, shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the horse to be started must be named by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race.

Trotting and racing colors shall be named by six o'clock P. M. on the day preceding the race, and must be worn upon the track.

Otherwise than the above National Trotting Association Rules to govern.

Suspension and expulsions of the American Trotting Association will be recognized.

Persons desirous of making entries in the above purses and stakes, and who have not as yet joined the P. C. T. H. B. A. should make application for membership to the Secretary, and remit the sum of $25 to cover membership fee before March 1st, 1892.

Programme for Aged Horses, Trotters and Pacers, and for Special Events, will be announced at the proper time.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON, President.

JAS. P. KERR, Secretary, 313 Bush Street, San Francisco.

George Washington,

11,628.

2-year-old Record, 2:44;

3-year-old Record, 2:30;

4-year-old Record, 2:20.

GEORGE WASHINGTON is a handsome bay horse, hind feet white, foaled 1886, bred by Thomas Smith of Vallejo, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1200 pounds.

PEDIGREE:

GEORGE WASHINGTON, by Mambrino Chief, Jr., 11,622, record 2:34. George Washington's dam was Fanny Rose, full sister to Prince Allen, 2:27, by Ethan Allen, Jr., 2903, sire of the dams of George Washington 2:20 and Bessie S., 2:29½, also of Lynwood, sire of Lynnette etc, three-years-old record 2:25, also sire of Prince Allen 2:27, second dam, Jenny Lind, thoroughbred, dam of Prince Allen 2:27.

GEORGE WASHINGTON has proven himself a great race horse, and would have been given a much lower mark last season had it not been for an accident. As an individual, he is all that can be asked, being perfect in form, intelligent and of kind disposition, and represents the highest type of a trotting sire. As he will be put in training for the campaign of 1892, he will be allowed to serve only a limited number of approved mares.

TERMS: $100 FOR THE SEASON.

Mambrino Chief, Jr.,

11,622.

Record 2:34. Sire of George Washington, record 2:20 at four years. Blood bay horse, hind feet white, 15.3 hands high, weighs 1100 pounds. By McDonald Chief 3583, Mambrino Chief's first dam Venus by Mambrino Patchen 58, second dam by Wardloes' Shakespeare, third dam by Love Gold, fourth dam by Silver Heels.

DON MARVIN

Five-Year-Old Record 2:28.

DON MARVIN is a beautiful seal brown, foaled 1884; bred by Senator Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal; is 16 hands high and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by Fallis, 2:23 (sire of four in 2:30 list, he by Electioneer. Dam, CORA (dam of Don Marvin, 2:28, and Elected [trial] 2:26) by Don Victor, (sire of the dams of five in the 2:30 list) by Belmont. Second dam, CLARABEL (dam of Clifton Belt, 2:24½, and Rebecca, dam of four in 2:30 list) by Abdallah Star. Third dam, FAIRY (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:29½, and Sweepstakes, sire of 22 in the 2:30 list, and three other producing sires and dams) by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Fourth dam, EMMA MILLS (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star.

DON MARVIN is a horse of great natural speed. His record was made with scarcely any preparation, after making a large season in the stud, and is no measure of his speed. His oldest colts (only five in number) are three years old this spring. One of them with very little work trotted quarters last fall in 36 seconds, and could have easily entered the 2:30 list in his two-year-old form had he been given an opportunity.

DON MARVIN will make the season of 1892 at $40, with usual return privilege, which make him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—Four producing dams.

The Standard-Bred Trotting Stallion

ALTO

Sired by Anteeo, 2:16¼, dam Emma Taylor, by Alexander, 490; second dam Belle by General Taylor, third dam Belle, by Boston Boy, he by David Hill's Black Hawk, out of Boston Girl, an inbred Messenger and Morgan mare that trotted on the Centerville Course, Long Island, in 1853, two miles in 5:31½, and 5:32, and on the same course in the same year three miles in 7:45.

ALTO, as can be seen by the above pedigree, is related to the most promising fast horses of the day. In appearance, he is a beautiful shade of seal brown with tan muzzle and flanks. He is 15.3 hands high, and weighs 1,080 pounds; in conformation he is unexcelled by any young horse in the State. His disposition is perfect, and has no vices. He has never been trained for speed except when he was three years old. At that time he received some six weeks' work and trotted halves in 1:12. He has been bred to a few mares and proved a sure foal-getter. He is just seven years old, and would pay for himself either in the stud or on the track the first year.

I will also sell

EMMAVOLO.

By Antevolo

Out of the dam Alto. She is five years old, bright bay in color, with black points, never been trained for speed, but can be driven anywhere. She is a fine, large, rangy mare, and just the kind that is most needed on a stock farm. She was stinted to Stammoor last spring and is believed to be in foal. Stammoor is by Stamboul, 2:11, out of a mare by The Moor.

MAGGIE E. has a beautiful colt by Eros, 2:29, at her side, and is safe in foal to this son of Flectioneer and Sontag Mohawk again. She is eleven years old, a beautiful bay in color, 15.3 hands high, perfectly sound, kind kind and gentle, and possesses those qualities which have made her name famous in California. She will be sold if applied for at once for a reasonable sum.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3,50.

ANTAREES, BY ANTEEO 2-16 1-4, DAM FLORA BELLE, BY SKENANDOAH (KENTUCKY HUNTER) 926.
THE PROPERTY OF HITCHCOCK & ALDEN.

ANTAREES, BY ANTEEO, 2:16 1-4.

Another Handsome Candidate for 2:20 Honors. Some Interesting Facts Regarding His Pedigree.

There was a time in the history of this State that all lovers of good horses cared more for speed and endurance in their roadsters than they did for the appearance of the animals. Whoever combined the latter quality with the others, the owner was envied. Such was the case regarding Lady Geneva, grandam of Antarees, the horse whose picture adorns the first page of this issue, but before dilating upon the good qualities of that famous mare and how highly she was esteemed, perhaps it would be better to speak of the subject of this sketch.

Antarees is a son of that great trotter and sire of early speed Anteeo, 2:16¼ (sire of Myrtle, 2:19½; James Madison, 2:17¾, and five other 2:30 performers). His dam is Bay Flora, by Skenandoah; second dam, Lady Geneva. Anteeo is held in far greater esteem by the breeders of the East than he was here, thus verifying the old adage: "A prophet hath no honor in his own country." He is considered the finest type of a trotting horse in America. For color, size, bone, muscle, beauty of conformation, trotting action, style and gameness, he has few, if any, equals. His chances in the stud since he left the Pacific Slope have been far better than they were here; and when the snow begins to fall and the compiler of trotting horse statistics engages in the pleasing task of figuring up the records of the various premier stallions of the East, Anteeo will be found in the front rank.

No other son of Electioneer was brought so close to the people of the bay counties (excepting, perhaps, his brother, Antevolo), and proved his intrinsic worth as a sire, and no other is missed as greatly. His sons are all inheritors of his good qualities, while his daughters have been making for themselves names that are also a credit to him.

The fastest grandson of Electioneer is a grandson of Anteeo, and the first great-granddaughter of Electioneer, Emma Nevada, that will enter the charmed circle, is likewise a granddaughter of Anteeo, thus proving, through him, that the blood of the immortal Electioneer, coming through such a channel, breeds on. Anteeo's sire, Electioneer, needs no high-sounding praise, for he has left a name upon the temple of equine fame that will shine resplendent through all the coming years. Instead of becoming dimmed by the corroding hand of Time, it will grow brighter and brighter as it reflects his glory through his progeny. Columbine, the dam of Anteeo, needs no pantomime to present her glories on the stage, for she has proved her worth as a matron in every way, and all lovers of finely-formed trotters are gratified to know that she is still sending out sons and daughters that are doing her the honor a royal lineage demands. She is the dam of Antevolo, 2:19½, and Coral, 2:25, a mare that was only beaten out a head in 2:19 last fall in a race. As it was unnecessary to go into details regarding the sire of Anteeo because he is so well known, Columbine, Anteeo's dam, needs no further comment, for she is represented in the history of broodmares that have made names for themselves on the roster of great and famous matrons.

Bay Flora, the dam of Antarees, is a mare that has achieved quite a local reputation for speed, endurance, good sense and that other great requisite which all breeders seek, 'plenty of nervous energy." The road is none too long for this untiring, frictionless-gaited mare. She needs neither whip nor urging, but will travel from early morn until late at night, up hill and down dale without showing signs of fatigue. She has been used as a broodmare of late years, and is now the dam of Queen Haywood, Antarees, Anteenio and Antoinette. She is now in foal to Richard's Elector, her owner believing in following out the same stream that has been so remarkably free from snags and rocks, and safe to rely upon.

Bay Flora is a stylish, well-shaped bay mare with feet and legs that can neither be criticized nor improved upon; for they are as perfect as if made to order. Her clean head is small, neck long and thin, she has well-shaped shoulders, fine, large quarters and a girth through the heart that would satisfy any seekers of this quality. Bay Flora was sired by Skenandoah 926 was by Broken-Legged Kentucky Hunter, dam Sikes mare, by Hardin's Kentucky Hunter (son of Sorrel Kentucky Hunter.) He was a good race horse in his day, and after being retired to the stud,sired Daisy Burns, 2:29¾; Erwin Davis (sire of two in the list), and the dams of Bonner, 2:23; Wormwood, 2:25; Adrian, 2:26½; Lady Dawson, 2:28, and Slander, 2:28½—a splendid showing, opportunities considered.

Lady Geneva, the second dam of Bay Flora, was brought across the plains from Kentucky in the early sixties, and everyone knows that a poor mare would never be selected for that journey. She was owned by Luther Mills, of San Jose, Cal., who sold her to Mr. Kohler, of Kohler & Chase, the well known music dealers of this city. Mr. Kohler used her for a number of years in his business buggy, and could go by nearly every horse on the road with her. She finally passed into the hands of J. R. Willoughby, of Ventura, Cal., who bred her to Skenandoah. The result of this union was Bay Flora. In a conversation with several turfites who used to drive up and down the old Cliff House road, we incidentally mentioned her name, and everyone of the gentlemen knew her. They described her as a large bay mare, very stylish, and could trot in less than 2:40—at least she could beat any 2:40 horse on the road. If she had received any track work there was no doubt in their minds but that she would easily trot in 2:30 or better. No other mare created more excitement among the "boys" than Lady Geneva when they tried to pass her; and none of them could keep up with her until the end of the road.

Antarees was foaled June 1, 1888. He is 15.3 hands high, and weighs about 1075 pounds. In color he is a beautiful, bright bay, with two white ankles, star in forehead and small snip. The picture our artist has drawn does not flatter him. He is well-muscled and strongly-built. His measurements, which are given below, will convey a better idea of this than any other discription. He is so very evenly-made that one would take him for a model.

	Inches.
Height at withers	63

Antarees has never had any extra care. He was turned out on pasture and allowed to shift for himself during his colthood. In 1890 he was taken up, harnessed and worked a little, but only to get him used to work. He displayed such a kind disposition and wonderful speed that his owners considered him worthy of being trained, so last fall, after the fairs were over, they gave him to James Corcoran, a very careful and competent trainer, at Napa. He improved very fast, and has gone quarters and halves at a 2:20 gait. If he gets sufficient work there is no doubt of his getting a very low mark this fall. His lofty carriage, perfect action and smooth easy way of going reminds one strongly of the Electioneer family. He needs very little or no booting, except for protection. His feet and joints are straight and perfect, and as he neither paddles nor dishes with his feet while moving, there is little likelihood of his needing much booting.

As a stock horse and a sire of good-looking horses with perfect dispositions, Antarees will make a name for himself, and, what is of more value, his progeny will be trotters, for by his inheritance he comes from trotting families, and will surely transmit those qualities, if we are to believe in the science of breeding. Anyone who desires to breed good mares will make no mistake in getting the services of this horse. His owners have placed his service fee remarkably low, considering his appearance, breeding, gait, style and superb color. Fifty dollars is a sum that is within the reach of all, and as Anteeo blood is becoming more precious every year, breeders should avail themselves of this opportunity of breeding to this grand and noble-looking four-year-old.

The Morgan Horse.

W. R. Bowman, Westmoreland county, Pa., writes; "In a late issue a description is given of the Morgan Horse of the present age. I send you description and history of the founder of the family of Morgans, as given in the American Stock Journal, 1872, a copy of which I have preserved for twenty years.

"There has been much discussion as to the origin of the Morgan Horse, and yet we have very little knowledge on the subject that is definite. What we do know is, that about the beginning of the nineteenth century a man by the name of Justin Morgan, whose life was somewhat checkered—turning his mind to farming one season and perhaps teaching school the next—owned a little horse of wonderful nerve, a dark bay, with black legs, mane and tail, standing fourteen hands high and weighing about nine hundred and fifty pounds. At this time Mr. Morgan lived at Randolph, Vt., and his horse had much local celebrity. He was a horse of great power, was fleet of foot and full of resolution. He was used chiefly under the saddle, but was broken to harness. It was the custom to run him short races on the country roads, and it is said that he was never beaten in these contests. It was also the custom to test his strength by hitching him in front of heavy loads. Where the horse came from and what was his breeding are questions largely left to conjecture. There are many stories, but we have learned to look upon them as traditions. The most plausible theory, however, in regard to the origin of the horse, which is known in history by the name of his Vermont owner, Justin Morgan, is that advanced by Mr. John Morgan, a relative of Justin's. He said that the horse was foaled in 1793, that his sire was True Briton, by the imported horse Traveler, and that his dam was of the Wildair breed. Of course the pedigree is disputed, but as for that matter no pedigree could be given to the horse that would not be open to objection.

"All the facts in his remarkable career point to a channel of pure blood, and give the lie to the story that he was a mongrel or was of obscure origin. The life of the Justin Morgan was a strange one. It was his lot to labor as few horses have labored—participate in the excitement of the race, to be petted and abused, to revel at brief periods in the delights of the stud, and, finally, to be neglected in his old age and to die, caused by a kick in the flank. Old and poor as he was, he might have survived this injury had he received any care, but he was exposed to the inclemency of a Northern winter, and inflammation setting in he lay down and died. It was in the winter of 1821, and on the farm of Clifford Bean, about three miles south of the village of Clesea, Vt., that Justin Morgan breathed his last."

The "Coombs place" at Napa has been sold to a Mr. Graham, of Seattle, Washington. Senator Frank Coombs has purchased a beautiful residence in the town of Napa, and has moved all of his household effects from the old home into it.

Notes From Napa's Track.

The heavy rains last week have had a cheering effect upon the farmers, orchardists and vineyardists of the fair valley of Napa. The fields and pastures on valley and hillside are all clothed in beautiful green, the dark shading of the gulches and the low trees and shrubbery that crown the tops of the highest hills contrasting well with the lighter emerald hues of the wider lands around and beneath them. The azure blue of the sky, the creeks filled to overflowing, all emptying into the rushing Napa Creek on their way to the bay, the bright sun painting everything in Nature in glowing colors; the clear, warm air and the presence of the young trotters and pacers in the fields or playing around the stacks of hay, enjoying their freedom, make one envy the life of the farmer and wonder why it is that so many people can never feel happy in Nature's playground—the country.

The horse interests of Napa are as quiet as the rain that fell, and like it their influence will be felt later on. At the track mud reigns supreme as King of the Circle. The roads around the town are all in good condition. Some of the stalls at the track are filled, while a larger number of them are empty.

James Corcoran seems to be the Orrin A. Hickok there. He has quite a number of very promising youngsters. One of the best is the Anteeo stallion, Antarees, belongiug to Messrs. Hitchcock and Alden. He is a very solid-built, level-headed colt, and will make a low record this fall.

Stonewall is the solid name for a solid black colt by Director, 2:17, out of Nellie Steinway, by Steinway, 2:25¾; second dam, Nellie Grant, by Fred Low. Stonewall is a typical Director, and will be trotted after his season in the stud ends. He is owned by R. G. Head, one of Napa's most enthusiastic horsemen. It is Mr. Head's intention to give this horse only a short season in the stud.

John Evan, the well-known butcher of Napa, has a string of youngsters at the track also under the care of Mr. Corcoran. One is a good-looking three-year-old sorrel colt by Alcona 730, out of a mare by Lodi. Another is a yearling filly by Mountain Boy out of a Steinway mare; second dam by Lodi. She is a good-looker, and will make Mr. Evan feel very proud of her some day. In another stall is a chestnut colt by Happy Prince out of a Lodi mare. Besides these he has two Mountain Boy youngsters (a pacer and a trotter) that are being wintered here.

Budd Hill, of Napa, has his bay Alcona filly also in this row of stalls; she is out of Mother Taylor, by Gen. Taylor, second dam by Werner's Rattler.

A likely-looking colt called The Sheriff, owned by Peter Smith, of Middletown, Lake County, is receiving daily exercise. The Sheriff is by Attorney, out of Lulu B., by Indicator, second dam by Langford. With a few other unnamed youngsters, this completes Mr. Corcoran's string.

Frank Metcalf has brought Mr. Frank L. Coombs' well-bred ones to the track, but the weather has been so bad that he has had no opportunity of working them. The names of these youngsters are quite original. A very blood-like, three-year-old filly is called Comedy. She is by Director, 2:17, out of Dolly McMahon (dam of Lily Stanley, 2:17½). She is a representative of the happy blending of the staunch, heavy-muscled Director and her rangy, thoroughbred-looking dam, and is quite a trotter.

The Dane is the title of a colt by Stamboul, 2:11, out of Dolly McMahon. He is a four-year-old, a seal brown in color, and bears a striking resemblance to his sire.

The one that captivated our eye is called Salisbury. He is only a two-year-old; his sire is Director, 2:17, his dam is that great race mare and campaigner, Lily Stanley, 2:17¼. He will bear close watching whenever called out to start. He ought to make a fast trotter if conformation and breeding from a developed sire and dam count for anything. Mr. Coombs has a number of other good ones that he has not brought from his ranch yet.

E. B. Jennings, of Napa, is a young breeder who believes in going to the very best sources to get a sire to put at the head of his stock farm. He has one of the best-looking sons of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, we have seen outside of the San Mateo Stock Farm. This stallion is out of Blonde, by Arthurton; second dam, Old Huntress, by Skenandoah. Mr. Jennings should give this trotter a chance to get a record this fall. Another good one is a chestnut colt by Alcona 730, out of Queen, by John Nelson. This lusty-looking fellow is a trotter, and will be seen on the circuit. Mr. Jennings has a Silas Skinner colt out of a Nutwood mare that will make a fast one if all that we hear of this youngster's performances are true.

Thomas Kinney has the fine Woodnut colt, Alwood K., in his row of stalls. Alwood K. is out of an Admiral mare, and appeared in the district races last fall. This year it is hoped he will be in better condition than he was then, for he had a bad cough and did not make as good a showing as he did two weeks prior to the day of the races.

Lou Starr has a mare by Dawn out of a Whippleton mare that he calls Moonlight. She will shine in the circuit among the very brighest.

Charles Scott drives his magnificent horse, Wilkes Pasha, around the track a little when the weather permits. This is the only son of Onward on the Coast. He is full brother to Clara Wilkes, 2:18¾, his dam being by American Clay 34, out of a daughter of Wilson's Snowstorm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:23, etc. Wilkes Pasha has sired a number of fine-looking colts and fillies in this county that are considered fast trotters, and everyone speaks well of them.

Prof. E. P. Heald's Pilot Prince, the fine young Dexter Prince stallion, is now at this gentleman's stock farm under the care of Mr. Grigsby. He will prove of inestimable value to the breeders in this valley as a sire, for his blood lines are most fashionable, and individually he is hard to equal anywhere.

Cyrus B. Morse, a mechanical engineer and inventor of note in New York, is at work on a miniature model race course which can be placed in pool rooms, and by the aid of electricity and magnifying glasses the track will appear to be a mile in length and the leading horses, by the use of illuminated numbers, can be distinguished from the start to the finish. In other words, the running of the horses in every race on the tracks where the appliance is used can be seen in as many places as there are models on the track in operation.

Pleasanton Stock Farm.

Almost within the limits of the famous town of Pleasanton, is located the stock farm which has achieved a world-wide reputation as being the home of the "Black Tornado" (Director) and his illustrious son, Direct, the fastest harness horse in the world, and at least a score of others whose names have been prominently identified with the trotting turf for years. The road to this level tract of land is but the continuation of one of the principal streets; the sidewalks are lined with walnut, acacia and locust trees so closely planted that the sun has no opportunity of penetrating their heavy foliage when they are in the zenith of their glory. At all times of the year, in this salubrious climate, their presence makes the gravelled roads most charming and inviting.

The Pleasanton Stock Farm consists of about one hundred and sixty acres of rich soil on which heavy crops of grain and alfalfa are harvested every year. A portion of the land is sown with Australian rye and other grasses, which furnish excellent grazing for the broodmares and youngsters. The race course which is built on this tract of land is unexcelled in many respects by any other in the United States. The land is springy, easily kept in order, never cakes like clay or adobe, is free from pebbles, and can be put in condition for either running or trotting in a few hours. At one time in the history of this large valley it was used exclusively for horse racing among all classes of people, and on Sundays and holidays people came for miles to witness the exciting events that took place there; money was plenty and men bet heavily. The remnants of the old stand is still to be seen below the judges' stand.

Along the homestretch the backs of the low stables are ranged. The buildings are made to face a large, open square, the corners being cut off so that there is a large entrance some thirty feet wide to drive in. The track is noted for being the training place of Cricket, 2:10, Direct, 2:06, Little Albert, 2:17¼, Margaret S., 2:12½, Homestake, 2:14¼, and other celebrated fast ones, and bids fair to continue in the good work for years to come.

When these buildings were erected, a fountain stood in the center of the square, but the large number of horses that are stabled here necessitated something more useful to supply their wants, so a large windmill tank has taken its place, and when the wind dies out a "meek-looking mule" furnishes the power to pump water into the elevated tank.

The office of the superintendent, Jose Neal, is a neat little cottage in which are kept on file all the turf papers of the day, medicine chests and medical works; a small, useful library, a desk, stove, lounges, chairs, etc.; on the walls are engravings of all the record-breakers, Direct, of course, occupying the place of honor.

The absence of Director, 2:17, Direct, 2:06, and Margaret, 2:12½ was noted, but Geo. Starr, the affable driver who has been so many years with Budd Doble and achieved so many great victories while handling the Salisbury string last year, is kept pretty busy, however, preparing another lot of horses for the Eastern campaign. The most prominent among the green ones is a black three-year-old colt by Director, out of Stemwinder (dam of Electrina, 2:30) by Venture, 2:27¼. He is called Directum. In appearance he is a counterpart of what his sire looked at his age except that his head is not quite as handsome or as prettily set as the "Black Tornado's" but it is a good, level head and if there is anything in "precocious trotters," Directum is entitled to the first place.

Mr. Salisbury might be justly called liberal, for he does not care what the breeding of an animal is so long as he thinks it is a money-winner and can be made a "race horse." He believes in winning all he can with them, and has placed a number of colts and fillies away down in the "teens" that had not a drop of Director's blood in their veins, and in doing so he has helped the families the campaigners were related to.

In another stall is the famous Los Angeles Del Sur wonder, or, as he was familiarly, termed the "hearse horse." He is a coal black in color and stands about 15.2. His head shows the characteristics of the Sultan family, except that his jowls are very wide. His withers are sharp, his back short and his shoulders and hindquarters are as perfect as the limbs and feet under him. He lookes like a hard, whalebone-muscled campaigner, and will be useful on the Eastern circuit; he was bred by Undertaker Garrett, of the firm Garrett & Neightsky, of Los Angeles, and sold to Palo Ruis, San Pedro, who broke him and trained him on the hard, sandy beach. If the horse started to pace he would pace all day, but if he happened to trot he would stick to that gait. He was driven in a hearse in Los Angeles, and when not acting in that slow calling he was jogged along the road. Finally Lee Maybury managed to get hold of him; he then trotted at a 20 gait and paced in 2:18. He was then retired, and nothing further was done with him until Mr. Salisbury leased him, and now George Starr is trying to see if there is any truth in such stories. He will be good in the 2:30 classes, that he is confident of.

Homestake, 2:14¼, is looking better and acting better than he ever did in his life. Whether he will lower his record is a question which time and opportunity will decide. Gibraltar has had a splendid standard-bearer in this big bay gelding.

Steve Whipple, 2:23, is here, and any one who looks at this fellow move will scan the papers if this stallion goes East, to see just where he is at the end of each mile. He will a good account of himself; of this we can be sure.

Reavis is the name of a very handsome bay stallion, pacer, that will get a low record this year. The bay Director colt out of Aurora (dam of the valiant Guido), by Thad Stevens, the famous four-miler, as well as the black Director colt out of Lugena, by Thad Stevens, are doing very well for "half-breeds," and before the campaign is over they will both be worthy of wearing the purple robes of royalty. Mr. Starr is well pleased with them and every one regrets that Director was not bred to a few more thoroughbreds, if these are samples of what he can do as a gait controller.

The black pacing colt To Order, by Director out of Maude, 2:20, is well worth watching, and if he proves as great a winner as his illustrious dam, Mr. Salisbury need have no reason to complain.

Emma Nevada is the name of a fine thoroughbred-looking filly by James Madison, 2:17¾, "The John L. Sullivan of the Turf," and Kate Dudley by St. Joe (thoroughbred). This filly will go inside of 2:25, the first time she is called upon to move, and if taken east will be the first great grand daughter of Electioneer to show the people that "Electioneer breeds on."

A Director colt that Mr. Starr is pleased with is out of a mare by Monroe Chief, 2:18. This youngster was raised by Col. H. I. Thornton, of Rancho Resaca, and is very pure-gaited, a resolute mover and level-headed. He traces in his pedigree to a long line of great weight-carrying long-distance thoroughbreds, and as experience has proved that is the only thoroughbred foundation that is worth crossing with trotters, he ought to make a race horse.

Electrina 2:30, by Richards' Elector, "the King pin among the Electioneers in this State," out of Stemwinder by Venture, 2:27¼, is a very handsome, substantial-looking mare, and will lower that record of her's a few notches this year.

The "pick of the bunch" so far as appearances go, for he has not been trained yet, is a bay colt called Titus, by Director out of Belle Echo, 2:20. He cannot be improved upon from the top of his delicate ears to his fetlocks and is a model in every respect. Led into a show ring he would take the first prize in any company.

A sister to this one enjoys the freedom of a large paddock and visitors who have heard of lot trotters are shown what such a term means whenever she is started up. She is a deep seal brown in color, no white, has splendid body, limbs, head and neck, and when she snorts and throws up her head and tail and strikes out to trot, one would think a Starr or a Doble was urging her. She is the pet of the boys, and some day will be held in the same estimation by every one who sees her come ahead of all others in her races. She is one of the kind that a horseman will involuntarily say, "I wish I owned her."

M. F. Tarpey has a very fine-looking Anteeo mare here, but nothing much will be done with her. She would make a low mark if handled this summer. Every one who sees her move pronounces her gait faultless.

Dr. H. Latham's large Dexter Princess is one of the fastest mares of her size, if not the fastest in the State. She moves as true as a piece of machinery, and knows nothing but trot. A whip is never needed to keep her moving; she jogs with the very best here.

The Doctor and George Starr are partners in a brown filly by Director out of Bessie Sedgwick, a daughter of Brigadier. The pride these two horsemen take in little Bessie Latham is proof enough that they have something extraordinarily good in this little miss. She is a natural trotter, and does her work as conscientiously and as gamely as ever Direct did in any of his races.

Almonition, by Alcona 730, is a black stallion that will go East in the string. He is a very rangy, showy, well-limbed and superbly-muscled youngster, and is of the material from which racehorses and campaigners are made.

Another "great green goer" is the inbred Mambrino Wilkes stallion, Chaldean. He is the kind that trainers and drivers "hanker after," and, to use the words of an old driver, will prove a good "liver" in any closely-contested race where the heats are split.

There is no sickness at the farm at present. Monbars is "rounding to" splendidly; the broodmares are all looking well and carefully attended. The people at Pleasanton are all lovers of good horses, and know each and every one of the Directors as they jog along. It is strictly a "horsey" town, and with its lovely climate, splendid location, fine soil, excellent pasturage and fine water, there should be a kite-shaped track and a regulation course and appointments that would attract the attention of all the Eastern breeders, and be the means of having them send out their campaigners to winter there.

The weanlings, yearlings and two-year-olds are looking strong and healthy. They are carefully stabled, fed morning and night, and allowed the run of splendid alfalfa fields during the day. Their good appearance speaks volumes for their friend, Mr. Neal, who is as proud of them as Mr. Salisbury.

Aged Sires and Dams.

Some people hold that it is not well to breed to aged sires; others that old ones are better than young ones, and that those interested in the question may be enlightened on this we give below, says the Tennessean, facts taken from the records which show that old horses have sired some of the fastest on the turf, and that aged dams, too, have given us some of our best horses. This list is as follows, the figures marking the age:

Bonnie Scotland at 22 got Bramble; 24, Blackburn, Glidelia, Bancroft; 25, Bootjack; 27, George Kinney. Leamington was 12 when imported; at 13 got Longfellow, Enquirer, Lynchburg, Littleton; 14, Eolus; 18, Aristides, Olitipa, Rhadamathus, Hyder Ali; 19, Parole, Faithless; 22, Harold; 23, Sensation; 24, Iroquois, Spinaway; 25, Onondaga. Lexington after seventeen got Acrobat, Ochiltree, Chesapeake, Duke of Magenta, Uncas, Charlie Howard, Tom Bowling, Kingfisher, Wander's Hamburg, Preakness, Harry Bassett, Monarchist, Sultana, Susan Ann, Ann Bush, Salina, Hollywood, and at 24 got Duke of Magenta, his best. Norfolk at 23 got Emperer Norfolk; Glenelg at 17, Firenzi; Virgil, 19, Tremont; Vandal, 20, Vandalite. Billet, 15, Miss Woodford; 19, Belvidere; 20, Raceland, Sir Dixon.

Alice Carneal at 21 foaled Umpire. Blue Bonnet at 18 Lightning; 19, Thunder; 21, Loadstone; 24, Lancaster. Gloriana, 19, Pat Malloy; Lavender, Baden Baden; Magnolia, at 21, Kentucky; Florizel mare, 19, Boston; Bourbon Belle, 15, Hanover; Marian, 15, Emperor Norfolk; Salina, 18, Salvator; Alert, 20, Richmond; Lou Pike, 14, French Park; Minnie Minor, 20, Wanda; Magenta, 18, Duke of Magenta, and in this case Lexington was 24 years old.

In England.—Alice Hawthorne, 19, Thormanby; Flying Dutchess, 19, Galopin; Cressida, 20, Priam; Ellermire, 18, Ill-Used; Guiccioli, 18, Faugh-a-Ballagh; Mundane, 20, Lottery; 21, Brutandort; Queen Bertha, 16, Wheel of Fortune; Silverhair, 16, Silvio; Flower of Dorset, 15, Friar Balsam. Priam's greatest daughter, Crucifix, came from Octavinia when she was 21.

HALF-BROTHER.—That there should be a technical objection to the rating of progeny by the same horse from different mares as half-brothers and half-sisters is somewhat incomprehensible to most people; not difficult to understand, however, when explanations are given. In the first place it is seldom, indeed, when there are doubts of the maternal line, while the paternal is frequently shrouded in mystery. The sire may have fifty foals in one year to represent his side, extremely rare when the mare has more than one. The progeny of great mares rank higher than that of great stallions, or it may be better to say that the offspring of a mare which has more distinction as the dam of racehorses will be of greater value by an untried horse than the get of a stallion of equal prominence from an untried mare, the breeding, of course, in both cases being satisfactory; that is, when thoroughbreds are sought, and the importance of the dam in breeding fast trotters is becoming more and more generally acknowledged in this progressive era.

A Kite Track in Tulare.

TULARE, CAL., February 19, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—An association has been formed here with a capital stock of $10,000, and work has been commenced on a kite-shaped track. Ninety acres of land adjoining the city of Tulare, having been secured. The soil is a springy clay and well adapted for the purpose of building a fast and easy track. No pains will be spared to make it one of the fastest in the world.

Your Tulare patrons highly appreciate the improvement in the paper and recognize it as an able advocate of honesty and fair dealing in the management of racing interests on this Coast. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN voices the sentiment of the people of this section of the State in demanding paid judges.

You can hardly find a horseman but that has experienced the evils arising from the system commonly practiced, and many a defunct racing assocsation might well have as an epttaph "Died from Bad Judging." Give us a judge for each circuit like Hugh M. Larue, who will dispense equal and exact justice from the stand without fear or favor, and confidence will be inspired in the public and a new impetus will be given to racing matters. No racing association can prosper without the full confidence of the public, and that can only be had and kept by an honest and fearless administration in the judges' stand. The gate receipts and the balance on the association's books depend upon the character of the edicts emenating from the judges' stand.

To Joseph Cairn Simpson we extend a hearty welcome as a contributor to your able and much-valued journal. Although not personally acquainted with him, I somehow feel that he is not only an intimate acquaintance, but a trusted friend. In my early experiences I relied greatly upon his teachings and counsel in the shoeing and handling of trotters, and I learned many things from him that have been of great practical value to me. I often turn to the musty pages of the "old time" paper to refresh my mind upon some idea that he originated.

Many a time I have read and expounded "Tips and Toe-weights" to some thick-headed blacksmith to keep him from ruining my horse's feet.

Mr. Simpson has the great merit of being original. The thoughts and theories that fall from his pen are the inventions of his own fertile genius. Long may he live in the full possession of all his faculties, vigorous and unimpaired.

M.

A REPRESENTATIVE of this paper visited Bay District track during the week and saw the thoroughbred Australian stallions and mare brought over by R. E. de B. Lopez, of Sidney. The brother to Sir Modred and Cheviot (Idalium) was the first one shown. He is a coal black stallion, standing about 15.3 hands, with shapely neck and clean-cut, beautiful head, is deep through the heart, has a well-rounded barrel, strong quarters—in a word, he is a horse of great finish and lots of substance. The oldest of Idalium's get are but five years of age, yet three of them have proved good winners in New South Wales. He is a great outcross for most of our American families of thoroughbreds, and the wonderful success in the American stud of both Sir Modred and Cheviot should be a guarantee that the younger brother, Idalium, will prove a great acquisition to the thoroughbred sires. Merriwa, a stallion five years of age, black in color, with white streak through the face and three white feet, is an ideal race horse of the type that Americans love so dearly—the Leamington. He stands sixteen hands, has a medium-sized head, clean-cut and shapely, is wide through the jowls, has a long but beautiful neck, a long, substantial body, is deep through tne heart, has clean limbs, heavy, powerful quarters, the best of feet; in short, Merriwa looks every inch a turf monarch, and is bred in lines from which hosts of great racehorses have come. He is by Goldsbrough, one of Australia's most famous sires, from Habena by Yattendon; second dam, Atholine, by Blair Athol, sire, amongst other famous ones, of Prince Charlie, who got Salvator, king of the American turf. In his veins flows the blood of Fisherman, Sir Hercules, Irish Birdcatcher, Whalebone, Sheet Anchor (two crosses), Priam, The Baron, The Saddler, Melbourne and Kelpie, and no better outcross could be found for our mares with lots of Lexington and Grey Eagle blood in them. Why this horse has not been sold long ere this we cannot imagine. Of the bay mare Repose, by Apremont (son of Mortemer, sire of Exile, Wanda, Cholulu, and other famous horses in this country), dam Hammock by Orest, we will say that she is a large, handsome mare with blood that should be much prized on account of its scarcity in America. She was a good winner in the colonies, and a grand individual with two or three good races in her yet. When she breaks down she should prove a royal matron. All of these horses are in fine shape now, and are given a good romp and roll in a big sand lot at the track every day.

EQUINE STUDIES.

Double Sire—Early Lessons—Enlarge the Circle—Then and Now.

DOUBLE SIRE.—The proof-reader was determined to bring the "copy" to what he considered sense, and, notwithstanding that the correction was plainly marked on the "proof," the dam of Peruvian Bitters went in as by "Thorndale, he a son of Edwin Forrest," when it should have been by Thorndale, or a son of Edwin Forrest.

As it is so well known that Thorndale was by Alexander's Abdallah, there are few who would imagine that I was guilty of the blunder, but among trotting-horse fanciers there may be a good many who are not familiar with the method of describing, in as few words as possible, the situation when there are doubts of the paternity, of frequent occurrence among thoroughbreds, numbers of instances where two sires can be claimed, a few where there is a triple conjunction.

The most noted instance is in the case of Bloomsbury, the Derby winner of 1839, named in the Racing Calendar as by Mulatto, out of St. Giles' dam, in the Stud Book by Tramp or Mulatto. Racing rules are very stringent, and when he won the race Fulmer Craven, the owner of Deception, which ran second, made a formal objection to the pedigree as given in the calendar. As that objection was filed after the race was run, the onus to prove that the pedigree was not as represented fell on Mr. Craven, but the stewards of the Jockey Club, in order to expedite the settlement, made the examination at the request of Mr. Ridsdale, the owner of Bloomsbury, reviewed the evidence presented, and decided that the calendar was correct, Bloomsbury qualified to start for the Derby, and that his owder was entitled to the stakes. An immense amount of money was pending, and Mr. Craven, not yet satisfied, gave notice to the stakeholders not to pay over the stakes to Mr. Ridsdale, and carried the case to the law conrts. For a wonder in English jurisprudence, the suit was brought to trial before a special jury on the 22d of August following, and that uncommon dispatch of business shows how great was the anxiety to have it settled, and when the verdict of the jury accorded with that of the Epsom Stewards there was general satisfaction. Bloomsbury was a long shot, 25 to 1, Deception at 12 to 1. Euclid, at 6 to 1, ran third, but was not placed. It is somewhat singular that the only Electioneer pacer was from a mare, Nellie Walker, which had two sires, or rather that her sire could not be absolutely fixed, both being trotting-bred, her dam by Alexander's Abdallah; her grandam, however, was a daughter of Parker's Brown Pilot, son of Fenwick's Copperbottom. That may be taken as of some weight in establishing the pacing proclivities of the great grandson.

EARLY LESSONS.—The absence of pacers among the pupils at Palo Alto is one of the many surprises of that noted equine university. So far about the only explanation given, or probable course ascribed, that Electioneer did not get pacers and that he was the only one of the great sires which occupied that position, although his sire, Hambletonian, must be awarded that distinction.

So many of Hambletonian's sons have got fast pacers, the best of them having gained renown in that line, that it is a just inference that there was a family tendency which is sure to outcrop when conditions are favorable, and it may be that the get of the sons of Electioneer will also show a tribal characteristic of like bearing when opportunities come. At all events Elector—the Lady Babcock Elector—has a son which has paced in 2:15, and there are rumors of other fast pacers in the second generation.

It stuck me when writing the article "Pacers Standard," which appeared last week, that the "kindergarten" system of early training had something to do with the paucity of pacers at Palo Alto, and since then have become still more strongly impressed with the idea that it is one of the main reasons. In connection with the succeeding courses of the system pursued, there can be little question that it has a powerful influence, and that the single pacer was somewhat anomalous, foreign to what it was reasonable to expect from the general bent of the lessons received. The A B C begins when the scholar is only a few months old. The letters are made prominent, so that there can be no mistake made in recognizing the first sign. The course is a small oval where the pupil is almost within an arm's length of the teacher. Trot is the letter A, B, is trot, C, D, all the way through the alphabet it is trot. The small oval is so deeply carpeted with loose soil that trot or gallop are the only gaits that will admit of fast progression. In the exuberance of animal spirits, freed from the restraint of stall, after a few lessons which overcome the trepidation and novelty of first appearance, it is not a task, it is a romping play. Gallop they will, and with a will, bounding around that limited ring as gaily as lambs gamboling on a verdant knoll, inspired by bouyant health, due to good feed and good keeping; but they soon learn that when the gallop becomes irksome it is easier to trot, and they are encouraged to trot, and what little punishment is inflicted is only as a reminder of their duties. Little fear that any other method of getting around that play ring will be followed than a square trot or high-actioned gallop, as a step or two in an attempt to pace, single-foot or shuffle on that deep ground will be convincing proof that that kind of a track is not a bit adapted for fancy saddle-gaits. And then, too, they are "rigged out" with nicely-fitting boots, quarters, shins and knees protected, so that if they should brush in passing there is a soft fender to receive the blow. As sure as sure can be they take delight in these diurnal play spells, not so noisy as human youngsters when let out of school, but just as full of antics and under a good deal better control. They are never subjected to harsh treatment, the aim being to inspire confidence in their teachers, and anything approaching cruelty on the part of their attendants insures dismissal. The lessons are not given on a track which is muddy, and whenever the outdoor ground is unfit from that cause there is a covered amphitheatre for their exercise. This primary stage is of great moment, then, in overcoming a tendency to pace, and if, as some contend, conformation has anything to do with pacing proclivities, the growing frame accomodates itself to the conditions and takes the trotting shape, just as gardeners train the growing twig. But if shape has anything to do with pacing action there are so few and such slight variations from that which trotters display, that part of the question may be dismissed, and I imagine when the tendency is ascribed to mental bias there will be a closer approach to truth. Whatever explanation is advanced, whether physical formation or mental learning, it is evident that the primary school at Palo Alto is well adapted to overcome the propensity, however strong. There is another bearing which it would be well to consider. Should the pupil be so strongly imbued with the desire to pace that he cannot acquire the fast-trotting step, or he is so peculiarly endowed that conversion is out of the question, and that after the usual series of lessons he does not exhibit progress, he is turned out, branded with incapacity, and in time relegated to other duties. He could not pace on that yielding foothold, and he was not an apt pupil in the regular course.

The obstacles in the way of pacing in the kindergarten were effectual stoppages, and when the scene is changed and the doors of the higher school are opened to the pupil, there is another break on the pacing wheel. The course is smoother and equally as favorable for pacing as it is for trotting, with the exception that the surface is rather too soft for the gliding motion of the fastest pacers. The bit is the monitor, severe at times, a cruel master, punishing the slightest deviation from the course which is marked. Kindness, in every stage, is the rule at Palo Alto, and while the yankings, sawings and snatchings at the bit, so frequently seen, are of rare occurrence, there is a peremptory mandate that pacing shall not be permitted. Obstinate pupils are expelled; dean and faculty will not condone that unpardonable sin. What chance has a pacer? No matter if there were reasonable grounds to anticipate a Direct, a Hal Pointer or the coming two-minute harness horse, he is ostracized with as little compunction as Yahoos were cast aside by Houyhnhnms.

That the curriculum at Palo Alto has done more to keep the scholars trotting than the absence of pacing spermatozoa in the vivifying fluid of Electioneer I have full belief, and still further that if a sire as full of Tom Hal blood as could be secured, coupled with him broodmares combining the most noted strains in the pacing calendar, subject the progeny to the Palo Alto treatment, and pacers would still be a rarity. A great many sons of Hambletonian have been the sires of fast pacers. At the close of 1890 Egbert, intensely inbred to Hambletonian, had nine in 2:30 or better, George Wilkes eight, Ajax five, and in the second remove the list increases. There is little doubt that the first lessons of these trotting-bred youngsters were from a trotting hand-book, and failure to obtain a trotting diploma, or rather their dullness in that direction, led to the change. They were not thrown aside as valueless, but permitted to follow the bent of their inclinations, and in that way recouped their breeders for outlay in rearing and training. Assuming that the get of George Wilkes, Egbert, Alcantara and Red Wilkes were bred with the purpose of developing them into fast trotters, and yet at the close of 1890 there were thirty-five fast pacers from these four sires, the conclusion is logical that with fewer restrictions there would have been a larger number of fast pacers; with stricter rules, such as prevail at Palo Alto, perhaps none. General Benton is the sire of seventeen in the list, one of them a pacer; Piedmont has nine to his credit without a pacer. The two Palo-Alto bred pacers, Peruvian Bitters and Prussian Boy, to the best of my recollection, were sold before commencing their pacing career, at least D. McCarty had Peruvian Bitters. Prussian Boy was from Prussian Maid, and she paced as long ago as 1873 in 2:19—7½ seconds faster than the record of her son.

I have noticed with a great deal of interest the youngsters exercising on the miniature tracks at Palo Alto. I did not think of looking for tendencies to pace, but if any such inclination were shown I failed to notice it. Hereafter closer attention will be given, and if I have started on a wrong trail will work back to the true spoor, but until then have no hesitancy in promulgating the theory that the system pursued, especially the early stages of education at Palo Alto, has had a greater effect in correcting the pacing habit than ancestral influence.

WHEW!!!—During the meeting at Independence, Iowa, in October and November last, embracing some fifteen days, there were upwards of four hundred races—if races they can be called—for purses of $15 each. Sixty of them in one day, and on another day fifty-two, while on one of the days in which two races of thirteen heats were decided there were forty of the $15 kind.

Nearly, if not quite 600 heats in all, and a good ten pages of Wallace's Monthly taken up with the summaries. Right smartly must the business be managed in those short October days to get through with all that work, and those who handled watches and kept things running must be handy, very handy to fill their posts and have all of the events come off in proper shape. It is almost bewildering to think of such a mass of horses and sulkies, the different colors of the steeds and the rainbow hues of the vehicles. A regular battle of trotting and pacing and without doubt an occasional galloper to incite emulation.

Eighty-one heats in one day; it will not do to talk so loudly about the slow coach of trotting when comparing that and the "legitimate." The fastest mail coach which ever turned a wheel is slow in comparison. A lightning express on a straight reach, a maxim gun, a flight of wild-fowl, anything slower than electricity will be a better measuring stick. Then the economy, sixty bona fide races for $900, $180 a dozen, six for $90, if the gate showed anything like a return for that much sport there should be "millions in it." Shrewdly managed on the part of the drivers, well calculated truly. Forty-two of the sixty races were won so that "insatiable archer," or rather mower, as old Tempus is usually delineated with a scythe, his hour glass obsolete, was nowhere in the fight. Knocked out? Not quite, for as hard as he was peppered he was ready when the next bout was called. A gallant old fellow, and one must sympathize with him when he is hit forty-two times in sixty, and then there were such close shaves that it was a harder lick on his nerves than when easily beaten. Irma C., a gray pacing mare by Jim Wilson, essayed 2:18. She paced in just 2:18, but the verdict was "lost." That does not look like a fair shake. The caption is "purse $15, against time 2:18," and when she made 2:18 it had the appearance of a "stand-off." Then, perhaps, he was ready to shake off the tie and the mare declined, so it will not do to claim that he "stood in with the judges," and then again she was only a pacer, and a pacer that can't beat 2:18 is of no great account.

I was somewhat envied at Stockton when there could not have been one quarter of sixty races in the afternoon, and, excepting when lowering a "world's record" was the essay I could not enthuse worth a cent. And even then it was a quiet sort of enthusiasm, a listless excitement, a half thrill, a sip from a goblet, a steak without mustard, an oyster without salt or pepper, a Welsh rarebit with cream cheese, a turnip in place of a peach, root beer for burgundy, tolinas water for champagne. I saw Arion open such a wide gap on all the previous two-year-olds that that was settled for good in favor of California, and gratifying as it was, it would have been far greater pleasure to see him beat Monbars in five seconds' slower time. Sunol and Frou Fruo and Fausta I did not see climb to their high elevation, and the day of my last visit to Stockton Palo Alto fell a second short of the mark he afterwards made.

I watched him limping on that ailing leg, and prayed that in place of the galloping horse by his side there were Allerton and Nancy Hanks, Nelson and Axtell, Delmarch and even Hal Pointer to make sure of a good pace from start to finish. One score in that company would be more potent than near so many minims of cocaine. One race with these same horses would be better worth seeing than all the trials against time that will ever be trotted. Suppose it should take place in Chicago, that central point above all others to bring people from the Kennebec to the Sacramento; from Portland on the far East to Portland on the far West; from Tennessee to Manitoba; from the Red River of the South to the Rio Colorado of the North; from ——— to breakfast, as an old friend loved to say when he was at a loss to express boundaries of the furthest limit in any other phrase. That would be a race, and there are plenty other horses to take part in races that will start the blood bounding and the heart beating quickly. But should the craze continue, sixty $15 purses in one day, and ninety-nine "prize cups" at a meeting held in a locality where breeding trotters is one of the main pursuits of the people, it appears to me that there is a dark cloud hanging over trotting sports, and although there may be rifts through which are seen glimpses of the silver lining, it would be far more satisfactory to have a few patches of the blue sky in view to cheer its votaries.

Nil desperandum! ere long, in all probability, there will be a surfeit, a glut of prize cups and $15 purses, a place in the list not highly valued unless accompanied by stronger testimonials than a few pieces of silver or a pewter mug, honest sport with everyone ready to join in the fray and do their best to advance the interests depending upon straightforward work on the tracks, and then such popularity as will insure assemblages that will favorably compare with the crowds which throng the race courses and elicit an enthusiasm which cannot resist the inspiring effects of a hard and close fight clear to the winning score.

ENLARGE THE CIRCLE.—There is a clearly defined circle in the Stud Book. Blue is the color which prevades the whole area and, to blood alone, is awarded the certificate. Not of a lapis lazuli tinge, as is shown by the admission of Arabs and other nondescripts whose only claim come from reputed birth in and exportation from a land in which there is not a single horse of native origin and native blood which could win in fourth-rate company on any of the noted racecourses of Europe, America or Australia.

Performance is the open sesame in the trotting register, to some extent at least, and the time is bound to come when performing horses, tested by actual racing, horses against horses, and not the fantasy of a race in which shadows are the competitors. Enlarge the circles then which inclose the breeding of fast trotters, make the school as large as the views, whims or favoritisms of the multitudes engaged in breeding trotters will carry the classes, and then enforce a stricter examination, demand a high rate of capacity before issuing the certificate.

But there is little danger in widening the points of the compasses so as to increase the sweep of the circle when breeding fast trotters is the field to be circumscribed. The winning strains will occupy the first place, and the victorious lines of the future may be new combinations denounced, ridiculed, held of no account by the wise men of the present.

There is great potency in new blood, and however strong our fancies and predilections may be for the old lines, a strange mixture has a chance to blend with it so harmoniously that the flavor of the whole will be improved.

MORE THAN TWO.—In the February number of Wallace's Monthly is the following note: "The only thoroughbred mares in the great broodmare list are Dame Winnie and Mamie C. Both of them are owned at Palo Alto." To these can be added:

Lizzie Whips, by Enquirer, dam by Vandal.
Whips, by Electioneer 2:27½
Linnet, by Electioneer 2:29½
Sire, Whips 2.
Cuba, by imp. Australian, dam by Lexington.
Cubic, by Electioneer 2:28½
Dam of Cubilan, two years 2:22
Annette, by Lexington, dam by Grey Eagle.
Ansel, by Electioneer 2:20
Sire, Ansel 3.
Emma Robson, by Woodburn, dam by Belmont.
Emaline, by Electioneer 2:27½
Emma R., by Electioneer 2:28½

These are also owned at Palo Alto, and there may be others:

On page 520, Year Book 1890, is Jean Wood, by Melbourne Jr., dam Itasca, by imp. Hooton.

Clermont, by Almont 2:20¼
Dams of Curror Bell 2:29¾
Glycera, three years 2:25

THEN AND NOW.—In referring to the "Old Spirit" of 1839 for information regarding the Bloomsbury affair, I ran across the report of a colt show, Roanoke, Virginia, held May 22nd of that year. Eighteen two-year-olds were exhibited ranging in height from 4 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 3½ inches, the one that got the premium being 5 feet 2¾ inches. He was by imp. Emancipation, from Volney's dam; the yearlings, fourteen of them ran from 4 feet 4 to 4 feet 10½ inches, and the premium was given to a colt by imp. Sarpedon, his dam by Shawnee. The show was held at Boydton, Va., for thoroughbred colts and fillies, and the account states that there were breeders and turfmen from all parts of the State. Sixteen of the two-year-olds were 15 hands or over, so that they would be considered a fair-sized lot at the present time, but the yearlings fell a good deal short of California colts, and it would not be a difficult job to find on the 20th of May next 18 California-bred yearlings which would average as much as the Virginia two-year-olds.

Reminiscential.

"Come out and see the new improved Caffrey sulky I have; it is the best one I ever saw," was the invitation of that great reinsman, Orrin A. Hickok, to some visiting horsemen from the East the other day. This invitation reminded me of a little experience that Mr. Hickok had many years ago, and which he will verify. Perhaps few of our readers are aware of the fact that to Mr. Hickok are all trainers and drivers indebted for the inclined seat on sulkies. When he was many years younger, he was working for H. N. Smith, in New Jersey, training a number of trotters, and one day he went over to Camden and gave an order to Chas. Caffrey for a sulky. The seats of all sulkies were made perfectly level, and were very hard for a driver to keep his feet firm in the stirrups, owing to the inclination of the driver to slip backwards. Before the day of the race in which Mr. Hickok was to give this sulky its first turn at a fast clip the guards that held up the inside of the seat were accidentally broken, and it became necessary to splice the uprights that held it with ropes. This, of course, lowered that portion a few inches, and after Mr. Hickok got his blankets on it and started to drive he discovered that he could take a better hold of the horse, and, in fact, he could drive better. After he won the race he asked William Doble, Budd Doble's father, to get in. The old gentleman did so, and was perfectly delighted. Mr. Hickok had the sulky sent over to Mr. Caffrey, and told him to make him a new sulky and put the seat at exactly the same angle as the broken model. Mr. Caffrey would not listen to such an innovation, and replied: "Mr. Hickok, really I cannot do it. You must remember the reputation of my sulkies, and to send out a sulky with a seat in that position would injure my trade." "Never mind the rest of your trade, Mr. Caffrey," replied the horseman, "you make one exactly as I ask you to, and the trade can take care of itself. You will have to make all your sulky seats at that angle yet." The light vehicle was finished, and every trainer and driver who sat in that one ordered duplicates of it. The straight-seat sulkies became a drug on the market, and had to be changed. From that day to this the inclined seat has been used by all sulky manufacturers in America.

General John E. Turner, of Philadelphia, came to California by the last steamer via the isthmus, and departed for his Eastern home on the steamship San Juan last Thursday. As a conditioner, trainer and driver of trotters and pacers he stands in the very first rank. He is the best of company, and has the way of telling a funny story that many of our minstrels love to imitate. Wherever he goes he is always sought after, and the way he interlards good common-sense and wholesome advice between his narratives leaves an impression on the minds of his listener that is not easily effaced. The other evening a number of well-known horsemen were sitting in the Palace Hotel, when someone asked By. Holly if he knew James E. Turner. He replied, "Yes, I used to know him very well, but I have not seen him since 1877. I must tell you when and where I first met him. Away back in 1862 I was at Adrian, Michigan, attending a race meeting, and the society, to add more glory to their already increasing fame, advertised a trotting race, three in five, between May Queen and Primus, two trotters that afterward came to California, and are remembered by all the old turfites. I was quiet young at the time, but remember distinctly the way they spoke of a great driver that was to come out and drive the Queen. Primus was the reigning favorite for months, and had proved to be quite a racehorse; consequently, he had plenty of backers, and heavy betting was the order of the day. I stood near the inside fence and noticed a crowd of men, young and old, standing around an intelligent-looking little man, sitting on the fence telling them funny stories. He kept them all roaring. I knew he was a stranger in that part of the country, for I believed I knew everyone. I wondered who that fellow was, and why he was endeavoring to hold the horsemen's attention while everyone, excepting those around him, was excited with expectation. Imagine my surprise, when the horses were stripped in front of the judges' stand, to see him get up behind May Queen and win easily in three straight heats. That pleasant little individual was John E. Turner."

A great many horsemen are interested in the pedigree and history of Marion, that was the sire of Lady Narley (dam of Empress, 2:29¾, and Fawn, record 2:30½), trial 2:22. Dr. M. W. Hicks told me he was a dappled brown horse, strongly resembling a thoroughbred. At the time that Alexander's Abdallah was captured by the guerrillas this horse was stolen also, and although the former died, Marion, having more "whalebone" in his composition, recovered. He was permanently injured, however, and taken to Iowa and stinted to but two mares that proved themselves standard. They were the John Bull mare (the dam of Lady Narley) and Mahaska Belle (dam of Fawn and grandam of Frou Frou and Memo). Marion was by Mambrino Chief 11 out of Mary by Sir William Wallace, he by Sumpter, by Sir Archy, out of Grecian Princess, by Blackburn's Whip, etc. Mary's dam was by Stockholder, he by African out of Viola. African was by imp. Onus, out of Nancy McCoy, by imp. Leviathan, out of Mary Lowe, by Pacific, etc. Marion's breeding was similar to Mambrino Patchen's, being by Mambrino Chief 11 out of of a thoroughbred mare.

"So Shippee's Henry Clay is dead," was the remark of a well-known citizen of this city who used to live in the Napa Valley years ago. "Well, well, poor old fellow. He was one horse among ten thousand that, if placed in the calvary, would have been a model for all the others to pattern after. When you said 'whoa!' he would stop and stand as perfect as a bronze statue, and when you told him to go, he never dropped his lofty head, but stepped out as boldly and proudly as a drum major on dress parade. He was a good sire of stylish horses. His breeding could not be called fashionable; he was sired by McCracken's Black Hawk, out of a mare that was brought across the plains by an emigrant. His progeny was noted for style, conformation, excellent limbs and splendid disposition. He must have outlived his usefulness, but, in the recollection of all his old admirers, his presence will be recalled with pleasure." ARNAREE.

FARM ANIMALS.

Official Statistics of the Agricultural Department.

WASHINGTON, February 21.—The Agricultural Department has issued its annual report upon the numbers and value of farm animals in the United States. It is a conservative statement, in some instances falling below the census reports. The following are some of the figures: California—415,059 horses, valued at $26,010,045; 54,574 mules, $4,077,548; 290,521 milch cows, $7,829,541; 602,904 oxen and other cattle, $10,481,663; 4,033,531 sheep, $9,884,211; 512,424 hogs, $2,741,675. Oregon—226,545 horses, $9,911,171; 4,741 mules, $281,343; 106,122 milch cows, $3,653,050; 797,051 oxen and other cattle, $13,000,000; 2,456,000 sheep, $5,492,000; 227,400 hogs, $982,000. Washington—170,500 horses, $10,018,000; 1,371 mules, $96,000; 96,600 milch cows, $3,382,000; 44,700 oxen and other cattle, $9,346,000; 687,000 sheep, $1,860,000; 152,140 hogs, $988,000.

The report says of California: "The aggregate number of horses is slightly above that of January 1, 1891. While the quality has been greatly improved during the past ten years by the introduction of better breeds, prices at present are depressed owing to the supply being greater than the demand. A great deal of work heretofore performed by horses is now done by railways and machinery, which is no doubt another cause of this depression. Mules are about the same in number as last year, and the demand is somewhat better than for horses, as is also the price. While milch cows remain about the same as one year ago, oxen and other cattle have materially decreased and prices are lower. The number of sheep is also less, but prices have been higher. Hogs have not diminished, and the supply is about equal to the demand."

Australian Horse Notes.

We secured the following news items from the last Sydney files:

THE great sire, Chester, seems to have been well represented.

AUTONOMY, two years, by Chester from Aveline, won the Flying Handicap, six furlings, with 88 lbs. up, in 1:15, the Surprise Stakes, six furlongs, with 112 lbs., in 1:15, and the Juvenile Stakes, five furlongs, with 135 lbs., in 1:03.

MOONRAY, two years, by Chester from Moonstone, won the December Stakes, five furlongs, with 117 lbs up,, in 1:02½; the Christmas Handicap, five turlongs, with 134 lbs., in 1:03.

TRIESTE, two years, by Chester from Temper, won the Carlington Stakes, eight furlongs, 104 lbs., in 1:14½.

ETHELBERT, by Goldsbrough from Ethel, by Yattendon, won the Holiday Handicap, one mile and three furlongs, with 102 lbs., in 2:27.

THE GIFT, by Somnus, from Little Wanzer, won the Selling Plate, one mile, with 88 lbs., in 1:41¾.

ALCHEMIST, by Sardonyx from Penitent, won the Pace Welter, six furlongs, with 142 lbs., in 1:16, and the "New Year's Gift," six furlongs, 123 lbs., in 1:16¾.

RIVULA, by Welcome Jack, from Nurian, with 101 lbs. up, won the Nursery Handicap, five and one-half furlongs, with 110 lbs., in 1:11½, and a Nursery Handicap of five furlongs with 115 lbs., in 1:03½.

WE notice that Ethelbert is a Goldsbrough from Ethel, by Yattendon—the same lines as that black horse Merriwa, now located at the Bay District Track. Yattendon is also the sire of Chester, who sired Autonomy, Moonray and Trieste.

SARDONYX, sire of Alchemist, is by Fireworks (sire of Goldsbrough), and the dam's side traces to the same family as the greatest of Australian thoroughbreds.

THE GIFT, who won the Selling Race, is by Somnus, sire of Del Mar, while Rivula is by Welcome Jack, whose sire was Traducer, the sire of Sir Modred, Cheviot and Idalium. It will thus be seen America is securing the best of blood from the Antipodes.

Rich Trotting Stakes.

Pacific Coast owners of trotters should read over the advertisement of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association, Lexington, Ky., in another column, and enter liberally at this great racing center without delay. Entries to Kentucky's Futurity Stake, $25,000 guaranteed, to be trotted in 1894 and 1895, close March 15, 1892. There are several features about this stake that should not be overlooked. In the first place it is the largest guaranteed stake ever given for trotters, and its payments are fewer in number than any stake of the kind ever proposed. It takes but one-tenth of one per cent to carry a colt to year of race, and the beauty of it is that no large payment falls due before the colt has been thoroughly tried. Then, too, if your colt fails to win in the first he can, if you desire it, be entered in the second, and the $10 paid on mare and $15 on foal makes your youngster eligible, and no further payment is necessary until June 1st of the year the colt is to start. All the money, if there should be an excess, will go to the owners of horses placed and the nominators of dams of winners—nothing to the association. The track at Lexington is one of the fastest in the country, and the members of this Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association are representative men who are aiming to make it possible for the trotter to win as much as the thoroughbred. Read their advertisement and study it well.

L. U. Shippee's Stock.

The Shippee catalogue for 1892 is at hand. It is a well-gotten-up volume of 198 pages, containing a good picture of the premier trotting stallion Hawthorne; also of the great mare Tempest, 2:19. There is some grand stock catalogued within the covers, and the thoroughbreds, as well as the trotters, are bred in the purple.

S. K. TREFRY is at Lodi with Dinah, 2:26½ and a "green" one by Director Prince. Mike Costello arrived from Tacoma, with Mr. Chamberlin's stable. He has gray gelding, Harry T., 2:24¼, Joe Wynn (runner), and two "green" ones by Dexter Prince. John Pender has sold the black stallion Director Jr. to J. A. McDonald, superintendent of the Orphan Asylum, San Rafael.

A. L. WHITNEY is going to sell all of his well-bred broodmares, colts and fillies in a few weeks. Since the death of his brother, Mr. Whitney finds that he has no time to devote to his horse interests.

The Right Kind of Starting Judge.

As an example of what he would like to see at all trotting meetings, J. Malcolm Forbes cites the method of one which he has recently attended in Kentucky, where F. H. Walker was the starter. Here, with a large field, there was not a race where they scored more than three times, and this was all due to the method of handling the drivers by the starter. Get men who know just what they want, he says, and with the ability to enforce it, and the public will be more anxious to attend. To get these men it would be necessary to pay a high price in order to make it an object to them, but the results would amply justify such a course, he thinks, and the demand would create the supply. He does not want to see the judges displaced at all, but he wants the starter to be the man who shall act as the mouthpiece of the judges, and who shall have complete control of the track for the benefit of the whole.

In one instance of Mr. Walker's handling of a race, to show the authority which the starter should have, the horses were all on the track, and he called the drivers up to the stand and commenced to tell them what he wanted in order to get the race off well.

"We came here to race, not to listen to a lecture," spoke up one of the drivers.

"I fine you $10," said Mr. Walker.

"Well, give us the word and let us go," said the driver.

"I fine you $25," came the answer, "and if you make another remark I will bar you from the track."

That ended all interruption and the drivers quickly saw that they had a man to deal with who would put up with no nonsense. As a consequence they carried out his orders immediately, and there was but little of that scoring which is so tiresome to an assemblage.

Mr. Forbes also wishes to see a rule adopted whereby any horse not winning one heat in three shall be barred from further attempts in a small field, and five heats in a larger field. This also he does on behalf of the public, on whose interest he believes that the whole future of trotting races depends.

Although he has two of the fastest trotters of the age—phenomenal ones, in fact—he does not venture any predictions as to what time will show or to the nearness of the two minute horse. "With the improvements in breeding, to say nothing of the improvements in appliances, it is impossible to see what is coming. I have no doubt," says he, "that we shall soon have sulky wheels made of aluminum as well as the horses' shoes, and the reduction of weight will materially lower the time."

Australian Clydes.

By the Mariposa there arrived four very fine Clydesdale stallions bred in New Zealand, brought here for sale by Mr. P. Mangan. We inspected them at the track and give our readers the benefit of our inspection. They are very fine individuals, and, what is very important, are eligible for our Stud Book.

Champion is a beautiful bay, rising four years, stands 16½ hands (weighs 1900 pounds; his sire Lord Salisbury was imported to New Zealand at a very high price, dam Blossom, by Prince (imported to New Zealand); second dam by Lord Lovett. Lord Salisbury was a great prize winner in Scotland, and New Zealand.

Prince, by Prince Charlie (imp.), dam Princess Maude, the First, the champion mare in the colony of New Zealand, was the winner of 18 first prizes in Scotland and several in Victoria (Australia). Prince has also been a large prize winner.

Young Lion rising four years is a dappled brown, with white hind legs, very symmetrical and active and must weigh 2000 pounds; he is by British Lion out of Nell, by Hero, out of old Jean, by Emperor out of an imported mare.

British Lion, by Argyle 2567 Vol V, dam Darling by Prince of Wales (673 Vol. 1) and tracing to the very best of blood in Scotland. Hero is by Lincolnshire Hero, who is by Young Honest John etc.,

Young Lion won first prize as a foal; a champion as a two-year-old.

Esk Bank is a magnificent black, stands seventeen hands, and weighs 1900 pounds. He has very good action and beautifully proportioned. He is by Spring Bank, dam Pride, by Prince Charley a c. Spring Bank is by Young Banker, one of the highest-priced horses taken to New Zealand. He was a large prize winner in Scotland, and never beaten in the colonies.

Waihemo Tom is a very neat, bay horse, rising five years, with perfect action, weighing 1800 pounds, by Kyme Tom from Maggie, by Young Hero from Curly, etc. This horse is of the celebrated Honest Tom 1105 family and must make a great stud.

These horses are well worth inspection and should prove of great value to our native mares.

MR. ED. F. SMITH, Secretary of the State Agricultural Society, in a communication to this paper last week, states: "We have set our dates the first Monday in September, as has been the custom for years past."

Whether or not it has been the custom for years past, or whether the statement made in these columns last week that the State Fair had pushed its dates a week earlier into the summer was incorrect, is shown by the dates in which the State Fair has opened during the following years:

1891	Monday, September 7th
1890	Monday, September 8th
1889	Monday, September 9th
1888	Monday, September 3rd
1887	Monday, September 12th
1886	Monday, September 6th
1885	Monday, September 7th

The above goes to show that the custom has been to open the State Fair in the second week of September and not on the first Monday in that month.

ATTENTION is called to Baker & Hamilton's advertisement in this issue. Their specialties in wagons and mowers are unexcelled on this coast; the prices asked for them are so low that farmers cannot, in justice to themselves, afford to do without them. The Bain wagons are known and esteemed everywhere, while the improved Adrian Buckeye mowers need no praise; they have cut their way through fields of opposition, and are still in the front rank as serviceable, light-running and effective machines.

THE advertisemnnt of Fred W. Loeber's clearing-out sale of fine broodmares, colts and fillies will be inserted in our advertising columns next week. Look out for it.

The worst attacks of indigestion Simmons Liver Regulator never fails to relieve.

TURF AND TRACK.

The dam of the trotter Godelia, 2:19½, is to be bred to Director, 2:17.

Longfellow's service fee this year is $1,000, with no return privileges.

W. H. Smith, of this city, is now in New Orleans with old John Treat and Fox.

The old-time trotter Wells Fargo, 2:18¼, is being driven on the road in Michigan.

The Montana crack, Poet Scout, has arrived at the Louisville track, and will go into training at once.

A kite-track will be built at Memphis, Tenn., and a big meeting given after the Columbia and Nashville meetings.

Do not forget to attend to the closing of entries for the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association's fall meeting.

John A. Goldsmith, the popular and famous reinsman, will leave New York for his home in this State about March 1st.

W. H. Wilson, Cynthiana, Ky., has received from California the three-year-old bay colt Kaffir, by Alcazar, dam by Arthurton.

Thomas O'Brien, one of Marvin's first trainers at Palo Alto, is now with him in the employ of Miller and Sibley of Franklin Penn.

Harry E. Rose, son of L. J. Rose, of Los Angeles, has the honor of putting the first horse in the list in 1892—Bric-a-Brac, 2:28¾.

There will be a convention held on the 22nd of March at Ellensburg, Washington, for the purpose of organizing a State Breeders' Association.

The ancient race course at Epsom, England, over which the "Darby" is run, is to be remodeled at last and a mile straightaway provided.

McKinney, 2:12½, is being bred to some great matrons. Minnehaha, Almeh, Lucy R., 2:18½, Semi-Topic and Tempest (dam of Glendine) are among the number.

We regret to announce that William M. Murry has sustained a serious loss in the death of his handsome colt by Prince of Norfolk out of imported Royal Bess.

Chester Wood brought a fine colt to Hollister race track last week to be trained by Pat McCartney. The youngster was sired by Eros, dam Eva, and is named Rienzi.

By a dispatch from Registrar Steiner, Chicago, we learn that the Year Book will be ready for delivery February 27th. Copies will be received in this office about March 3d.

Thomas Keating has quite a string of good horses wintering at the Lodi track. Among them is Frank M. The owner of Turk Franklin sent that fast pacer to him last week, also.

The notice about the Pierce sale is already attracting the attention of stock-farm owners. Many of them are "laying low for bargains," and the probabilities are they will get them there.

Theodore Winters has been elected President of the Nevada State Agricultural Society and C. H. Stoddard Secretary. The Fair will be held at Reno from Sept. 19 to the 24 inclusive.

Khartoum, the handsome black stallion by Soudan, has been sent to his owner's stock farm, near Milpitas, to make the season. Lee Shaner looks forward to the return of this trotter to his string.

Balkan, 2:15, is now at the Oakland track in charge of his trainer and driver, A. L. Hinds. After he has made a season he will be handled again for speed. That he will lower his record is conceded by all.

William Corbitt, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, has sent in his resignation as a Director in the P. C. T. H. B. Association. A number of names of prominent horsemen have been mentioned to take his place in the board.

Dennis Gannon has a colt by Grover Clay, out of Miss Sydney, by Sidney; second dam by Hambletonian 725; third dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31; fourth dam Queen (sister to Alexander's dam), by Brown's Bellfounder.

A number of excellent mares are booked to Eros this season. People who want to get the highest price for their colts are trying to follow the example of the best breeders of the East, and are going to breed to the very top.

Dr. Hicks will start East soon. He intends taking all of his stock to Indiana, where he will live hereafter. Dr. Hicks' many friends in Sacramento are sorry to lose him, but wish him happiness and profit back in the Hoosier State.

Walter Maben, of Los Angeles, has a "green" four-year-old mare called Edenia, by Endymion, dam by Mambrino Abdallah (sire of Geneva S., 2:19), that is going in such great shape that he thinks 2:15 will not stop her this year.

The Directors of the Napa Fair Association are to have telegraphic communication between the track and this city at their next fair. This is a much-needed improvement, and will meet with the approval of all newspaper men.

The veteran trainer, Cy. Mulkey, writes us that he is not training Theodore Winters' horses at Washoe, Nev., as was reported, but will go East with Mr. Winters, as the latter had car-room for himself and the great sprinter, Tim Murphy.

Mr. J. S. Ferguson, the man that bought Baby Mckee for Mr. Frederick P. Olcott at the recent Kellogg sale, for $25,000, remarked afterwards that he was authorized to go as high as $50,000. He kept his secret well, and the owner can credit himself with $25,000 saved.

Alfred Lakeland, the owner of Brown Charlie, has bought a filly that will bear watching when she comes up in any of the two-year-old events. She is called Faithful, is by Longfellow out of Miss Primrose, and is the most promising filly Lakeland ever handled.

James Dwain, the lessee of the Salinas race track, has a force of men at work with a huge scraper leveling the stretches, which had become low in the middle and high at the sides. When this is finished and the turns have been properly thrown up the track will be a fast one.

The name of the yearling colt by Electioneer out of Beautiful Bells that Miller & Sibley recently bought for $25,000 has been changed from Election Bell to Belsire, owing to the fact that his full brother, also owned by them, has been registered under the name of Electric Bell.

Matt Storn's horses are looking well at Sonoma, and the string, Topgallant, Centella, Marigold, Honshell, Mystery and two Friar Tuck youngsters, should cut quite a figure at Denver and the East during the coming season. Mr. Storn is a painstaking horseman, and deserves success, at any rate.

Monroe Salisbury arrived last Tuesday from Kentucky, and every time he returns to Pleasanton he thinks more and more of his stock farm. The East is a good place to make money in, but everything else is in favor of California. Some day this State will hold its own as a market for fast ones, too.

Marcus Daly will race some youngsters at the Denver spring meeting. His representatives are by Sir Modred, Joe Daniels, Hidalgo, Alarm, Tom Bowling, imp. Springfield and Glenelg. From the list of horses booked to compete for the various stakes at Denver, it should be a rousing race meeting.

The new English plan of having three separate handicappers estimate the weights for one of the early handicaps in England has produced most astonishing results, the wildest variances of opinions having been made public. In one instance there was a difference of fifteen pounds in the allotments.

The trotting mare Mae S., by Nutwood out of Alicia, by George Wilkes, that Miller & Sibley bought last week for $7,000, will be bred to Electric Bell this year, thus uniting the blood of five of the greatest brood mares—Green Mountain Maid, Beautiful Bells, Minnehaha, Miss Russell and Alma Mater.

One of the simplest and most comprehensive circulars issued this year is the work of Wilfred Page, of Penn's Grove, who advertises his fine stallion Eclectic in a way that is commendable, We understand that he has had numerous offers for the stallion from Eastern breeders, but will not send him away this year.

"Sandy" Smith, the well-known trainer and driver who was with Charles Marvin before his departure East, and latterly has been working for O. A. Hickok, left on the last steamer for Portland. Sandy is a good, careful man, and will be quite an acquisition to the number of good horsemen in the Webfoot State.

Guide, 2:16¼, the handsome son of Director, 2:17, and Imogene, is now at James Sutherland's place at Pleasanton. A number of mares will be sent to him, for such choice breeding is most valuable, especially when the sire is a proven racehorse and one that has earned the title of being the fastest trotting son of the Black Tornado.

E. R. Smith, the well-known Los Angeles turfman, informs us that Bric-a-Brac made a trotting record of 2:28¾ and Fred Drake one of 2:26½ at Los Angeles, instead of Stockton, on January 20th, as we stated not long since. Harry Rose drove Bric-a-Brac, who is a daughter of Alcazar, 2:20½, and Walter Maben held the reins over Fred Drake.

E. R. Smith, of Los Angeles, has purchased of Robert Brown, Petaluma, Cal., the game trotting mare Mattie P., 2:27¾, by Jackson Temple, dam by Tom Hyer Jr.; second dam by Ben Franklin; third dam by Bucephalus. The mare is in fine shape, and although she will be bred to McKinney, 2:12½, Mr. Smith expects to race her this season.

The Supreme Court of New Jersey, on the 18th inst., affirmed the conviction of A. H. Battersby, C. V. Sass, W. A. Engeman and George Engeman, the controlling officials of the Clifton Jockey Club, who were last year each sentenced to a year's imprisonment and a fine of $500 each for illegally maintaining a race track at Passiac, N. J.

There are now eleven Australian stallions in service in California.—Darebin, Sir Modred and Maxim at Rancho del Paso; The Hook at Santa Anita; Plenty at Mrs. Wolfskill's; Suwarrow at Menlo Stock Farm; Mariner at Colonel H. I. Thornton's, Trade Wind and True Briton at San Simeon.—Chesterfield and Loyalist at Souther Farm.

William Thornton, of Rancho Resaca, is not only a well-posted young turfman, but a genius as well. This week he presented us with a splendid, unique pen-holder which he manufactured out of one of the great James Madison's shoes, for which we are truly thankful and full of wonderment because no one ever evolved this nice idea before.

L. P. W. Quimby, of Portland, says that the prettiest horses he saw while in California were Macleay, record 2:22½ last year as a two-year-old, and Freedom, who made 2:29¾ as a yearling. L. P. W. himself owned Mamie Comet, Macleay's dam, who is by Nutwood, 2:18¾, and sold her to Mr. Ellis, and he in turn disposed of her to Mr. Corbitt.

The Seventh Annual Fair and race meeting at Walla Walla, Wash., will be held on the grounds of the society at that place September 26th to October 1, 1892, inclusive. The speed programme, to be announced later, will provide for purses aggregating from $5,000 to $6,000, as the class of horses in the circuit and public interest may warrant.

The sharp competition between the managers of the different circuits and trotting associations to secure attractive programmes for their patrons promises to work a revolution in trotting-horse affairs. Stake races are becoming more popular, and it should be apparent to all that every big meeting must have one or more valuable stakes in order to keep up with the times. Stake races secure the best fields of starters, prove more interesting to spectators, and are the drawing cards to every meeting that gives them.

G. E. Harrison's big bay colt, Kylo, by imp. Cyrus, dam Kathairon, is now quartered at Sacramento race track, and we have been told that he is going to prove a hard nut for anything in the country to crack during the coming season. He will be campaigned at the East, and his work over there will be watched by hundreds of California admirers.

John Hunter, the trainer of Yorkville Belle, thinks that filly will be as good a three-year-old as was La Tosca, and she certainly ought to be, for she was as far superior to the two-year-olds of her sex as was His Highness to his. She is phenomenally fast and has legs of steel. Last fall she ran a three-quarter trial at Brooklyn with full weight up in 1:14.

Al Hankins has just returned to Chicago from an extended visit to California. He has been looking over the chances for a protracted winter running meeting at San Francisco, commencing December 1 next, and thinks it would be a paying investment. There is a possibility that the Garfield Park Club may take hold of the enterprise.—The Horseman.

Millard Sanders has an able assistant in his younger brother, who recently came from the East. This young man is a born horseman, and has shown the same thoroughness and care in handling the colts and fillies at the Valensin farm that is so characteristic of his brother. We would not be surprised to see him on the California circuit with a string of fast ones.

The Helena Association will put up $20,000 for seven days' racing, and Great Falls announces $15,000 for five days. Deer Dodge and Missoula have not been heard from. There will be about two months of racing on the Montana circuit this year. The regular programme of races will be issued some time during March. There will be several purses worth from $1,000 to $1,500.

The Eureka Jockey Club claims July 4th to 9th, 1892, as the date of their race meeting. It was the sense of the meeting to give during the 4th of July week such inducements that will give the said race meeting the largest number of running horses present from all sections of the State that has ever been in Humboldt county. Programme will be ready by April 1st.

R. Porter Ashe, the well-known turfman, has sent a string of nine of his best horses for winter and spring training to the Modesto track. The horses are being managed by Mr. Ashe's trainer, Mike Kelly. The names of the horses are as follows: Geraldine (aged), Queen Alta, Pisano, Dinero (three-year-olds), Sir Reel, Don Fulano, Alta Mio, Unalaska, and Panchila (two-year-olds).

A number of horsemen are talking of visiting the black stallion, Director Jr., that J. McDonald has at the Asylum Farm, San Rafael. About a year ago Mr. Salisbury tried very hard to get his owners in Oregon to let him take the horse, but they would not break up his season there. Director Jr. has a great name among the horsemen of our sister State, and his absence will be keenly felt by them.

William Simpson of New York, who owns the Empire City Stud at Cuba, N. Y., has booked his mare Appoline, by Sidney, out of the dam of Little Brown Jug and Brown Hal, to Direct. The produce will be by a trotting-bred pacer, out of a mare whose sire is a trotting-bred pacer, yet whose dam is a trotter, and there will be considerable speculation as to whether the foal will be a trotter or a pacer.

A couple of years ago there were five sons of Electioneer standing in Sonoma county in this State. Three of these are now standing in the East, one has been removed to San Francisco, and the fifth Eclectic, full brother to Arion, 2:10¾, is now probably making his last season in the county and State. Boston has Arion; New York holds Baby McKee and Kentucky wants Eclectic, "just to keep in the swim, you know."

There is a strong movement on foot among the most prominent members of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association to have B. C. Holly reinstated. The new law adopted will prevent a repetition of the offense he was charged with, and, as that law was not in force at the time he was suspended, all liberal-minded people believe that the sentence was too severe and that he should be reinstated at once. We heartily concur in this opinion.

W. J. White purchased the bay horse Elected, by Electioneer, for the Two-minute Stock Farm at the Woodard & Shanklin sale Wednesday. He is seven years old and out of the dam of Don Marvin, 2.28. His second dam produced Clifton Bell, 2:24½, and the famons brood mare Rebecca, his third dam is a sister to Sweepstakes; his fourth dam is Emma Mills, the dam of Sweepstakes, Independence, Glenair and Camille, dam of Stevie, 2:19.

T. J. Lynam, of Tacoma, once had the distinction of owning a horse that cost him a dollar a pound. It was the famous imported Pierre, which he bought of Jim Lynn, of Salinas, California, and which took first prize there in 1887. Lynn paid $2,250 for the horse and sold it to a Mr. Stillman. Four days after the horse would have been bought of Stillman for $2,500, but he refused to sell. Shortly afterward the horse died, and left Mr. S. short $2,500.

George W. Woodard, of Woodland, was in this city last week. He was very sanguine over the prospects of the year, and said that the new track at Woodland will be much better than it was last season. He has had a number of men and teams working on it. Some time during May there will be a race meeting there that will be worth attending. The fair this year will be held at Marysville, and the people there are going to make it a grand success.

There seems to be quite a demand for McKerron's Perfection Bit if one is to judge by the large number that are made and sold every month. Every driver and trainer, as well as every owner of a hard-mouthed puller, says that it is the simplest, most harmless and best bit they ever saw, and horses can be driven steadier with it than anything of its kind yet devised. Large orders from the East prove that its efficacy and simplicity is appreciated there.

Dr. K. D. Wise, of Los Angeles, will send a string on the Montana circuit this season, consisting of Rory O'Moore, pacer, 2:19¾; Glendine, 2:20; Adelaide McGregor, 2:29¾ at two years; Adelaide Simmons, by Simmons, 2:28, dam Adelaide, 2:18; Eva McGregor, by Evermont, dam by Robert McGregor; Emin Bey, by Guy Wilkes, dam Tempest, by Sultan. The doctor has a great driver in Ed. Connolly, formerly of Denver. Connolly is a desperate man at a finish.

THOROUGHBRED-OWNERS intending to race their horses at St. Louis' spring meeting (April 30th to June 3rd) will do well to write the secretary of the A. & M. Association, C. W. Bellairs, telling him just how much stable room will be needed. In this way horsemen from this Coast will be sure of good accommodations for their strings. There will be a great meeting at St. Louis, for horses are already there in great numbers.

LAST Monday as the well known horse Del Rey, belonging to J. Martin, was being exercised at Woodville, one of the wheels of the sulky to which he was attached came off. It naturally scared the horse, which ran a distance of two miles, dragging the driver a distance of a hundred feet and bruising him up considerably. The horse then ran into a wire fence, but did not get cut very badly, and was finally caught.—Porterville Enterprise.

REGISTRAR STEINER is getting many blessings from breeders all over the United States. A gentleman from one of the most prominent stock farms in this State complains that he has had more trouble in registering colts and fillies this year than he ever had before. He showed us where he had applied for registration for a colt by Guide, 2:16¼, out of a standard, registered mare, and was asked to give the names of every breeder of every dam of Guide, a standard horse with a record.

WISECARVER & Schoonover last week sold their fine trotting stallion St. Patrick 2:31¼, by Carr's Mambrino, dam by Dan Voorhees, to a syndicate of horsemen in Mendocino county, and shipped him to his new home the early part of this week. St. Patrick is a game trotter, of fine style and finish, and will prove a valuable stock horse, as his new owners will soon find out. We congratulate them on their purchase, which at the figure reported, $1,000, is dirt cheap.—Salinas Daily Journal.

CAPTAIN BEN E. HARRIS has quite a string of horses at the old Villa Stable. Many of the colts and fillies comprising it are by the Electioneer stallion, Stanford. He has one filly (a yearling) that we consider the fastest and finest-looker he ever owned, and if he gives her a fair show and does not have her beating all the records in March, he will have something to go to the races with this fall that he can drive home in front of a barrel of money. She is a trotter from the ground up, and is a credit to her breeder and owner.

A SERIOUS fire occurred at Thompson's stock farm, fifteen miles from Louisville, Ky., on February 11, when the main barn and twenty-one horses were destroyed. The most valuable animal lost was the four-year-old chestnut stallion Torrington, by King Rene, dam Oxygen, by Princeps. The animals were all young, mostly fillies, and were to be trained for trotting. Mr. Thompson thought he had one or two record-breakers in the lot, and estimates his loss at over $20,000, with no insurance. Only one, a filly, escaped from the barn, and she was badly burned.

THE three-year-old colt Ralph Wilkes, that made a record of 2:18 last fall as a two-year-old, has been sold to a Boston man for $30,000. The purchaser is John E. Thayer, President of the New England Trotting-Horse Breeders Association, and the removal of so well-bred and fast a young stallion to New England is a distinct gain to the breeding interests of that part of the country. Ralph Wilkes is by Red Wilkes, dam by Mambrino Patchen, thus combining the strains of blood that have produced Axtell, Allerton and other notable members of the Wilkes family.

TOM SNIDER, of Sacramento,has sold to J. H. Estabrook, of Denver, Colorado, his crack two-year-old by Mortimer, 2:27 (son of Electioneer), out of Clara B. by Nutwood. Electioneer-Nutwood blood is in demand everywhere but in Cotahti. Mr. Estabrook has picked up a good nugget of that strain, hard to duplicate. The youngster rolled off quarters in his yearling form so easily in 38 seconds, that if quickly acclimated to the rarified atmosphere of Colorado he should glide into the 2:30 list this summer as a two-year-old and make a mark attained by no grandson of Electioneer's to date.

PETER C. KELLOGG ("Hark Comstock") will hold an auction sale in Chicago, commencing March 8th. Consignments are sent to him from Monroe Salisbury, who sends thirty head, the get of Director, 2:17, Direct, 2:06, and other good ones. L. J. Rose sends fifteen head, the get of Stamboul, 2:11, Alcazar, 2:20½, and Redondo. D. M. Reavis, of Chico, sends seventy head, the get of Blackbird, Signal Wilkes (son or Guy Wilkes), Mambrino Wilkes and Noonday. L. U. Shippee, of Stockton, sends twenty-one head, the get of Nutwood, 2:18¾, Hawthorne and other good sires.

EVERYONE who attended the last day's meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association last fall remembers the bay Algona gelding belonging to Capt. Millen Griffiths that paced a half-mile so fast down the backstretch, and wondered why he was not given to a trainer, will be pleased to hear that Mr. Starr has this side-wheeler in his string, and thinks he will be able to pace a pretty good mile this fall. The sire of this horse is at Haggin's Stockdale ranch near Bakersfield, and has sired a large number of wonderfully fast "green" ones that will ripen about the time the races are called.

CHAS. KINGSLEY is 'appy, quite 'appy, sir." His favorite road horse, Allie Whipple, became lame in one of his forelegs, and all that veterinary skill could do seemed to have little effect; finally, after the lameness had run its course, the soreness left, and Allie was able to be driven over the roads. Two months have elapsed since he first started out of the hospital, and no one has ever noticed the game roadster give a lame step. We congratulate Mr. Kingsley on his good fortune in having Allie recover, although his recovery and reappearance has put all the "would-be kings of the road" in the shade.

MONBARS, 2:16½, the champion trotting stallion of 1891—that is, in races—has been pronounced out of all danger by the attendant veterinarian. No more faithful attendant could be found than the young man who has had him in charge for weeks; he has had but a few hours' rest each night. It must be a relief for him to observe his pet's recovery. Every day he leads him out to pasture and watches the brown youngster nibbling the sweet grass and getting new strength from the balmy air of Pleasanton. Mr. Starr believes he will be able to go East with the rest of the trotters about the first of March.

WILLIAM M. MURRY has rented the excellent racing quarters, box stalls, paddocks, and foaling boxes near Sacramento that were formerly used by Theo. Winters. All breeders who send their mares to be bred to Three Cheers will be sure of having their animals well-fed and cared for, and as there is no barbed wire around, there need be no fear of having any of the stock injured. Three Cheers never looked or felt better, and applications for the services of this grandly-bred sire of game racehorses are coming from all parts of the State. If there is any class of horsemen that appreciate the value of a good sire it is the owners of thoroughbreds.

L. J. ROSE has returned to Los Angeles from San Francisco,where he has been attending the meetings of the World's Fair commissioners from this State. While here Mr. Rose made quite a deal with Dan McCarty. He gave the latter gentleman Dubec, three broodmares and $1,000 in gold coin for a broodmare by Richards' Elector and two of his fillies by Dexter Prince. Mr. Rose is very enthusiastic about Dexter Prince. He was shown several horses of his get, and they all showed great speed. James Dustin, the well-known driver, says that all the progeny of Dexter Prince handled by him have been wonderfully speedy. Dexter Prince has been hidden away at Lodi, and has had little or no opportunity as a sire. The dam of the fillies secured is probably the most fashionable mare ever bred to Dexter Prince, yet this mare has not even yet been broken.

UNDER date of Feb. 5, W. R. Allen writes from Pittsfield: "I have sold the four-year-old bay stallion Electrite, by Electioneer; dam Sprite, dam of Sphinx and Egotist, to Henry Exall, of Dallas, Tex., at a very good price. He will be shipped to Texas to-morrow." Electrite was purchased when a yearling at Palo Alto, and the price paid for him was $5,000. It took some time to get him acclimated after his transfer from California to the Berkshires, and so his speed has not been developed. He belongs however to a great speed-producing family. His brother Sphinx, has a record of 2:20¼ and is the sire of Gift O'Neer, two-year-old record, 2:24¼. His other brother, Egotist, has a record of 2:22½, and is the sire of Betsy Britton, three-year-old record, 2:29½. Sprite is the dam of three in 2:30, and her dam, Waterwitch, is the dam of five with records from 2:19¾ to 2:24½. Electrite is a valuable young stallion and he should make his mark in Texas.

VAN B. DELASHMUTT, of Portland, at a recent meeting of the North Pacific Trotting Horse Breeder's Association, suggested the expediency of collecting data for a history of Oregon's pioneer horses and horsemen. They are fast dying out, and statistical information about them will be valuable in the future. Great interest is even now taken in the history and pedigrees of George, Leviathan, Lumax and other horses. The same may be said of Lute Savage, Put Smith, and other men, the old-timers, of whom the association should have short biographical sketches. Dr. Harris agreed with Dr. DeLashmutt in all particulars but one. "What is everyone's business is no one's business," he said, "and I believe a committee should be appointed to take charge of this matter. I move that the chair appoint a committe of five for this purpose." Judge Galloway seconded, and the motion was carried.

A SUBSCRIBER sends the following item: "Mr. Corbitt in condemning the BREEDER'S Aspirant Stakes as being 'for second and third-class colts' may or may not be correct; but he should remember that those second-rate colts are perfectly willing to be pitted against the Regal Wilkes and Leo Wilkes produce and are just as apt as not to give them a race, too. As neither of the stallions named stands at a second-class fee, we are inclined to think Mr. Corbitt's hasty condemnation a trifle severe on his own stock. It is none of our business, we admit, but we think $2,500, even a $1,000 fee, a considerable trifle too much for any horse, whatsoever his record, until he has proven himself a producer, and an exceptional producer. It does not look well for horses to stand at $1,000 and then see their colts sell for barely that sum and often less. Let us go a little slower, gentlemen, in fees; don't forget that colts often sicken and die."

THE horsemen of Northern California ought to get together as early as practicable and hold a convention to deliberate over the circuit. With as many fair and racing dates clashing as there do now, there are not horses enough to fill all the purses, nor people enough to supply respectable crowds. The fair associations cannot, under these circumstances, offer larger purses nor charge less entrance, and horsemen find no inducements to train, even if sure of winning money in every race they start in. It looks as though the fair associations will never agree among themselves as to what should constitute the circuit; we therefore recommend that the horsemen take the matter in hand and invite representatives of the associations to meet and confer with them. If the former will hold and pull together, the associations will soon fall in line; both will profit by it, and ere long we shall have a circuit worth following. What say you, gentlemen, and who will take hold of this matter?

WE want to caution young breeders against the "glamourie" of performance, i. e. "records"—performance without "blood," will not breed on; blood without performance may;—blood with performance "close up" almost invariably will. By "close up" we do not mean that the sire and dam must themselves be performers; William L., Patronage, Nutbourne and a host of others go to prove that full brothers to great performers, if bred right and of sound constitution, will get as great and may be greater speed than their performing brothers. If full brothers or sisters fail to breed equally well, under equal opportunities, it is not because of one having a record and the other none, but because one has inherited to a greater extent, i. e., has bred back to the traits of some less potent and more remote ancestor. A horse that trots fast is entitled to a great deal of credit and becomes valuable; a full brother that does not trot yet transmits speed with greater certainty than his trotting brother is far more valuable. Records read well; breeding on pays better.

THE docking of horses' tails by anglomaniacs who ape English manners and customs should be made a criminal offense, punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year. Nature provided the horse with a tail to brush off the flies, mosquitoes and other insects, just as the Creator furnished man with hands to protect himself. There are no mosquitoes and scarcely any flies in Great Britain to bother animals. A man who will wantonly cut a horse's tail should be compelled to stand on a sugar dock in hot weather with his hands tied behind his back, and he would then know the agony and torture a poor horse suffers with nothing but a stump of a tail to drive off these pests and tormentors.

ANOTHER "phenom" has made its appearance in our midst. It is a nine-months old bay filly by Commodore (better known as Jack Dempsey), dam by Dawn, 2:18¾. The second time this miss (who by the the way is not much larger than a good sized St. Bernard dog) was hitched to a sulky she went an eighth of a mile driven by Lee Shaner in 23 seconds, and is improving wonderfully all the time. She is an inch higher over the hips than at the withers. Every trainer and rubber at Bay District track swears that this is the fastest youngster on earth, and go in ecstacies over her. Her sire is by Sidney, 2:19¾, out of a Grand Moor mare, while through the dam (by Dawn) comes a Nutwood cross. This accounts for the early speed shown in this baby trotter. The filly is entered in a number of rich three-year-old trotting events.

THE St. Louis A. & M. Association is happy over the way the Californians have responded; at least we should judge so from the letter we received from Secretary C. W. Bellairs, in which was said, among other things: "The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN has done us yeoman's service as to our running meeting, and through it we have more Coast entries than we dreamed of. California owners should acquaint me at an early date of the strength of the strings they will bring and the probable date of arrival. We shall have an enormous number of horses in St. Louis this spring and summer, and would like to make sure that every Californian will leave thoroughly satisfied with the accommodations he has received. The East St. Louis racing has brought hundreds of horses to this part of the world, and though many of these are skates, the strings which contain them hold stake horses which warrant a demand for stable room as soon as it comes our turn to race." An association which tries so hard to please its patrons deserves the greatest success, and we are also glad to see that our efforts in their behalf are appreciated.

THE brigade of trotting-horse trainers loses one of its most prominent members by the death of James K. Newbro, which occurred at Fashion Farm, Trenton, N. J., last week. Mr. Newbro was born in Ohio thirty-nine years ago, but early in life moved to Indiana, where when little more than a boy he became identified with the profession in which he was afterward so successful. In 1880 he went through the Grand Circuit with the pacer Sorrel Dan, and won during the season eleven races with that horse, giving him a record at Buffalo of 2:14. In 1890 Mr. Newbro drove the horses of the Angliana Farm at Lexington, Ky., and gave Angelina her four-year-old record of 2:19¼, and showed a public mile with the two-year-old Constantine in 2:21. In 1891 Mr. Newbro trained the Western division of the Jewett Farm string,and was very successful, putting no less than nine of his string in the 2:20 list and reducing the record of Elko from 2:29 to 2:20, and that of Heilo from 2:27 to 2:20½. After the termination of his engagement at the Jewett Farm Mr. Newbro engaged to train at the Fashion Farm, but had scarcely installed himself in his new position before he was stricken with an attack of pneumonia, which proved fatal. In his profession Mr. Newbro was hard-working and ambitious, and was a pronounced favorite among his fellow-trainers.

THE last of the two hundred shares of stock of the proposed Kern Fair Ground Association were subscribed for last Saturday, and the matter is now ready for incorporation. The capital stock of the organization is divided into 200 shares of a par value of $25 each making a total of $5,000. To this will be added the appropriation of $2,500 from the State for the coming Fifteenth District Agricultural Fair, which is to be held here, giving a capital of $7,500 upon which to commence operations. This means that Bakersfield and Kern county will have a fair worthy of the name and the county. Realizing there is no time to be lost a meeting of the subscribers to the stock has been called for Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at The Southern Hotel for the purpose of effecting a permanent organization and arranging for the incorporation of the association. At this meeting proposals for the lease or sale of land on which to locate the fair ground and speed track will be received, and it is understood that several large land-owners are in competition to secure the location of the grounds and hence will probably make such propositions to the association as will practically mean the giving of the land rent free for a term of years.—Californian, Bakersfield.

JOHN F. TURNER, who made his first visit to this State last week, is wintering the following horses at Ambler Park, near Philadelphia: Santa Claus, b s, 2:17½, 17 years old (sire of Sidney, 2:19¾, who got the champion yearlings Frou Frou, trotting record 2:25½, and Fahsta, pacing record 2:22½), by Strathmore, dam Lady Thorne Jr., 2:25½; Happy Bee, br m, 2:17¾, the great four-year-old of last season, by Happy Russell, dam Beeswing; Mambrino Hannis, b g, 2:16½, by Hannis; Abbie V., 2:18½, by Aberdeen, dam by Peavine; Nevada; br m, no record, by Santa Claus; Wanita, r m, 2:20½, by Aberdeen, dam Wyoming Belle, by Low's Pilot; Balbriggan, b g, by Indiana, dam by Seely's American Star; Cora F., b m, 6, record 2:24½, by Kentucky Prince, dam Topsy; San Mateo Maid, br m, 2:28½, by Santa Claus, dam by George M. Patchen Jr.; Kate Ryan, br m, five years old, by Cornelius, dam Miss Ryan, by Nephew; Siglight, b g, 2:22½, by Signal; Happy Lady, br m, 3, by Happy Russell; Robin (pacer), b s, 2:20¼, by Vatican; Daylight, b s, by General Benton, dam by Electioneer; Jupiter, br g, by Steinway; Pubillo, b m, 6, by Mambrino Startle; bay colt by Cornelius,he by Nutwood, dam Miss Ryan, by Nephew; Dudley Alcott, ch c, 4, by Albert W., 2:20 (sire Little Albert), dam Cecilia, by Poscora Heywood; Bellina, blk s, 5 years, by Artillery, dam by Harry Clay; brown colt, 3 years, by Santa Claus, dam by Whipple's Hambletonian; Willow, blk c, 2 years, by Simmicolon, dam Ivy, by Buccaneer; bay gelding, 6 years, by Kentucky Prince, dam by Seely's American Star, also bay colt, 3 years, by Alcantara; bay stallion, 7 years, by Washington, and numerous yearlings by Santa Claus, Happy Russell and other sires. It will be seen that a number of California-bred trotters are in his string.

THE GUN.

THE SAN FRANCISCO GUN CLUB.

The Opening Meeting of the Season—One of Exceptional Sport.

The opening meeting of the season at the trap of this splendid organization was one which will not soon be forgotten by participants or spectators.

The conditions were about as perfect as one could wish them to be. The conditions of earth and sky were such as to make the heart glad and the body comfortable. The sunshine and showers of the past two weeks had made haste to prepare for Spring's coming and had spread over the Shooting Park and the adjoining hills a carpeting of fresh, green grasses upon which she shall soon softly tread as she breathes sweetness and beauty to flower and shrub and vine.

The main body of sportsmen took the ten o'clock boat and shortly after 11 A. M. arrived at the grounds where the sport at once began and with but a short hour for luncheon continued until evening.

The attendance was very large and the shooting, on the whole, fairly up to the mark for the opening event of the season. Every one knows that even the short months intervening from one trap season to the next is enough to throw good shots out of form and it requires some time to get the "hang o' the thing" as the saying goes.

The birds were only an average lot at best and in many instances were most aggravating as they fluttered and hopped about the traps.

The intervening good ones however were in marked contrast to these poorer birds and the way they cut out the "line of flight" was all too swift for the average eye to catch over the double barrels. Many a sportsman imagined that he was shooting at the right spot where the rapidly rising angling bird would meet the charge of shot only to find that the bird had passed the point by several feet before the charge of shot had reached that point.

Mr. C. D. Laing is one of the best shots in this club, but his first bird, a right quarterer, managed to elude his aim and sailed away. His eighth also was undershot and while "feathered" with each barrel managed to sustain its course outside the bounds.

Mr. John O. Cadman's second bird fell dead out of bounds while his fourth escaped as did also his ninth.

Mr. H. Black is one of the reliable shots of this club but his first fluttered over bounds before it fell which his ninth and tenth escaped, the last of which fell dead out of bounds.

Mr. F. S. Butler hit a great many of his "lost birds" but not hard enough to cause them to check their course within bounds as frequently as his skill in holding would warrant, although several of his "lost birds" fell dead out of bounds.

Mr. Ed. Donohoe was not in his usual form and consequently came below his usual mark, though eight out of twelve with two "lost birds" dead out of bounds is away above the average.

Mr. J. H. Jellett's second bird was a swift one and sped out of bounds though hit hard with each charge, his fifth and sixth also escaped, the former hard hit.

Mr. E. W. Chapin's second fell dead out of bounds, his third, an incomer was undershot and his fourth, a driving right-quarterer, escaped from same cause, as did also his eleventh which, however, was hard hit.

Mr. R. A. Eddy did some remarkable work with his first barrel. He has a gun which appears to be phenomenal in its killing powers. He does not hurry; is not particular as to the distance but if "onto them" the birds usually drop. His second bird fell dead out of bounds, three others escaping one of which was well hit with each charge at long distance.

Mr. W. J. Golcher is entitled to the undisputed honors of meeting as he is the only man out of the twenty-four presenting a clean score. He had some "luck" as his eleventh bird which was a swift right-quarterer being hard hit with each charge, it still managad to keep a-wing until it came in contact with the top rail of the enclosure when it fell dead inside the grounds.

Mr. F. W. Swett gazed longingly after his fourth bird which fell dead out of bounds while his two succeeding birds escaped, one of which hard hit wobbled about in erratic gyrations until over the fence where it fell. On pulling up to shoot his tenth he found his gun slide unadjusted and a look of vexation spread over his face as he saw the bird winging away, but just before the bird reached the boundary liue it turned and came back over the traps where it fell an easy prey to his gun which had, in the meantime been adjusted.

Mr. A. C. Tubbs lost four out of his first dozen, two of which fell dead out of bounds.

Mr. F. W. Tallant lost his first and seventh birds, the latter being hard hit.

Mr. R. B. Woodward, one of the old reliables, allowed three of his first dozen to escape.

Mr. Fred Wooster was shooting a different gun every time he approached the trap and consequently secured corresponding results.

Mr. J. Downey Harvey never fails to extract more pleasure to the square inch from a day at the trap than anybody else, this was no exception to his general rule and if half his score shows shooting the other may be said to represent fun.

Mr. Geo. Leviston, while only securing five out of the dozen birds fired at in the main match, did better than his score indicates, as a number of his escaping birds were hard hit.

Mr. Wm. Kittle allowed his eighth and ninth birds to escape, although each of them were hard hit and one of them dead out of bounds.

Mr. J. M. Kilgarif started out with three nice, clean, kills, and was the recipient of many hearty congratulations, but he turned about and allowed the next three to escape, keeping up this ratio until the close.

Mr. J. K. Orr, the old, reliable stand-by of the club, saw his first bird sail out of bounds before falling; his second and third went on the "outside," one of which fell dead also, when he "picked up" and grassed them all neatly unto the twelfth, which escaped.

Mr. F. K. Webster lost his first, eighth and ninth, one of the latter falling dead out of bounds.

Mr. R. H. Sprague found three of his birds dead out of bounds, which spoiled a really good score.

Mr. F. G. Sanborn followed the latter-named gentleman in scoring a like number of birds dead out of bounds, while hitting many more of his birds, they seemed to delight in getting away.

SUMMARY.

Oakland Shooting Park, February 22, 1892.—The San Francisco Gun Club's first match of the season for the club's prizes and medals for the season of 1892. Mr. F. S. Butler, President; Mr. John O. Cadman, Vice-President; Mr. J. K. Orr, Secretary-Treasurer; C. W. Kyle, Referee. The score:

* Means dead out of bounds.

A sweepstakes, three moneys, nineteen entries, was then shot off. Sprague, Swett, Cadman, Orr and Donohoe dividing on clean scores.

Jellett, Orr and Cadman divided the next pool, in which there was fourteen entries. Jellett, Swett and Eddy divided the next pool on clean scores.

An elegant lunch was served at the instance of the club by that veteran sportsman's caterer, Mr. James Vance, Steward, of the "Athenian" Club of Oakland. The spread contained everything in the line of refreshments that could be wished for, and every one enjoyed it to the highest possible degree. The day will not soon be forgotten on account of its pleasurable features.

Lessons From Nature.

There is a peculiar sweetness in the hills. They seem to act upon the heart as a magnet, drawing out the feelings and sentiments in such a way as to reveal some new impression, sensation and subtle intelligence from time to time. One never becomes acquainted with their better selves until they take a schooling from the hills. The ultimate storehouse of all wisdom separate and apart from any form of human intelligence is in the broad lap of Nature. In her secret vaults; locked securely within the fastness of her hills. In cloud and sky; in the tiny blade of grass; in the rose and violet, and the thousand forms of beauty and sweetness of plant and vine in which Nature is continually expressing her varied impressions, feelings and emotions.

It is a most pleasurable and interesting study to go abroad and note the different effects which different situations in Nature produce upon the heart and mind. Here the soft, sweet influence of a scene of restfulness lulls one to feelings of tranquility and repose. Rest is as clearly conveyed by the imperceptable, yet powerful influences of the scene as though spoken in audible tones, and from its constancy is far more effective. Here the soft and perfectly blended robings add a beauty to the colorings of another scene which renders it enchanting. We breathe a prayer of adoration in the presence of this wonderful expression of loveliness. It takes hold of us by invisible cords—cables is a better name, they are so strong—and they draw us down to the feet of this enchanting goddess, Beauty, and we worship her with willing hearts and souls aflame with the touches of her magic wand. Perhaps, if our mood be analytical, we choose some fractional part of the scene—a violet—tiny, adrip with a farewell tear that has fallen from Night's dark lashes as she relinquished her vigil by its side when Morning's first heralds came glancing over the eastern hills. How beautiful it is nestled, half hidden in its setting of fern and moss and wild vine. Half, aye, and even more of its charming beauty lies in the harmony of its surroundings. Do you know that to me it always seems that there is an unmistakable union between sight and sound, taste and odor, color and form, the real and the imaginative? If the wind be sharp and keen, color takes on a more metallic hue; if balmy and pleasant the colors become more deep and intensified. So the violet, in its lone, mossy dell, surrounded by the tangled mattings of wild grasses, overhanging ferns and soft substratum of velvet mosses, is tenfold more beautiful than if considered in any less natural surroundings. These scenes of Nature's, striking and pleasing for their beauty, are the only presentations that can be properly appreciated when considered by the analytical method—that is, item by item.

You cannot so consider a picture. You must take that as a whole and judge of its merits by the effect produced and guage that effect—compare it to the effect produced upon your mind by looking upon the original or studying the principle of which the picture is the artist's embodied conception. But nature is multum in parvo at all points. None so little but there is a lesser; none so great but that it is a part of a greater, although the limit of human conception may be readily reached without running the scale of increasing dimensions but a very few ratios. The golden sunlight throwing the silhouettes of bough and leaf upon the emerald carpeting, which suggests a poem in every motion as the trees are stirred by the wingings of the breeze; the clear notes of the mating birds, which tell of bird-love as plain as spoken language, while these lovers by nature wedded busy themselves about the preparation of their home, which undisturbed by outward strife is crowned by the richest of all earthly gifts—parentage—is all beautiful. The laughing brook, babbling over its pebbly bed, singing night and day, voices aloud of Nature's beauty. The pines sing a low, soft lulaby of love, and a thousand voices join the song of celebration and rejoicing—all, all, are beautiful and arouse a sentiment within the human heart that no other scene can do.

Approach the ocean; look out upon the grand swell of its ever restless waters; listen to its never-ending song. What a sense of vastness comes to the soul as you gaze out over its heaving expanse. Power! Force! Vastness!

These are its impressions, lasting, deep, ineffaceable. We cannot solve its meanings; we cannot fathom its impressions; we cannot analyze its teachings; we cannot know the human heart; we know little of ourselves.

We go into the mountains. We approach them from afar, and from the moment our vision reaches out and brings their reflection unto us, we are cast under their strange influence; majestic, solemn, unapproachable. We draw near them; we clamber over their forms yet do they weight us down with their great spirit of mystery. We sit at their feet and learn of our littleness; beholding something of their strength, we catch a glimpse of our weakness; comprehending something of their endurance we are impressed with the fleetness of our being.

The key to true growth, true pleasure and lasting enjoyment lies in the study of nature.

Care for the Pigeons.

The matter of securing pigeons and having them presented from the trap in a normal condition as to strength and activity has been one which has occupied the attention of secretaries and managers of the several wing-shooting clubs. Thousands and thousands of pigeons are annually secured for this purpose, and it would seem that it would be but just that the parties furnishing the pigeons for the large number of clubs in this city and vicinity should take at least reasonable and ordinary pains such as a prudent man would do in the conduct of his own affairs, in furnishing the several clubs with good pigeons; but time after time the clubs have been compelled to put up with a poor lot of half-starved and dirty pigeons, among which "duffers" are all too frequently found for the pleasure of the sport. Next to shooting a good, strong bird, no pleasure is greater to a true sportsman than seeing some other sportsman grass a bird of like quality; but to attend a match where time after time pigeons that refuse flight from the trap, ignoring all means provided for securing a rise from them, the sport ceases to be such, and becomes extremely monotonous. So great was this annoyance during the past year that several clubs of the city, at the instigation of the California Wing-Shooting Club, have taken steps to protest in most positive language and terms against the methods now and for years past in use, of housing the birds too closely to permit them to remain in a normal condition as to strength and cleanliness. It is to be hoped that the action already taken and this timely and extremely temperately-worded notice will be sufficient to cause a decided change in the care given to the pigeons that are secured for the purpose of these trap events. Naught has been set down with malice, but in accordance with a plain business proposition that when men pay a good round price per dozen for pigeons which are represented to be first-class for trap purposes, and there is no reason why they should not be so furnished, that they have a right to demand that the birds be of first-class quality. A word to the wise is sufficient, as the clubs will unquestionably take other means of securing their birds than those used in the past if the above suggestions are not promptly and thoroughly complied with. Have a good, clean, roomy place for the birds where they can fly about. Give them plenty of clean sand and water and they will keep in good condition if properly fed. There would be few if any pigeons that would refuse flight if these suggestions were complied with.

To the Sportsmen of California.

The State Sportsmen's Association of California invokes furtherance of the objects of its organization.

At the time the Association was called into existence, 1882, the game and fish laws of California were a dead letter on our statute books and were wholly disregarded in every county of the State. Through its endeavors exclusively, by reason of criminal prosecution instituted and carried on in many counties in California is due their present recognition and enforcement.

The officers of the Association earnestly desire to continue its usefulness as aggressively as in its earlier years of existence and as every citizen as well as sportsman in the State is personally and directly interested, your alliance and co-operation is earnestly asked.

The cost of joining the Association with full priviledges of membership is nominal—($1.00 per year.)

All information desired will be promptly furnished by addressing the undersigned, care of the "Breeder and Sportsman," San Francisco California.

By order of the Board of Directors.

C. W. Kyle,
Secretary Cal. State Sportsmen's Association.

The E. T. Allen Company.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 15, 1892.

To our Friends and Customers:—I am pleased to advise you that the firearms and sporting goods business, established by me in this city in 1875, is this day incorporated under the name of E. T. Allen Company.

This change in organization rather than management, gives me the opportunity to thank you for the very generous patronage you have given me, and which I assure you is fully appreciated.

The new company, under my management, will continue the business at 416 Market street, San Francisco, and for it I solicit your further favors. Very respectfully yours,

E. T. Allen.

The principal officers are E. T. Allen, president; H. P. Capell, vice-president; H. E. Skinner, secretary and under new and enlarged form we doubt not but that the popular patronage of this leading house will be rapidly increased.

The business will continue at 416 Market street, where for so many years the sport-loving public have found supplies for their every want when preparing for an outing with rod or gun.

Mr. Crittenden Robinson returned the forepart of the week from a visit to Inyo County where he found an abundance of quail and had the pleasure of bagging a fine lot of them.

The Selby Medal contest takes place to-morrow at Bird's Point. The sport opens at 10 A. M. There will be a large attendance.

The Country Club holds its first regular meeting for the season to-day.

Unfailing in effects, always reliable, pure and harmless, is Simmons Liver Regulator.

Howls.

The Mascoutah club of Chicago have overdone themselves this year. By the way I notice out Collie Kennel of the far west—The Carlowrie Collie Kennel of Denver was there and secured two seconds. Go it!

How some men can blow—give them half a change to jump on to some person who has had the affrontry to say something different from the usual channels of thought and Gee Whiz, how brave and smart they are—to let them tell it—why, man alive, you would think from their majestic and passionate display (in the columns of the press) that they were capable and would really take the wrongs and errors of the entire dogdom by the tail and hurl them into oblivion at once. Witness the last row and bubble which arose over the present field trial methods by the number who came out and aired their grievences in the American Field and abused the trials and everything else in full, you, who are not posted on such wind vampirs and would really believe they meant what they said and that they were simply awaiting a chance to procuce money and dogs ad libitum to found a trial,on methods after their own hearts—that is according to the effusions which have appeared of late—Oh, foolish mortal, don't you know these people? Don't you know their one ambition is to see their name in cold type? To be able to point out to their local admirers that they have replied to so and so—and knocked him out, too? Now just call them on their own ground as Dr. DeMonco of Sioux Falls, S. D., did in the American Field of February 13th, make them a cold cash business proposition and stand ready to back it up, and watch how soon the smell of sulphur will subside. I venture the Dr. has had not one reply to his communication—not one—Dogdom is sadly cursed with a class of newspaper contributators whose sole aim is to tackle some one they deem ineficient to cope with them, and then abuse and throw mud and slime. Bah! such men and articles are paralyzing to the olfactorys of all decent folks.

* * * *

Five to one, Mr. Watson will meet with the same results in his proposition. His proposition is short, concise, and means simply business. Now watch them sneak away as do the Jackalls from the first ray of returning daylight, howling, snaping and snarling around all night, but sneaking, stealing and crawling when the time comes to be seen clearly.

* * * *

How long will those who own valuable dogs continue to publish such ridiculous cuts of them? See the cut of Cincinnatus in the field week February 20th; looks as much like the dog as it does a tom-cat. I have seen the dog and know what I am howling about. Cast your eye on that outline; don't you grow a wee might weary? I do.

The Continental Kennel Club of Denver originated the special prize for best five, one breed at their first show. Last year they originated a handsome special (case) for the largest and best string entered by one handler. All the specials have been copied by the great and progressive East. Mascoutah gave a special this year to handler showing largest string. Come, boys, set them another one for this year. Verily, if you need progress, come out West and you will find such in all the walks of life. The East can only copy—never originate.

A Letter from Mr. Mason.

Mr. Charles H. Mason appears as follows in the Fancier's Journal of current issue:

"In regard to the judging of the shows in the far West and about which there appears to be both interest and anxiety, allow me to clear away the cobwebs that had gotten into some folk's eyes. Having been in correspondence with the clubs for many weeks, it is probable that I am in a position to know of what I am writing. The reason, and the only reason, why I am not going to two of these shows is not be ause they wanted anybody else, but because my terms were higher than the clubs are in a position to accept. As I hold proof in support of this statement there need be no guessing and no more misrepresenting."

We take this opportunity of saying that the California Kennel Club of this city and the Southern California Kennel Club of Los Angeles "are in a position to accept" anything which they might desire and that no want of financial backing has compelled or induced them to do otherwise than they have thought best. Selah.

In the foxterrier classes this week at New York, the competition has been very close. In the Challenge Class Blemton Victor 2d fulfilled the expectations of Mr. Belmont by winning first, beating the best lot of terriers ever exhibited in United States, namely, Raffle, Raby, Mixer and Lucifer. In the Open Class Starden's King, Mr. Thayer's recent importation, won first, Blemton Rasper and Blemton Reefer, second and fourth.

The Italian Greyhound.

Among the most beautiful of pets stands the Italian Greyhound. These beautiful creatures are superior in many respects as pets, to almost any other breed of dogs. However, pets are subjects purely of fancy, and as such each one can only select for themselves. The followiug rules are given by an old fancier as being the ones governing as a standard this beautiful but much-neglected breed:

The Italian Greyhound should have a long, fine head, as flat on the skull as can be got, but never fluted.

The eyes dark, round and full, but not prominent, they should not have the bright, alert look of the greyhound proper, but the soft, languishing, timid look of a fawn or gazelle; this expression is very important, as I look upon it as a peculiarity and a distinguishing characteristic of the breed.

Ears small and thin as possible, with the rose carriage, but not the rose carriage of the Bulldog, where the interior of the ear is seen from the front, but owing to the general timidity of the breed, the lower half of the breed is thrown slantwise backwards, showing the interior of the ear from the side.

Neck long, slender and arched, starting from the occiput with a graceful curve to the shoulder, and rising from thence with a graceful circular sweep right to the second thigh.

Chest very deep, deeper than the larger species, but not so far through. A large Greyhound, twenty-five inches high, would measure in girth 29½ inches, a proportionate line can be taken for the Italian, the depth of the latter equalizing the width of the former.

Legs straight, with feet like a cat, if possible; still this can scarce be expected from the lack of exercise; a round foot is not of so great importance as in a large Greyhound, but a splay foot, that is long and open like a claw, should amount almost to a disqualification.

Hind legs should be muscular in first and second thighs, and the latter broad, shortness of hock is to be desired in all running dogs, and particularly worthy of notice; as is also a preponderance of muscle on the inside of the thigh from the vent downwards; in large Greyhounds of great speed, this muscle will be found so developed as to give the dog an ungainly straddling walk when seen from behind.

Tail of fair length, thin, and carried with a graceful sweep, a ring tail is bad.

The coat should be soft, short and fine as possible.

Color, self colors are the most desirable, but whatever the color, it should be bright and distinct, not smutty or dirty.

The general appearance should be that of delicate grace and beauty, a lady's drawing-room pet, and fit only to be touched by the most tender hands.

From Mr. Davidson.

MONROE, Mich., Feb. 15, 1892.

KENNEL EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Dear Sir:—I notice in your report of the California Field trials that you state Lady Trippo is from the kennel of Mr. Davey, and I also noticed in one of your daily papers she was from the kennel of Avant. Now, I bought this bitch for Mr. Higgs, and shipped her to him from here and think it very unjust to her breeder to be robbed of his honors; therefore, wish you to state that she was bred (and owned previous to my purchase of her) by I. Kime, V. S.—Chatham, Ontario—and has no Gladstone in her, but has in her pedigree blood just as valuable as his. I am a little indignant to think that public kennels should be given credit for the production of an animal bred in a gentleman's private kennel, and believe that honor ought to be given where it properly belongs.

Yours truly, JOHN DAVIDSON.

A Correct Conclusion.

Mr. Mason's letter in another column, says the Fanciers' Journal, might lead our readers to think that Mr. James Mortimer, who was selected tojudge at San Francisco in May, was chosen because his terms were lower than Messrs. Mason, Fellows, Lacy and Winslow who were also requested to put in bids. We know postively this was not the case. It is evident Mr. Mortimer was chosenon account of his unbounded popularity. Ninety-nine exhibitors out of one hundred will agree with us that Mr. Mortimer is the most popular all-around judge in America."

Right you are to a dot. The selection of Mr. Mortimer for judge of the coming bench show in this city was made on no other basis than that he was and is the most available man for the position to be found in the entire country.

Visits.

A. L. Cresswell, San Francisco, Cal., has bred:

Sunbeam, foxterrier bitch, by Rustic (Royston—Silverdale) to J. B. Martin's Blemton Shiner by Champion Blemton (Rubicon—Champion Blemton Brilliant) at San Francisco, on February 22nd.

Whelped.

Echo Cocker Kennels, cocker Spaniel bitch, Maud E. 17065 (first prize winner at California Kennels bench show, 1891), whelped to Bronta 17064 (also won first prize at same show). Eight, five dogs, February 8, 1892.

"H 14,217," Dead.

Mr. Henry H. Leonard writes us from Santa Clara that a carrier pigeon recently came to his place and was killed by eating poisoned wheat placed for killing sparrows. On examination a metal band was found on the pigeon's leg hearing the inscription "H. 14,217."

Mr. W. H. Collin's bull terrier bitch puppy that he recently brought out from Frank Dale's kennels, is reported as being a clinker, if anything, superior to the matured dog. This pair should no much toward raising the standard of this breed on the Coast. The majority of those at the last show were about as near the bull dog as they were the show bull terrier.

Mr. Allen's beautiful St. Bernard California Alton is reported as being quite ill. We trust he will recover in time to cover himself with honors at the coming bench show.

The Mascoutah Kennel Club's bench show was one of the largest and most successful ever held by that splendid organization.

Some time ago it may be remembered New Yorkers took up rabbit coursing with Fox-terriers as a fashionable sport, says the English Stock-Keeper. We tried hard to remove from the minds of its supporters the idea that the miserable pursuit was countenanced by English sportsmen, the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals commenced proceedings, the game was denounced in the House of Commons, and recently Her Majesty has interposed on behalf of the wretched rabbit, but for all the effect this opposition might have produced, the "sport" would probably still be flourishing in New York. Evidently something more convincing was necessary, and according to what we hear from an American friend this has come about. The fair members of the city's "toney" society were in the habit of attending these meetings as one of the correct things to do, and this social duty would have continued, we believe, but for the inconsiderate conduct of one of the rabbits, which showed itself totally ignorant of the rules that govern polite society. This rude creature, being hotly pursued by the terriers, so far forgot itself in a vulgar desire to preserve its life as to bolt beneath the skirts of a society girl who was improving her mind by watching the exciting course. Then ensued a scene which not even the pencil of an impressionist could depict. The rushing dogs followed their quarry into the strange cover, there was a wild confusion, a lightning revelation of millinery, the lady shrieked and jumped, the rabbit squeaked and struggled, and the dogs growled and tugged. When it was all over, the panting terriers removed, the slain carcass borne away, and the fair young creature's garments and nerves properly composed—rabbit-coursing, so far as New York Society dames were concerned, was erased from the list of their refined amusements! So long as the dogs kept at a proper distance while they worried their prey the ladies were able to enjoy the spectacle; and saw nothing shocking in it until the indiscreet animals took liberties with their hosiery and disarranged their toilettes.

Under the Pacific Ocean.

The recent exploration of the Eastern Pacific Ocean in the United States Fish Commission steamer Albatross, furnishes some remarkable data of great interest, says the New York Herald.

The dredging operations in charge of Professor Agassiz, extended from Panama to Cocos Island, and thence by a long southerly and northwesterly circuit to Malpelo Island and the Galapagos. A large number of marine forms frequently met with in the West Indies, were found off the Panama coast—a region largely under the influence of the great Humboldt current, retaining something of its Antartic chillness even after it reaches the Equator. The explorers were disappointed at the poverty of this marine tract in deep sea fauna, especially when they compared it with the ocean washing the West Indies and the southeastern coasts of the United States. "I have little doubt," writes Professor Agassiz to the Hon. Marshall McDonald, United States Fish Commissioner, "that this comparative poverty is due to the absence of a great oceanic current, like the Gulf Stream bringing with it on its surface, a large amount of food, which serves to supply the deep-sea fauna along its course."

The paucity of food-supply on the surface of the Eastern Pacific is not explained by the absence of vegetable drift matter in its circulation. On the contrary, Professor Agassiz says: "In my dredgings in the Gulf of Mexico, off the West Indies and in the Caribbean, my attention had already been called to the immense amount of vegetable matter dredged up from a depth of over fifteen hundred fathoms on the lee side of the West Indies. But in none of the dredgings we made on the Atlantic side of the Isthmus did we come upon such masses of decomposed vegetable matter as we found in this (Pacific) expedition." But these vast deposits, consisting largely of water-logged wood, twigs, leaves, seed and fruits, were buried in the depths of the Pacific. The surface waters were scantily supplied with floating food. The North Atlantic currents circling around its Sargasso bring to it millions of floating islands of luxuriant growths—many individuals covering several acres and together making the grandest of all oceanic herbariums, with an exceedingly rich fauna. Its weedy waters furnish nesting and nutrition for innumerable swarms of pelagic animals issuing thence to the torrid and and polar circles. In sharpest contrast with this sea of plenty it the barren ocean dredged by the Albatross. On several occasions, 250 miles from Cape San Francisco, and still greater distances from Acapulco, the tow net sent down nearly a quarter of a mile came up almost empty.

Professor Agassiz further discovered an extensive absence of coral reefs off the Central American coast. This has been before observed, and has generally been accounted for by the influence or the cold Humboldt current. But the naturalist of the Albatross suggests that it is due to the immense amount of silt which is brought down the hill and mountain side during every rainy season and covers the floor of the ocean to a very considerable distance from land.

Still more striking is the discovery made in the Albatross that there once existed an oceanic connection between the Panamaic district of the Pacific and the Caribbean Sea of the Atlantic. The flora of the Galapagos group in the Pacific is distinctly American, but its fauna is evidently related to the West Indian types, from which it probably originated.

These are the most interesting researches in the deep sea that we have had since the Challenger expedition. And it is fortunate for science that, through the enterprise of Colonel McDonald, Professor Agassiz was enabled to carry them out so successfully.

What can a man make of the Eastern show reports? One paper states that Guess Noble, a St. Bernard bitch, was sold at Chicago for $1,000, and another states positively that the price was $250. Still we must have the reports, for although the reporters can only give their personal opinion of the dogs as judged, the judges often err through carelessness as well as ignorance, and the poor exhibitor has only the reporter to fall back upon for consolation. The again, the buyer that buys by the list of awards would frequently get left if the reporter did not explain things. For instance, a litter of pups were advertised recently, and the owner "cracked up" the dam as one of the best bitches extant. The writer's recollection of her was that she was a very ordinary specimen. At Chicago she won a second prize. A friend said to me "you must be mistaken about that bitch." I replied, "Wait until you read the report." We waited, and the first report received stated that the judges much overrated her, and that she should have have taken fourth place, if not still lower, on the scale. The reports never agree, but then the judges never do either. If they did our shows would not be patronized one-half as well as they are.

The Occidental's Spring Meeting.

The spring meeting of the Occidental Coursing Club, which took place at Newark Park on last Monday, the 22d inst, was one of the most enjoyable meetings ever held by this, the leading coursing organization of the country.

The conditions were about as near perfect as could well be imagined. The grass formed a perfect matting over the park, which looked, and actually was, as smooth and soft as Nature in her most pleasing moods could make it. The dogs dashed over the level green with lightning speed, and throughout the day not a single accident occurred to them, owing to the softness and perfect conditions of the soil. The weather, too, was all that could be wished for, and these conditions, together with the strong leverage of love for the sport, called out a fine body of sportsmen, everyone of whom took an active and earnest interest in the sport of the occasion.

The sport of the day was judged by the veteran sportsman, Mr. J. R. Dickson, than whom a squarer man never sat in a saddle, while Mr. James Wren handled the slips.

The morning mist had cleared away and the sunlight was splashing the verdure-clad hills with golden sheen, the soft, fleecy clouds in their winging, chasing their shadows over hill and valley.

It was near the hour of 11 o'clock A. M. when the field-steward called the first pair to the slips. These were:

Nelly Bly–Prince Rupert.—The latter led to the better for some two or three hundred yards when Nellie made a clean go-by taking possession of the hare and working it for several points. From under her nose sprang another hare and she was led after it, Prince Rupert keeping after the proper one and for this winning the course.

Monarch III–Tom Moore.—The latter played a very even tune with the former during a short sharp course and these dogs were slipped again when the former led off winning with many points to spare.

Twilight–John Mitchell Jr.—The former had the better of a fair course and won easily.

Catherine Hayes–Headlight.—This was a good course, but the former is more than a good one, hence led the "headlignt" easily.

Skyrocket–Dawn.—This pair were slipped to a fleet hare which called out some pretty work. The former led away and kept the better of the course to the close doing most all of the work.

Valley Queen–Depend-On-Me.—This splendid pair of dogs were slipped to a hare worthy of their best mettle and severely it tested them. The Queen came in finally on some excellent work and killed, winning the course.

SECOND TIES.

Prince Rupert–Monarch III.—This was a beautiful course, the latter showing off to good advantage, winning the course after some good work.

Twilight–Catherine Hayes—This was another fine course but the latter was evidently not fully up to expectations while the former spun away like a flash winning the course.

Skyrocket–Jenny G.—The former had the better of a very excellent course which was closely contested.

Valley Queen–Kathleen.—This course excited the liveliest interest and it proved fully up to the first expectations. The former up to this course had never been beaten in the slips and would not on this occasion, so her admirers say, save for that elastic and immeasurable quantity called "luck" in coursing, quickly and evenly killing the first, it required a second hare to test the merit of these beauties. Both drove the second hare evenly from the slips, the hare turning to Kathleen who made good use of her opportunity, wrenching and killing, thus winning the course.

Monarch III.–Twilight.—The former was out of condition, having been injured some days before, and the hard work already done had told on him, and Twilight won.

Skyrocket–Kathleen.—The former led to the hare and worked it for several points when the latter came in for a few turns but killed too soon to wipe out the dog's record, hence lost the course.

THE FINAL.

Skyrocket–Twilight.—This was a short, sharp course, in which the former won and was placed first.

SUMMARY.

Newark Park, Cal., February 22, 1892.—The Occidental Coursing Club's Spring Coursing Meeting. J. F. Carroll, President; J. R. Dickson, Secretary. First prize, $40; second, $20; dogs winning two courses, $10 each.

First round—H. C. Lowe's Prince Rupert beat J. Byrnes' Nellie Bly.
J. F. Carroll's Monarch III beat J. Buckley's Tom Moore.
W. E. Wadam's Twilight beat D. D. Roche's John Mitchell Jr.
M. Tiernan's Catherine Hayes beat W. E. Wadam's Headlignt.
M. Curtis' Skyrocket beat D. J. Healy's Dawn.
P. D. Nolan's Valley Queen beat T. J. Cronin's Depend-on-Me.
T. J. Cronin's Jenny G. beat P. C. Nolan's Dashaway.
T. J. Cronin's Kathleen beat W. H. McComb's Laurelwood.
Second round—Monarch III beat Prince Rupert, Twilight beat Catherine Hayes, Skyrocket beat Jenny G., Kathleen beat Valley Queen.
Third round—Twilight beat Monarch, Skyrocket beat Kathleen.
Final—M. Curtis' Skyrocket by Midnight, out of Pleasant Girl, beat W. E. Wadam's Twilight, by Midnight, out of Pleasant Girl, and won the stake—Sky. Twilight took $20 and Kathleen and Monarch III $10 each.

T. Cooney's Tempest won first prize, $20, in Sapling stakes and J. J. Rademacher's Young Jessie second, $10.

Barks From Berkeley

Editor Rreeder and Sportsman:—That the color of the eye should disqualify is certainly preposterous; but that the color should be a demerit I think perfectly proper. If we breed dogs with the intention of breeding them as near perfection as possible, the color of the eye is certainly of great importance. If I owned a light-eyed setter I would either give it away or shoot it.

A deep, brown eye denotes intelligence and trustworthiness, The light lemon eye, except when found in very light colored dogs, is looked upon as denoting a disposition to sneak, steal and occasionally touch up the calves of one's legs. In walking about a bench show, ladies and children as well as gentlemen will look into the honest brown eye and pet the dog without hesitation, but on approaching a light-eyed specimen they quickly pass on to the next, knowing intuitively that the dog is not to be trusted.

The actual value of the eye in the scale of points used as a guide in judging is in my opinion too little rather than too much.

The American English Beagle Club valued the eyes at ten points, giving thirty-five to the entire head. Too much in our estimation.

Stonehenge gives but fifteen to the entire head of the foxhound. It is very important that the hound should have a punishing jaw, wide-open nostrils and brain room, necessarily the eyes can not count for much.

In the Irish and English setters the entire head figures at but twenty.

In the Irish Water Spaniels the dog our friend, the editor, is commenting on, by the old standard, the head, meaning the skull, counts ten, the face and eyes ten, the ears ten, and the topknot ten.

The topknot counts twice as much as the eyes. All liver-colored dogs like the Irish Water Spaniel have a strong tendency to come light-eyed. Were I voting on the new standard I would vote for more points rather than less. But as for disqualifying for any such defect that is all "bosh" as you say.

Your note re Charles H. Mason hit the nail right on the head.

Mason was always caustic, but in his old age his good opinion of himself increases. I wonder at the papers allowing such rot to defile their columns. He not only states in black and white that he knows more about dogs than any other man in America, but that there is not another in America that knows anything at all. With all his arrant egotism I honestly think that if he would step across the "briny" and spend about six months among the shows and fanciers, that both his English friends and he himself would be astonished at his own ignorance. He has been away from home too long.

It is a pity that he has such a run-away pen. He has a very good eye when hunting for a dog's defects, more especially when he don't like the owner.

He has an excellent memory, especially when hunting for a dog that a competing judge has put to the front. I have often wondered how it was that when addressed by a friend he always could hear very distinctly, but when approached by a disgruntled exhibitor he was deaf as a post.

If made to hear, a few withering remarks send the poor unfortunate away discouraged, ready to kill his dog and thoroughly impressed with the importance of the "Great Mogul." His latest effusion in the Forest and Stream I quote below, Isn't it a pity, there isn't a single dog paper in America? How proud he is of the distinction? Well, the citizens of America don't appreciate him to that extent. Five or six years ago he judged nearly all the shows in this country. To-day he judges the fewest of any on the list. Funny, isn't it, that no one in America, not even his English-American friends care to invite him! And when he does get a show how many entries does he command?

Well! I must quit, or my own pen will have run away from me. As a parting word I will add that I am thoroughly ashamed of our Eastern papers for allowing such rot to soil their paper and also ashamed of my former colleagues that they don't show him up in his true light for the good of the community at large. "Namquoit."

MOUNTAIN RAMBLES.

Deer Hunting in the Guadalupa Mountains.

During the autumn months of the year 1862, I was with the "Column from California" in Southern New Mexico and western Texas. The "Column" consisted of two regiments of infantry and a battallion of calvary, all Californians, under command of Gen'l. Carleton. These troops had just marched across the deserts of Southern California, Arizona and New Mexico to assist the small force commanded by Genl. Canby, who was afterwards killed by treacherous Modoc Indians in the lava beds of northern California—while combatting the Texas rebels under Genl. Sibley from the valley of the Rio Grande.

The rebels had all been driven back to Texas, that is, all who could travel on foot—they had lost their horses—while the sick and wounded had been escorted under safe convoy of Uncle Sam's California Volunteers to their homes in, or in the vicinity of San Antonio, Texas.

During the military operations referred to, ye gentle savages, the murderous Apache, and the thieving Navajo, had been watching their white brothers in their desperate attempts to cut each others throats. The Indians had been forgotten for the time being, and had come to the conclusion that it was a good time to go on the war path on their own account, and they were raiding all up and down the valley of the Rio Grande for hundreds of miles, engaging in their favorite pastimes of murdering, torturing, stealing, and carrying into captivity, women and children, whom they subjected to a fate worse, and more cruel by far, than anything ever practiced by those slave owners yclept civilized.

The situation was tersely summed up by an old California mountaineer. "The bloody sneakin' Injuns is raisin' merry Hades." The rebels having been driven from the valley, Genl. Canby was ordered to the more active fields of warfare east of the Mississippi. The command devolved upon Genl. Carlton who turned his attention to the marauding savages, and organized small expedition of military forces to march against them and to punish them for their temerity and their iniquities.

One of these expeditions was sent from El Paso, Texas, to the Guadalupe mountains, lying East by North from El Paso, and about 140 miles distant, to castigate a branch of the Apache tribe that made the fastnesses of the Guadalupes their stronghold.

I accompanied the expedition. The troops hunted for Indians through gorge and canon, and over hill and mountain peak, but failed to find any, though there were abundant signs of recent occupation. The Indians had been warned of our coming by their scouts and they had skedaddled. We were encamped at the foot of the mountains. In front of us, to the South, was an extent of rolling prairie. In the rear rose the face of the mountain, almost perpendicular, fully 3,000 feet above the general level of the plain. From the foot of the mountain gushed numerous springs of limpid waters, cool and sweet, fed by the perennial snows of the summit peaks and valleys. We were encamped near one of these lovely springs. It was the month of December but during the day time the air was warm and balmy and grateful to the sense though at night it was somewhat crisp and frosty. No fleck of cloud obscured the azure vault except what hung over the mountain's brow for it was the rainless season and no moisture fell upon plain and foot-hill, not even dew, but away off in the mountains were frequent snow storms, but they never reached the plains and foot-hill.

Not being successful in finding Indians to shoot, we organized a hunt for wild animals of more gentle character and amiable disposition than ye gentle savage; a hunt for deer, bear and wild turkey, or any other beast or bird that might come within the range of our rifles. Christmas was approaching and we wanted a good, old-fashioned Christmas feast for a change of diet. We had, for several weeks, lived on fried bacon slap-jacks and dessicated potatoes, and had got tired of them, and we longed for something more toothsome.

On the 24th of December, at dawn of day, a dozen of us started to climb the mountain. By a zig-zag course we reached the summit in about four hours, a feat difficult of accomplishment and very arduous, but the scene that opened to view more than compensated for the labor of climbing. We were at an elevation of 7,000 feet above sea level and 3,500 above the general level of the surrounding plain. To the south of us spread the undulating plain of western Texas; to the east and west the northern extension of the plain into New Mexico. The horizon seemed lost in illimitable distance, and was marked by a dimly luminous haze that pictured to the imagination the bounds of the universe. With a field-glass the Pecos river to the east and the Rio Grande to the south and southwest, with their skirting of trees, cottonwood and live-oak, could be traced. But we tarried not to dwell upon the beauties and sublimities of nature. Our special business was to hunt game for the morrow's Christmas feast, and we plunged into the depths of the forests that crowned the mountains and which teemed with game of all description. The forest was of dense growth and the ground was covered with several inches of snow. Evergreen and deciduous trees were intermingled in luxurient profusion. The scene reminded me of the ranges and spurs of the Alleghanies in Pennsylvania, and, involuntarily, I looked for the woodmen, the timber-cutters and log-rollers, the teams and the teamsters, and the beaten paths through the snow along which they hauled the products of their industry; and I listened, fully expecting to hear, so realistic was the picture, for the ringing sound of the axe as it cleft the tree to the core, and the thunder of the falling trees; the grating of the saw as it was being drawn backward and forward by the brawny arms of the stalwart woodmen, remorsely cutting its way through the hearts of the forest giants; for the shoutings and cursings of the teamsters as they directed the movements of their teams. It was all imagination, a figment of the brain, delusion and illusion. Nothing could be seen but the forest and snow and sometimes a deer or hare, that, alarmed by our strange presence, fled noiselessly into the depths of the forest, and nothing heard but the occasional breaking of twigs and branches as they fell from some superannuated and decaying tree, or the soughing and sighing of the wind through the branches of the tall conifers.

Immediately on entering the forest where the game was, the party broke into small squads, Two others and myself stayed together. We had good luck, and in a short time each of us had bagged a fine deer. This was as much as we could conveniently carry, and we made no effort to kill anything else, but we did kill a panther that lay stretched on one of the lower limbs of a large tree watching us. He offered such a tempting mark that we couldn't help shooting.

Towards the east it had been noticed that the mountain appeared less precipitous, and, therefore, more easy of ascent and descent. Our hunt had taken that direction, and the three of us, with a deer each slung across his shoulders, essayed the descent at a point several miles from where we had made the ascent. At first it was smooth going and easy sailing, but, as we proceeded down the face of the mountain we met with difficulties, and obstacles almost insuperable. The first was a "Devil's Slide" where the ravine, down which we were passing, narrowed and stepened in such a way that it would have been impossible to descend it but for the fact that the sides of the ravine were walls of perpendicular rock forming a channel or passage about three feet across, affording a chance to break the rapidity of descent by stretching out hands and feet and pressing against the opposite walls. With rifles and deer slung across our shoulders we made the descent of this "Devil's Slide" on our haunches, arriving at the bottom of the chute without more serious mishap than the lacerated condition of the unmentionable portion of our trousers and persons. The slide, or chute, was probably not more than 500 feet in length, but to us it seemed interminable, and stretched out into miles and miles of extent. After a breathing spell we again started on our downward journey, but a few steps brought us to another obstacle which at first seemed insurmountable. The ravine and slide terminated at the brink of a precipice of 1,000 feet perpendicular height. There appeared no avenue of escape from our dilemma except by retracing our steps, but a slight examination of the situation showed that to be impossible.

A further examination of the face of the cliff revealed a half column or round tower, set against the face of the cliff, whose surface presented slight projections, to which one might hang on by tooth, toe-nail and eyelid, and pass around it to a shelf of rock that appeared to offer a means of escape. It was "nick or nothing." The attempt must be made, but if we missed foothold or handhold we would be dashed on the rocks hundreds of feet below. Reluctantly we abandoned our game. We removed boots and slung them to our backs with the rifles, that we might be both hand and foot free, and commenced to crawl around the face of the tower set against the cliff. It was slow and painful work, but we gradually worked our way around to the shelf beyond the tower, availing ourselves of every slight projection on the face of the tower that furnished finger hold or toe hold. The shelf led us out of danger and difficulty, and in a short time we reached the foot of the mountain safe and sound, but in a dilapidated condition, weary unto death and many miles from camp.

About sunset, after a long and weary tramp, we reached camp, but without any game. We had our Christmas dinner, though, for the others had been successful and brought in much game—deer, bear, antelope and wild turkey—while those who had remained in camp spent the day in roasting the large bulbs of the century plant, or American aloe, which was indigenous to the soil in that locality and grew wild in abundance.

THE FARM.

The Utopian Farmer.

BY JOHN KENDRICKS BANGS.

Come here, my dear, I want ter say a word or two ter you
Bout what I think's the proper thing for me 'n' you ter do.
Yo've gave me mighty good advice sense we was wed that day,
'Way back in sixty-one, 'n' now I'd like to have ye say
Ef you don't think I've got a right ter do as others does,
'N' sell the crops before they grows, jest like them Easterners.

Why, Meg, a man out in Noo York hez sold a lot o' corn
Thet's several thousand bushels more than what the country's borne—
'N' got his money, too, I'm told, 'n' didn't have a pack
O' grain of any kind in hand to back his little spec.
He cleared a hundred thousand cash! 'N', Meg, that's more'n we Have cleared at farmin' all our days, or ever will, by gee!

'N' I can't say I see the use o' workin' day by day
'N' only sellin' what we raise for mighty little pay,
When them as hasn't any grain can sell up there in town
A million pecks of wheat 'n' corn, 'n' git their money down.
The modern plan's a dandy; Meg, 'n' ef we make it go,
I'll get you that pianner, 'n' the trottin'-horse for Joe.

We'll raise the mortgage off the roof, 'n' paint the old barn red,
'N' send the gals to Paris, France, and buy a rose-wood bed.
We'll get new carpets for the floors, 'n' keep a hired man,
Ef only I can git to town 'n' learn to work the plan.
'N', mebbe, Meg, I'd make enough ter run for Governor,
Or get sent down to Washin'ton a full fledged Senator.

I tell yer, gal, this is an age that beats creation. Say,
What would your father 've said, d'ye think, if he was here to-day,
Ter see folks selling wheat and corn, and hull cars full o' rye,
'N' 'leven-twelfths of all they sold nowhere but in their eye?
How he would yell to think of us a-makin' of a pot
O' gold at sellin' fellers things we haven't really got!

What's that ye say? It isn't straight to sell what ye don't own?
'N' if I goes into the spec. I goes it all alone?
The music on the piannay ye think would drive ye mad,
If it was bought from selling things ye never rightly had?
Waal, have yer way; I'll let it go; I didn't mean no harm;
But what is straight in cities can't be crooked on a farm.

Cheese Making.

It almost seems as if cheese-making is an old, worn-out subject, and yet when we look around us and see the failure or partial failures in the business and poor cheese that is being constantly thrown on the market, it is a lesson that a great many makers need a more practical knowledge of cheese-making. And right here let me say that it is a common error for a great many cheese-makers to think they know it all, and they are not willing to try to learn more or keep up with the times. They think the old way is good enough for them, and they stay in the old rut.

The first requisite in successful cheese-making is a good, substantial, well-built factory, one in which temperatures can be controlled in all kinds of weather. In this factory should be placed the very best modern machinery. The next thing is the best material to make cheese of. With so many dairy goods furnishing houses in the land, it is quite easy to obtain good rennet extract salt, color, etc. The cheese-maker's greatest trouble and perplexity is to get nice, clean, pure unadulterated milk from his patrons. How can we get it? My answer is, cows should be kept comfortable at all times and have clean, sweet feed and pure water to drink. Stables should be warm and well ventilated. The cow's stalls should be so constructed that she is practically clean all the time. Milkers should brush all dirt, or, better yet, wash the cow's udder before milking and milk dry. The practice of dipping the hands into the milk and wetting the cow's udder and teats is a filthy and pernicious one. Even in these days of progression very many dairymen practice this filthy habit. As soon as the milk is drawn from the cow it should be strained and placed in clean 8 or 10-gallon cans areated and cooled, the night's milk to 60 degrees and the morning's to 70 degrees, as soon as possible after being drawn from the cow. It should be kept in a pure atmosphere, can covers left off and a thin cloth spread over tops of can until ready to start for the factory on spring wagons and the cans protected in some way from the hot sun of summer and zero winds of winter. The cheese-maker should inspect each can and send home all milk that would not make a first-class cheese. Each patron's milk should be tested daily by a good, reliable chemical machine, and he should be paid pro rata according to the butter fat in his milk; and now with good, pure milk in the cheese vats, we will go on with cheese-making.

The milk should be gradually warmed and stirred while being heated to 86 degrees in summer and 88 degrees in winter. As soon as the setting temperature is reached the rennet test should be made to determine whether the milk is ready to add the rennet or not. The above test is made by taking 20 ounces of the milk at the above temperature, add one drahm rennet extract; if it coagulates in one minute the milk is ready to add rennet extract. If it takes longer than one minute the milk should be held, temperature kept up and frequently stirred until the milk is ripe enough to set by the above rennet test. As soon as this is accomplished, if color is used, it should be mixed with one gallon pure water, temperature about the same as the milk and thoroughly stirred into the milk. The amount of rennet extract for a vat of milk should be put in water same as the color and thoroughly stirred and incorporated in the milk. As soon as this is done it is well to agitate the top of the milk slightly until the milk shows signs of coagulation. Then cover the vat until the curd is ready to cut. The amount of rennet extract to use is determined by the length of cheese are to be kept before being sent to market. If the cheese is to be kept for a long time 2½ to 3 ounces is enough; if a short time, 4 or 5 ounces. Or use enough to coagulate the milk in from 18 to 50 minutes, according to circumstances. To determine when to cut the curd, insert the index finger in the curd; if it breaks clear over the finger it is ready to cut. When ready cut carefully and expeditiously, using horizontal knife first. Then cut lengthwise and crosswise of vat with perpendicular knife, then turn curd over and cut lengthwise, free the sides and bottom of vat from curd, stir it carefully about ten minutes, then apply the heat and raise the heat about one degree every four minutes continuously until 98 degrees heat is reached. If the milk was in good condition and properly ripened the curd should be advanced enough to draw the whey all off in from 1½ to 2 hours from the time it reached 98 degrees heat. The right test to draw the whey all off by is when the curd will string from 1-8 to ¼ inch on hot iron. As soon as the whey is drawn off push the curd to the lower end of the vat, keeping it fine all the time. Now place the racks in upper end of vat, spread strainer cloth over the racks, dip curd onto the racks quickly, keep the curd fine and stir it until the whey is expelled. At this time have the curd about four inches deep on the racks, cover it up and allow it to mat together. As soon as it will hold together, cut the curd through the middle lengthwise, then cut crosswise, so as to have the curd in pieces about 1 foot wide and 2 feet long. Pile these pieces two or three deep, on the center of rocks.

After this repile frequently and make the piles nearly as high as the sides of the vat. Keep just enough hot water under the racks to keep the curds from 94 degrees to 96 degrees until the curd is ready to be run through a curd mill. Keep the vat covered up at all times as much as possible until the curd is ripe enough to grind. For home use the curd should show on the hot iron from one-quarter inch of acid in mid-winter to one inch of acid in mid-summer. For export and Southern market or long-keeping cheese, about double the above amount of acid and ripening of the curd would be required. As soon as the curd is properly ripened it should be run through a curd mill, then stirred about ten minutes, then salted with best salt obtainable. The salt should be evenly and thoroughly mixed with the curd. Then the curds should remain on the racks ten or fifteen minutes and go to press at about the same temperature the milk was when the rennet extract was put into it. The amount of salt used should vary from about two pounds in mid-winter to two and one-half pounds in mid-summer to each 100 pounds of curd or 1,000 of milk. When the curd goes to press it should have a rather mellow or velvety feeling. If the granular process is adopted the general make should be the same, except the matting and running through the curd mill should be omitted. When the cheese curd is ready for the press, it should be distributed in the hoops so as to make the cheese all as near the same size as possible, apply the press slowly at first, tightening it frequently until time to retire for the night, then apply about the full power of the press. Tighten the press the first thing in the morning, and let the cheese remain in press until the time has come to prepare the press for the next curd. Then take the cheese to the curing room, place them on the shelves about two inches apart and apply quite hot some first-class cheese dressing. The cheese should be turned and rubbed daily until ready for market. For long-keeping cheese the curing room should be kept from 60 to 65 degrees. If you wish to hurry them for the market keep the room from 70 to 75 degrees. I think it is best to heat curing rooms with steam pipes running under the bottom shelves of each rack. Absolute cleanliness, watchfulness, care and eternal vigilance is needed in and about the premises, and is a necessity where nice, clean-flavored, desirable goods are to be made.—An address by W. H. Noyes before the Minnesota State Dairy Association.

Experiments With Sand.

I have just read an article written by J. B. Carr on "Starting Tree Seedlings" in prepared sand.

He closes said article as follows: "Now, as eucalyptus seed most certainly germinates better in sand and manure than in soil, why will not all tree and vegetable seed that will require transplanting start best that way?"

I was very much interested in what he wrote, as I have been experimenting for some years past with pure sand, as well as sand prepared in various ways, in order to satisfy my Yankee curiosity as to its value for potted plants, cuttings, etc., and intended in the near future, if success crowned my efforts, to give the readers of the Rural the benefit of my experience. I know that there are a great many people, especially ladies, who find it very difficult to prepare suitable soil for potted flowers, and after taking a great deal of pains to make a compost that they suppose it suitable for their lovely flowers, soon find to their great surprise and sorrow that the soil bakes after being watered, and that their cherished plants do not flourish as they should, but make a puny and sickly growth. I am not at present fully prepared to write on this subject as I would like to, but owing to the article above referred to just appearing, I thought perhaps it might be the most favorable opportunity for me to state a few of the experiments I have already tried, and the success that followed, as well as to speak of some experiments now under way which I may in some future article write about.

It is a well-known fact that the most successful florists use a great deal of sand, and if one will examine carefully the roots of plants sent to them by such persons, he will almost invariably find that the little compost that is still clinging to the fibrous roots is very fine, sandy, light and porous. Noticing this some years ago, it set me thinking, and being a great lover of flowers and not having suitable soil for them, I determined to experiment and persevere until I secured it in some way. My first attempt was with English walnuts. In the summer of 1888, having a few barrels of sand left after plastering my house, I planted them in a long box about ten inches deep filled with this sand, which came from Vallejo, and I suppose from the ocean beach. I took great care to always have it moist, and sprinkled it a number of times with weak, liquid hen manure. Early in the spring they commenced to come up nicely and made a rapid growth. I found on transplanting them to my nursery rows that but very few nuts had failed to germinate, while some of the same kind of nuts, planted at the same date as the others in good garden soil, mostly rotted.

Last spring I obtained a lot of fine sand from the creek and mixed it with one part of very fine and thoroughly rotten cow manure to three parts of sand. I then took coal-oil cans, cut out the top, and planed some pine or redwood slats as wide as a lath and three-fourths of an inch thick. These I cut exactly the width of the can and nailed two of them on the outside, opposite each other, with inch wire nails driven from the inside of the can. By this method they projected nearly one-fourth of an inch through the wood, just enough to clinch nicely. I then nailed on the other two sides planed laths of suitable length to come flush with ends of the other pieces and secured them there with two-inch wire nails, and half-inch wire nails in the middle, clinching them in the same manner as the others. This made a stiff, strong can. I painted them both inside and out and made holes one-fourth of an inch in diameter at each corner and in the middle, on all sides and just at the bottom of the can inside. In this way I find the drainage is much better than where they set on the ground. I then put in an inch or two of rather coarse burnt bones, with the addition of charcoal I sift out of my ashes. I then filled up the cans with my prepared sand, well settled down, to within two inches of the top, and planted several kinds of lillies. I never had lillies do as well before, and they were admired by all who saw them.

In July last I took a cutting of geranium and put it into the Vallejo sand without manure. I kept this can in the shade for two or three weeks, taking great care to keep the sand a little moist. I also watered it four or five times with liquid manure, same as I applied to the English walnuts. It made a a better growth than any other geranium cutting I planted, and I had prepared soil of several different kinds for them.

This season I expect to have at least 20 different kinds of choice chrysanthemums which I shall plant in coal-oil cans in sand prepared as for the lillies before referred to. I have already succeeded in raising a fine lot of chrysanthemum rootlets in this prepared sand, as well as having started a fine lot of cuttings of different kinds—daises, pansies, etc. I have also at the present writing growing in this sand a nice lot of cabbage and lettuce plants, also onions raised this year from seed, which I shall transplant as soon as the weather permits. I am not yet done experimenting. I like it, and I am continually at it and have been amply repaid for all my pains.—Ira W. Adams, of Calistoga, in Rural Press.

Quality.

This is an age of improvement not in one but in almost every direction.

This is perhaps more noticeable in the prominent inventions of the age. That which was satisfactory yesterday is to-day rendered unprofitable by reason of some new discovery or appliance.

This has not only stimulated the produce but the consumer is no longer content to put up with that which would have answered very well yesterday, but demands the best of everything.

We find many persons wondering why a certain product which has heretofore met with a steady and profitable demand no longer pays the cost of production or is produced at a lessening profit.

An investigation will show that some improved article is supplanting it in public favor.

This is especially true of cattle industry and even a casual glance suffices to show that no one can pull along in old ruts and compete with the producers of high class-cattle.

As high class cattle increase in numbers the field for the scrub is narrowed until we find all the avenues of profit absolutely closed to the scrub.

In this age of intelligence and progress there should be no scrub stock. The scrub is the outgrowth of carelessness and neglect.

Every scrub kept is a tax on the public as making no adequate return for its support.

Relative Profit of Sheep and Cows.

Dr. Galen Wilson makes a comparison between sheep and cows as to profit. Here is the way he puts the comparison: "With ordinary care and judgment the flocks increase 125 per cent. in number, the lambs bring four dollars each, and the wool two dollars a head. This gives an income of seven dollars a sheep. What will sustain a cow will keep eight sheep. To equal this each cow of a dairy should produce fifty-six dollars. The very best herds scarcely do this; the majority run far below it. But suppose all equalled this, the labor account against the cows tells in favor of the sheep." As proof that he does not over-estimate the value of sheep, he quotes the experiments of a farmer where he recently stopped: "The wool was sold for fifteen dollars and twelve lambs were raised, which are worth at least five dollars each now, and could be sold for that. This gives an income of seven dollars and a half a sheep, or sixty dollars for the equivalent of a cow." It is not difficult to grow heavier-wooled sheep and thereby increase the profit on them. In Canada, where wool brings an average of nineteen cents a pound, the annual profit on a sheep is estimated by the Farm Journal to be $6.20. Not only do these figures show more money and indicate a good investment from the sale of the poor cows, but their substitution for these cows would bring so much relief to the much-talked-of overworked dairyman's wife.

The Heading of Cabbages.

It has recently been stated, as the result of an experiment in one of the United States stations, that if cabbages are slightly tilted over with the plow in the fall it produces a tendency to make them have larger heads. We now learn, as an experiment by Prof. L. H. Baily, of Cornell, that if the cabbages are planted shallow and earthed up, the percentage of large and heavy heads is much greater. As a matter of physiological principals, these two experiments in different directions both accord. It goes to show that whatever favors the nutritive power is against their disposition to produce hard heads. In Mr. Baily's experiment the plants got the benefit of abundant moisture and nutrition when headed up. When not headed or when not earthed up, or slightly tilted, there is no obstruction to complete nutrition. Although those experiments seem of a somewhat unimportant character, they afford very interesting lessons to the study of plant life, from a practical point of view. We think the experiment ought to be repeated in view of these valuable and suggestive lessons.

Handling.

There are few breeders who realize the importance of this factor in judging of the merits of a beef animal. While form, color, finish and smoothness are readily perceived by the eye, yet the all-important question of quality is best determined by the handling. From the handling can be determined to a large extent the relative proportion of fat and lean and the quality of the same. This cannot be done in every case, but a careful study of handling will enable one to arrive at the truth quite often.

As an indication of feeding qualities it is even more valuable. A large, loose, mellow hide indicates a vigorous outside circulation. Such an animal will usually prove a quick and profitable feeder. The fairs offer a good opportunity to study handling. The owners are willing to volunteer information and the cattle quiet enough to be handled, so that a great deal may be learned in a short time.

Entries Close Next Tuesday.

The attention of all trotting horse breeders is called to the advertisement of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association in another column. The idea of only asking a low entrance fee and having the first payment a very small one commends itself to everyone. The breeder can enter a number of colts and fillies and has only to invest a few dollars at the time. Then, if any of the colts should happen to be a "little off" ten days before the day advertised for the race, when the last payment is to be made, he can select the best, and will have a better show for his money. The number of horsemen to avail themselves of this opportunity will probably be quite large.

In the Champion Stakes, free-for-all, trotting, the yearlings get $100 in added money; the two-year-olds get $200 added; the three-year-olds get $300 added, and the four-year-olds also get $300 added, and all these pay but $35 to get to the score. Only $10 is asked for first payment.

The Encouragement Purses for trotters is also an attractive feature and especially offered for colts without records. The entrance fee is but $30; it is only necessary to pay $5 when the entries are made next Tuesday, March 1st., the balance, $25, is payable ten days before the advertised day of the race. As there are four moneys, there is a good chance for all to strive and get a portion.

The Aspirant Purses are designed for the get of stallions that have no representatives in the 2:30 list at three years old or under. This is another feature that appeals strongly to owners of such stallions, and should fill well, considering the liberal terms, which are similar to those of the Encouragement Purses.

The Pacing Purse, free for all, should bring out an army of side-wheelers. Fausta being barred in the two-year-old class, let us see what our other youngsters can do; remember that all races in this meeting will take place after the close of the Central California Circuit and horses will be "fit to battle for a kingdom" at that time.

One of the main features of the whole programme, and which refers more especially to the owners of stallions than any other class of horsemen, is the Stallion Produce Stakes. It is an innovation that, when once comprehended by each owner, cannot fail to become interesting and attractive. It is printed below:

STALLION PRODUCE STAKES.—For two and three-year-olds, the get of stallion named on March 1, 1892, to be trotted at the Fall Meeting of this Association, 1892. Entrance for stallions, the season price of 1889 of stallion named; dead stallions at price of season 1889 or last previous season; private stallions that have not been bred for pay, if with record of 2:30 or better, $100; others, $50; lowest entrance $25. If the stallion entered has only two-year olds, entrance to be one half of the season price as stipulated above. The Directors reserve the right to settle all questions concerning stallion fees as seems best. Stallions to be named March 1, 1892, for $5, $20 additional ten days before the first advertised day of the meeting. One-half stallion entrance for two-year-olds, with all two-year-old payments added. One-half for three-year-olds, with all three-year-old payments added. Money divided in each stake 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent.

TWO YEAR OLD STALLION PRODUCE STAKES.—Mile heats; 25 minutes between heats; distance, 100 yards.

THREE-YEAR-OLDS.—Mile heats, 3 in 5.

To be more explicit, we will explain the points of this "great feature of the meeting," and to do so it is only necessary to give an example: "A owns a stallion that stood for $50 in 1889; he desires to get as many of that stallion's get in the list as possible. He names the horse in this stake, and on July 1st pays that amount. All who have two-year-olds and three-year-olds sired by the stallion named are entitled to enter on the payment of a small entrance fee, which, compared with the value of the stake, will probably not amount to more than one per cent." By naming his stallion and by letting it be known in this way, it will encourage breeders to send their mares to be bred to the horse, for everyone knows that the number that a stallion has in the list is the gauge by which his value and the value of his progeny are estimated.

In the stallion purses horses must be named next Tuesday. No money is to be paid until July 1st. The sum of $10,200 is offered in purses and added money to stakes for colts and stallions; besides these there will be a programme for aged trotters and pacers and for special events which will be announced at the proper time.

The conditions for these races are fair and liberal, and contain many new features that are a credit to the committee who drafted them. Remember there is but a few days more to send in your entries, which will close next Tuesday, March 1st. Such a programme has never been offered before on this coast. There is a little for everybody and if anything more is needed when the secondary programme is issued later it will be found in that. The meeting promises to be the greatest to be held this year, therefore it is of paramount importance for all horsemen to make arrangements to be in line in the very best company with their colts and fillies at this fall meeting.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM CONNER, one of America's best-known turfmen, died recently in the city of St. Louis, his birthplace. "Billy" Conner was starter at the old Abbey race track, St. Louis, at the early age of sixteen, and when the war broke out became a captain in the Confederate army. After the war Captain Conner engaged in the cotton business, but did not give up his racing propensities, becoming secretary of the Metaire Racing Association, at that time the most famous in America, as it was the only one in the North at that period. Soon thereafter he became superintendent of canal-building under Duncan A. Kenner, the famous old-time turfman. Conner became noted as one of our best turf writers, his nom de plume being "Marius." In 1872 Captain Conner became the business representative of Lawrence Barrett, and later of John McCullough, the beloved tragedian, with whom he remained until he died. It was principally through Captain Conner's efforts that a fitting monument was erected over McCullough's grave at Philadelphia. It is a curious fact that three of the pall-bearers at the great tragedian's funeral (Billy Florence, John B. Carson and Captain Conner) have died within the past three months. After the death of John McCullough, Captain Conner leased the St. James Hotel in New York, and made it one of the most popular hostelries in this country. Captain Conner married Miss Ada Webb, one of the celebrated Webb sisters, in 1868, and an only daughter was at his bedside when Death rode up on his white horse and called for the spirit of one of the best and most beloved men in the United States. He had helped make fortunes for others, but died poor in this world's goods. The funeral took place from Trinity Episcopal Church, under charge of the Order of Elks, Rev. William Barden officiating. Among the pall-bearers were a number of Missouri's most honored citizens. The best racehorse ever owned by Captain Conner was Glidelia, by Bonnie Scotland, from Waltz, who held the mile and three-quarter record for nearly nine years. Few men more widely known or generally beloved than Captain William Conner are to be found on earth.

THE more bookmakers at race meetings the more liberal the odds—that is, where the pencilers are independent and not banded together with the object of keeping down the prices. We hope to see at our coming race meetings any responsible man or firm allowed to make a book that pays a fair sum per day for such privilege. The plan by which fair odds and lively betting can be secured is to let any good man make a book who has the capital to carry on such a business. This is the way such affairs are carried on at the East, where both systems have been tried, and our associations cannot do better than to follow in the footsteps of their older brethren and please the public by so doing.

A Solid Organization.

The Sturgis (Mich.) Fair Association, which advertises in our columns a number of rich stakes, to be competed for during the year 1892, is not only exceedingly enterprising, but solid financially as well, as the following, from the cashier of Citizens' State Bank, Sturgis, conclusively shows:

L. A. CLAPP, (Prest. First Nat. Bank, Centreville, Mich.) H. A. CLAPP, Cashier,
T. E. CLAPP, (Clapp's Bank, White Pigeon., Mich.) E. L. CLAPP, Asst. Cashier

THE CITIZENS' STATE BANK,

BANKERS.

STURGIS, MICH., Feb. 21, 1892.

THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, San Francisco, Cal., Gentlemen:—I hereby certify that the Sturgis Fair Association here deposited with the Sturgis State Bank a Secretary's bond of $10,000 and a Treasurer's bond of $25,000, both with approved security.

This is a sufficient guarantee for the safe keeping of any funds intrusted to their care.

Very truly yours,
H. A. CLAPP, Cashier.

A prominent New York actress took a friend out riding a few days ago behind a very fine pair of horses that she owned, and incidently remarked that she called them McGinty and Annie Rooney. "Why," said her friend, "how can you call them such horrid names?" "Why, can't you see?" she replied. "They are chestnuts."

Early Training and Racing.

This is a subject on which much thought should be expended by horsemen. Teaching the equine baby to trot is all right, but to engage the infant in a hard race or subject it to a course of severe training is all wrong. The training leading up to a bruising race is more severe than the contest itself. This is admitted by every sensible person. Therefore we believe that the races for yearlings and two-year-olds should be few and far between. The number and great value of two-year-old stakes has resulted in the deterioration of the thoroughbred horse. The horses in this class of the present era have neither the stout legs nor the lung-power of the horse of twenty-five years ago, and early training and rich two-year-old stakes have brought about this result. Let us hope that members of trotting horse associations will not tumble into the same pitfall, and, instead of bettering the breed of horses, help to ruin the race by killing trotters in their infancy.

A well-bred trotter worked carefully until he is four years old and then brought out to race is young enough to stretch himself to his limit, and should, in good hands, if sound, be trotting in races when he is fourteen. But good campaigners reaching that age are getting very scarce. Goldsmith Maid did her best work when she was seventeen, Lucy hers at about the same age. St. Julien was in his prime at twelve, Driver at twelve, Lady Suffolk at sixteen; George Wilkes was going fastest at twelve, Woodford Mambrino at fifteen, Maud S. at eleven. None of these were raced young, and they are valuable examples for present-day breeders to look at. It is declared that horses are faster nowadays than then. They may be a trifle speedier, but the tracks are better also. Of course, some few colts will stand training at an early age. They are the compact fellows like Arion and Macleay whom it does not hurt so much, but the tall, leggy fellows, with vealy bones, give way to the strain of racing in a very short time, and when put in the stud perpetuate a race of mushy-legged horses in most instances.

Therefore, if youngsters are to be raced, great judgment should be exercised in their selection, and the big fellows allowed to stay at home until their bones are well set. We can mention a large number of wonderful thoroughbreds that broke down because they were raced very hard at a tender age, and as yearling and two-year-old racing on the trotting turf is a comparatively new thing, we wish to save the trotter from the fate of his galloping brother —relegation to the hospital and stud at an age when he should be at his best.

Sensational two-year-olds on the running turf have seldom proved of much use at five, and among these we might cite in this category are Sensation, who won everything as a two-year-old that he was sent for and never was able to race thereafter; Tremont, the unbeaten black two-year-old, who never reached the post as a three-year-old; El Rio Rey, another wonderful youngster, a victim to over-racing in his youth; Henlopen, a good two-year-old winner, no account as a three-year-old; General Harding, the best two-year-old of his year, broken down in his three-year-old form; Kirkman, a phenomenally fast colt, little good after he was passed his second year; Proctor Knott, a speedy two-year-old and a great disappointment in after years; Bondholder, ditto; Punster, ditto; Hindoo and Luke Blackburn, broken down at five; Iroquois at four; Miss Woodford and Thora, sent to the harem at five; Leonatus broken down at three years; Fallen Leaf at the same age; Emperor of Norfolk at three. We might go on enumerating the great ones forced to retire at an early age, but these examples should suffice to show what early racing has done for the thoroughbreds, few of whom can be found in any kind of racing shape these days at the age of seven years. We have no Bostons, Lexingtons, Thad Stevenses, Grey Eagles or Lecomptes now, capable of winning good four-mile heat races and remaining public idols until they are nine or ten years of age. The old thoroughbred is now almost invariably a "skate" that cannot last over three-quarters of a mile in a race, and nothing has brought about this state of affairs but the blighting of the equine race in its infancy. Let trotting horse men observe the thoroughbred wrecks and steer their young crafts in the direction that common sense and humanity points out to them.

The Republic and Its Racing Pulse.

Wonderful have been the strides made in the breeding of trotters; in fact, theindustry seems to have been tramping about in six-league boots during the past four years, so fast is the trotter supplanting the running horse in the public mind. It is really a sea-saw at present, with the chances for the diagonal-gaited animal soon remaining a fixture at the top, where he can view with disdain the downfall of his blue-blooded brother—in other words, the owners of thoroughbreds will have to do something to show that their horses are not deteriorating instead of being improved under the present racing system. Where is the thoroughbred horse in America to-day that can stand a dozen four-mile dashes at a fast clip, let alone win thirty four-mile heat races, as Boston did? Where are the Lexingtons, the Lecomptes, the Norfolks, the Longfellows and the Katie Peases of the present? No person knows. Skilled detectives cannot find horses these days with a shadow of the stamina that these cracks possessed, and everyone knows that they had about as much speed as the thoroughbreds of the present.

But how is it with the trotter? He is nearing the crest of prosperity's tidal wave,and even now the audiences at first-class trotting meetings will compare favorably in point of numbers with those at the running meets. Al that is necessary now to submerge the thoroughbred folks (as affairs are conducted by the latter at present) with that wave is to make it possible for the trotter to earn as much as the runner. When this is done, we have no doubt that the "national horse," the purely American product, the trotter of the present, will be the popular idol with race-goers, as he is now with many who love the trotter for his usefulness. Lower the entrance fees in trotting stakes to the smallest possible figure, give liberal sums in added money, and it will not be long ere the entries in every well advertised stake will number seventy-five, with great fields contending in every instance. Do not have too many two-year-old stakes, blighting the world-beater in his youth. That very thing—richness and number of the two-year-old events—has done more to injure the present race of thoroughbred horse than any one thing. A man with a fast two-year-old runner literally breaks his youngster's back and sends him to an early grave by his greedy grasping at the rich stakes offered by associations that apparently have no desire to improve the horses of the present era. Let members of trotting horse racing associations see to it that they are not a party to the lowering of the present splendid standard of excellence by putting a premium on sprinting and killing off young horses before their bones are well set. Make the two-year-old stakes few and far between, and inaugurate in their place three and four-year-old and all-aged stake class races. Then if the running turf people do not mend their ways—abolish nine-tenths of the two-year-old events—there will be a mighty change in the public pulse, which will beat fast and merrily when a trotting race is in progress and be slow and scarcely felt when a running meeting is on.

To sum up, only a few matters need attention by the trotting associations ere trotting races attract twice as many spectators as do running events. Evolve some system whereby tiresome scoring will be done away with and the horses dispatched on their journey with little or no delay. In this connection, we would suggest that fields be sent away regardless of the pole horse. When they are well-bunched, give the word. Nothing detracts from the interest in trotting races more than scoring—unless it be "laying up" of heats. Abolish pool-selling on heats. Search for first-class men for the positions of starting and presiding judge, and when you have found them, pay them well, and let the public know that you are doing everything in your power to put down favoritism and unfairness. A firm, learned judge in the stand will pay for himself (that is, the salary he is given) three times over, as soon as the public knows that nothing unfair can or will be done. Put down the entrance fees, and have this money turned over in two payments—the first a very small one. Have one or two class races every day with a $10 or $15 entrance fee, with $400 and $500 added by the association, and have no staks race worth less than $1,000 to the winner.

Splendid Stakes at Sturgis.

Sturgis, Mich., which has the fastest track in the North—a Gilderoy—will have a great trotting meeting from August 1st to 6th, 1892, and attention is called to the association's advertisement in another column of this paper. There are $5,000 stakes for two and three-year-old, 2:30 and 2:20 trotters, and $2,500 stakes for 2:20 and 2:30 pacers. Entries in the above close March 1, 1892. Then there is a $500 stake for yearlings, $1,000 stake for two-year-old trotters of the 3:00 class, and a $1,000 stake for three-year-old trotters eligible to the 2:25 class. The last-named stakes close April 1st, when first payment is made. The beauty about these events is the liberal conditions and the good situation of Sturgis, which is only eighty-five miles from the next meeting. The National Futurity Stallion and Colt Stake No. 7, to be trotted at Sturgis in August, 1895, is a grand stake, with easy payments, and the association deserves success.

Successful Artificial Impregnation.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Feb. 24, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:

DEAR SIR:—Complying with your request to give you information as to the result of my experiment in artificial impregnation upon two mares, experimented upon at the Bay District track on March 22, 1891, both mares being bred artificially to imp. Suwarrow, I can inform you that yesterday Mr. James Hagan, superintendent of the Menlo Stock Farm, told me that "Sister to Ruth Ryan," one of the mares experimented upon, foaled on the 19th inst., a perfectly-formed and well-developed filly. Therefore, this filly was foaled three days before an eleven months' term of pregnancy. The mare, on March 12, 1891, had foaled on my ranch in Butte county, a colt by Cheviot; on March 16th, when the colt was four days old, the mare and her colt were loaded on the cars to be sent to San Francisco, arriving here on the 17th, she being taken from the cars directly to the stable in the rear of my residence, where she remained all the time for nine weeks, excepting during the time when she was being taken to the Bay District track to be experimented upon or being taken to Captain Harris' stallion to be teased every three or four days for twenty-seven days after the experiment and then two times a week until seven or eight weeks after the experiment. On each occasion when she was led out to be teased, she was under my observation from the time she left the barn at the rear of my residence until she returned again. On March 22, 1891, she was bred artificially to imp. Suwarrow, there being present at the time of the experiment Drs. R. H. Plummer, R. L. Rigdon, and E Rixford, and Captain Harris, Captain Waugh, Mr. Lopez, T. Merry and about six other persons. About eight weeks after the experiment, the mare, not having again come in season, was shipped back to my ranch in Butte county where she remained until she was sold to Mr. W. O'B. Macdonough during July or August.

The other mare experimented upon at the same time, an aged mare that had never been stinted to a horse and that refused to show any indication of being willing to stand for service until Captain Harris' stallion had teased her for a long period of time, failed to become impregnated by the experiment upon her.

On or about May 3d of last year, at the Pleasanton Stock Farm, I experimented with artificial impregnation, as a return privilege, upon another thoroughbred mare owned by myself. The mare, although teased very carefully twice a week afterward, did not show indications of coming in season again until nineteen days after the experiment. She then, after having been teased for about fifteen minutes, and having during this time fought the teasing stallion viciously, began to show indications of being willing to stand for service; and after ten or fifteen minutes longer of teasing, she showed that she would willingly stand for service. She was again experimented upon for artificial impregnation, was afterwards teased carefully twice a week, and not until twenty-one days did she show any indications of coming in season again, at which time she came in season, showing that either the experiment upon her had failed to impregnate or that she had miscarried the fœtus. I think that with this mare the second experiment upon her ought not to have been made when she so unwillingly came in season after having been teased for such a long period of time, for, had she then been pregnant from the first experiment upon her, the second experiment would have produced either a miscarriage to occur soon afterwards, or an increased liability to miscarry at some later period of the pregnancy.

The success following the experiment in artificial impregnation upon the mare, "Sister to Ruth Ryan," is sufficient to demonstrate its practicability, and, now that this has been demonstrated, I hope that others who have more time and opportunities than I have will continue the experimentation. I believe that from one service of a stallion to a mare a large number of other mares, say from ten to twenty, or even more, can be impregnated. I also believe that experimentation will demonstrate that, if the seminal fluid is collected in sterilized receptacles, kept free from bacteria, and maintained carefully at the proper temperature, as by a bacteriological incubator, its fructifying power, or rather the active vitality of its spermatozoa, and their power to impregnate, can be preserved for several hours, probably for from three to six or more days. I believe that the operation of artificially impregnating will be of great service in removing barrenness when it is caused by merely a constriction or narrowing of the entrance to the womb.

I have not the time to comply with your request to write for this week's issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN an article on the subject, artificial impregnation, but will endeavor to write for next week's issue a brief description of the operation, hoping that by it others may be encouraged to make further experiments, which I have not the time to make.

Yours very truly,

C. E. FARNUM, M. D.

Salt Lake's Coming Meeting.

See in another column the advertisement of the Salt Lake Driving Park Association. Their meeting commences on Saturday, June 11th, and ends Saturday, June 18th. The stakes and purses throughout the whole seven days' racing are unusually liberal and tempting, and should bring horses from all sections. There will be a chance here for owners of trotters, pacers and thoroughbreds to pluck some very choice stakes, and horsemen should not miss this opportunity. All communications should be addressed to G. W. Parks, Secretary, P. O. Box 975, Salt Lake City, Utah. Entries to all stake races close March 15th, to all purse races May 15th.

The Best of the Season.

Of all the auctions of 1892 the one that will take place on Tuesday, March 10th, in this city, will be the most interesting. The catalogues are out, and the animals listed are such as to at once attract the attention of all classes of horsemen. The colts and fillies are not only exceedingly well-bred, but they are grand individuals. Such an opportunity to get such stock may not occur this year. Further particulars will be given in our next issue.

L. U. SHIPPEE'S trotting youngsters were started from Stockton for Chicago last Monday in charge of James Thomson.

THE SALE RING.

Hints to Breeders How to Obtain Higher Prices at Auction.

San Francisco, Feb. 23, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—As the season for sales at auction is fairly under way, there may be nothing inappropriate in a few suggestions with reference to fitting horses for the sale ring. In seven cases out of ten the paucity of price is dependent upon the slovenly manner in which horses are sent to be sold without any due preparation. The recent sale of Dr. Hicks' mares in this city is a case in point. Whatever disagreement may exist between breeding doctrinaires as to the necessity for pacing blood in the trotter, there will be no disagreement on one point—that they were all superb individuals. I saw them last August, and never saw as many good-lookers in any one band of the same number. For a man to see them as I saw them at that time, to sit down and read the prices realized for them eight months later, would afford a text for a sermon on this very matter. Mr. Valensin bought a mare for $235 for which he says he would not take $1,000 to-day at that same sale. He is only one of many who secured great bargains at that sale just through the sorry-looking manner in which the horses were presented for the inspection of the public.

A sale took place in October in New York, which was another case of the same sort. Of thirteen mares purchased in Australia at heavy prices, only three brought more than their cost. Of these, two brought three times what they cost and the other five times, not counting freight from Sydney to this port, which was $125 per head. It is therefore presumable that, had they all been in as good shape as the three referred to, they would all have brought from two to five times what they cost the seller. I know of two that cost J. B. Haggin $500 for the pair, and I will give $1,000 for either of them any day that the copper millionaire wants the money worse than the mares.

I went, the other day, to a man in Visalia to talk up the matter of a combination sale to be held at Fresno in March. His first remark was:

"It's too early."

"Not at all," said I. "If it is too early, why do they hold all their heaviest sales in Kentucky during February, so that breeders who purchase them have a chance to put them to the horse before March and have their foals dropped in January?"

"We-l-l, you see, they keep their horses up in the winter months, while we let ours run out."

"Why not keep yours up during the winter months just long enough to get them in shape for sale?"

"Well, it don't pay to feed—it's too costly."

Now, it so happens that in most of the Eastern States they have to pay from $12 to $20 per ton for hay, and $1.10 to $1.25 per bushel for grain. In the region of which I speak, the "Big Four" counties of Tulare, Kern, Fresno and Merced, hay sells at $4 to $6 per ton for alfalfa and $9 to $12 for barley. Oats are worth from 75 to 90 cents per bushel, according to quality, and barley is even cheaper, and yet a man with horses to sell and a large amount of money tied up, a lot of stallions and broodmares, has the nerve to tell me that "it does not pay to feed in the winter time."

Your article on "Spare the Brush and Spoil the Horse" was just to my liking in this connection. The question of cleanliness enters very largely into the question of prices realized at auction, because it affects the health of the horse. You cannot expect horses to stand in a stable and preserve their health without being cleaned off, no more than you could expect a man to retain his health without taking a bath from one year's end to the other. There is no text from which a sermon on auctions could be preached, more pertinent or appropriate than your text of "Spare the Brush and Spoil the Horse." If the old motto "Cleanliness is next to Godliness" is worthy of observation, it is equally applicable to horse and man.

I think our most successful breeders will agree with me that it pays to feed mares and horses designed for the sale ring and to keep them well cleaned up. The large prices realized by Senator Rose at his great sale of 1890, as well as those realized by Senator Stanford and Mr. Valensin at New York, last month, are irrefutable arguments in favor of feeding horses properly and keeping them in a state of perfect cleanliness. It does pay to feed and to use the brush. You wait till you see Charley Kerr's big two-year- olds stripped for the Spring Meeting at the Blood Horse Association, and you will see what the winter feeding of weanlings and yearlings will accomplish. When the Breeder published "Spare the Brush and Spoil the Horse" it sounded a keynote.

The Old 'Un.

The Care of Road Horses.

When one considers how horses are usually treated when they are unharnessed from a long drive, it is a source of wonder that there is so little sickness among them. Could we know, however, what percentage of lives are shortened by such want of care as is so often apparent we should probably see that the relation of cause and effect is in force here as well as elsewhere. Except in the severe weather of winter, horses are frequently placed in their stalls unblanketed after a drive that has warmed them so that every pore in the body is open, though they may not be apparently sweating. Rapid cooling, if it does not bring on a cold, will surely weaken the animal for future work. There is rarely a day, even in summer, when a horse should not have a light blanket thrown over him when he comes in from road work, and it is especially important that the chest and abdomen be thoroughly protected, as it is not by the ordinary blanket. When a horse is placed in a cool stable his blanket should not only cover his chest completely and closely, but should pass completely around his body and be fastened closely. The blanket that simply covers the back and hangs down the sides of a horse leaves exposed to the cold that part of his body most susceptible to chills.

There ought to be a box stall in every stable into which a warm horse can be put while cooling off. His own heat will soon warm the temperature,and he will there be secure against draughts, but the blanket is necessary all the same. A great many farmers never think it necessary to clean the mud from their horse's legs, and rub them dry after they have come in from wet and muddy roads. A pail of warm water and a stable sponge will make all clean in three minutes' time, and as little more will suffice to rub them dry with an old piece of cloth that should be kept for the purpose. The mud and gravel ought to be cleaned out of their feet at the same time, and a clean bed of straw or other material given them to stand upon. How can a horse's feet keep sound when all kinds of filth work into them and remain there, perhaps for days? When a horse has been perspiring his hair becomes full of the exudation which is mixed with dead skin and dirt, if the road be dusty. When the surface becomes dry this accumulation should be brushed out or the hair and skin will get into a very unhealthy state. Too few farmers' horses have that bright, glossy coat that betokens a healthy skin.

Again, it should be remembered that horses used for road work require a different food ration from that needed by those that are not called upon for rapid exertion. The men who train and care for the fast trotting horses of the country know what foods are best suited to the needs of road horses, and they depend largely on oats, with a small quantity of bright hay for the rations that they give. As there is great muscular waste in this work, a muscle-forming food is needed. It is also of much importance, in the case of road horses, to see that the shoeing is properly done. Where the feet play such an important part in the work one cannot watch too closely to see that nothing goes wrong, either in the manner of shoeing or in the time when it needs to be done. Horses' feet are frequently injured by allowing the shoes to remain on for too long a period without resetting, and they are more frequently injured by ignorant workmen. When horses are to be turned into pasture for any length of time their shoes should be removed and their hoofs carefully trimmed, if trimming is needed. Their feet will thus have a chance to rest, and the ankle muscles will regain their tone if strained through imperfect shoeing. Care in the points mentioned will do much towards lengthening the working life of our roadsters, and toward rendering their daily service more valuable and more agreeable.

The Santa Clara Fair.

An important meeting of the Santa Clara Valley Agricultural Society and the Santa Clara and San Mateo District Association, No. 5, was held last Tuesday afternoon at the office of Roberts, Austin & Darby. The joint meeting was for the purpose of setting the date for the annual fair and attending to matters in connection therewith. It was preceded by separate meetings of the organizations.

The Valley Society Directors first held a session, President William Buckley in the chair, and Directors William Boots, J. W. Rea, D. J. Murphy, T. S. Montgomery, T. W. Hobson and William Quinn, present.

George H. Bragg was unanimously re-elected Secretary and the Garden City Bank Treasurer.

Buckley, Hobson and Montgomery were appointed as the Committee on Grounds.

The Valley Society adjourned, and District No. 5 Association convened with President Buckley in the chair and Directors D. J. Murphy, J. W. Rea, J. P. Sargent, William Boots, E. Topham, George B. Polhemus and W. Z. Price, a full Board, present.

William Buckley was re-elected President, George H. Bragg Secretary and the Garden City National Bank Treasurer.

This association then adjourned, and the joint meeting of the two organizations were held. It was resolved to give a free stallion exhibition on Saturday, March 12, at 1 o'clock. The directors expressed the hope that all stallion-owners would bring their horses and the public generally would attend.

The time of holding the annual fair was set as September 26th to October 1st. This will make it about the last on the list. The reason for this action was that a great many of the best stables are to leave here in June to go over the Montana circuit. They will not return until it is time for the State Fair and by holding the San Jose Fair later they will be able to come here. Last year the fair was held so early that many people could not attend on account of being busy in the orchard. This is another reason considered by the Directors. Another is that some of the Eastern cracks are coming to California in the fall, and they will no doubt come here.

The colt stakes were made up as follows:

TROTTING STAKES.

Palo Alto Shall Endure.

In a lately-published interview Senator Stanford is reported as saying: "I have so planned that long after I shall have crumbled into dust, and am become, perhaps, a faint reminiscence among men, the breeding establishment founded by me at Palo Alto shall endure. Palo Alto proper comprises 8,000 acres of land, which, when properly irrigated, is capable of producing great results. Eventually the land, together with the entire breeding stud, will be handed over to the trustees of the Leland Stanford Jr. University, to be carried on on the lines already laid down by me, with such modifications, of course, as the science of breeding shall from time to time suggest. The President of the University and some of the professors are already showing an extraordinary interest in the breeding problem. Facilities for studying the anatomy of the horse are already at hand in the skeletons of Electioneer and Occident, two very wonderful animals in their way in their day, and other articulated skeletons will be added to the collection frome time to time of horses of note at Palo Alto and from other points."

Napa Wilkes.

This good son of Guy Wilkes, 2:15, and Napa Maid, by Irvington, is standing for service at the stable of W. R. Ellis, Salinas, Cal., for the very moderate sum of $75. His splendid individuality and great producing blood lines on both sides should commend him at once to all owners of good trotting-bred mares. Communications can be addressed to E. W. Davies, agent, Salinas, Cal.

National Stud Book.

Office of the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders, 13 Liberty Street, New York, February 8, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Matters of public and general importance having been recently acted upon by this Association, I deem it my duty to notify the breeders of the country of the measure taken toward providing an official stud book for the exclusive registration of standard trotting-horses.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee, held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in this city, on the evening of February 3rd, a formal proposition was made by the National Trotting Stud Book Association to establish and maintain a trotting stud book to be published under the auspices of this Association and placed under its supervisory control. An agreement having been arrived at insuring the stability and character of the proposed stud book, it was decided to accept the supervision tendered and to adopt the National Trotting Stud Book of America as the sole official record of this Association for the recording of trotting pedigrees.

The National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders as an Association will have no financial interest in the stud book. Its members have not been committed to any obligation to subscribe to the stock of the Stud Book Association, although as a matter of fact many of them will no doubt do so of their own volition. The business management of the recording bureau is vested in the National Trotting Stud Book Association, while complete and irrevocable authority is delegated to the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders to formulate rules for the standard governing admission to the stud book and rules relating to performances, as well as to hear and determine all appeals from decisions of the recorder of the stud book and generally to supervise the compilation of records and pedigrees. By this arrangement the Breeders' Association is left free to act upon matters affecting the breeding interests uninfluenced by pecuniary considerations. The Stud Book Association has given assurance which is wholly satisfactory to this Association as to the character and experience of its management and as to its ability to carry out the purposes for which it was organized, and this assurance the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders extend to the trotting-horse breeders of America.

It is not deemed necessary to offer extended public explanation of this action in providing an official stud-book exclusively for high-class trotting-horses. If this, the oldest of all breeders' organizations, stood in need of justifying its present course, perhaps it would be sufficient merely to recite the fact that, from the date of its organization in 1876 up to the present time, this Association has always acted as seemed best for the interests of all trotting-horse breeders, that this Association formulated and adopted the original standard governing admission to the Wallace Register, and until the recent repudiation of its authority, supervised the compilation of the same in a manner which proved generally satisfactory to the entire breeding interest; that every step taken by this Association in the direction of revising the standard was a distinct advance of the rules; that since the withdrawal of the Wallace Register from the supervision of this Association and its removal to Chicago, the standard enacted by the National Association of Trotting-Horse Breeders has been so mutilated and degraded as to admit to equality with trotting horses animals that neither inherit trotting blood nor themselves possess speed at the trot; that in addition to this intermixing trotting and pacing horses in the same standard the general administration of affairs vitally affecting the interest of all breeders has been dangerously reckless, retrogressive and vacillating, and, finally, that "there is now no trotting stud-book and no trotting standard." L. D. Packer, Secretary.

Dixon's Spring Meeting.

The Directors of the Dixon Driving Park Association met at the Bank of Dixon last Monday afternoon to arrange for their regular meeting. It was decided to hold the picnic and races on Friday, April 29th, because May day falls on Sunday. There will be the usual exercises and games at the pavilion, together with dancing during the afternoon, and the festivities will close with a grand ball in the evening.

After considerable discussion, the following programme of races was decided upon:

1. A free-for-all trotting race for a purse of $250.

2. A local trotting race for named horses, for a purse of $100. The following horses will compete: Wright's Jennie D., Stone's Schalchi, Holly's Black Dan and Robben's Rosie.

3. A trot for a purse of $100, open to horses that have never beaten three minutes and are owned in Dixon, Davisville, Winters, Vacaville, Elmira, Suisun and Rio Vista. Horses must be owned in these towns at least six months before the date of the meeting.

4. A trotting race for a fifty-dollar purse for named two-year-old colts.

5. A pacing race for named pacers, with the following entries: Shangraw's Lady Lightfoot, Robben's Pet and Nason's pacer.

6. A running stake of $100; five-eighths of a mile and repeat; entrance $10, added to stake.

On account of the length of the programme it is probable that some of the events will go over until Saturday.

N. T. A. Biennial Congress.

The Fourteenth Biennial Congress of the National Trotting Association met at the Murray Hill Hotel, New York City, at 2 P. M. Wednesday, February 10th. President P. P. Johnston called the meeting to order and Secretary M. M. Morse called the roll of members, which showed about fifty gentlemen present, representing probably 250 tracks. A number of prominent men in the association held as high as forty proxies.

A motion was offered that the chair appoint a committee of five to nominate officers, and it was carried after some opposition by those who preferred nominations in open meeting. The following were appointed on the committee: C. H. Paige, Philadelphia; Col. Robert Hough, Baltimore; Lucas Brodhead, Lexington, Ky.; U. C. Blake, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; T. O. King, Hartford, Conn.

Judge Whitehead, of New York, chairman of the committee on revision of the rules, presented the report of the committee on the By-Laws, which was taken up article by article and adopted.

The committee appointed to nominate officers presented their report, and the following were unanimously elected for the ensuing two years:

OFFICERS.

President, P. P. Johnston, Lexington, Ky.; first Vice-President, David Bonner, New York City; second Vice-President, Frank L. Coombs, Napa, Cal.

BOARD OF APPEALS.

Eastern District—George M. Stearns, Chicopee, Mass.; M. G. Bulkeley, Hartford, Conn.; C. D. Palmer, Lowell, Mass.

Atlantic District—George W. Archer, Rochester, N. Y.; J. C. Sibley, Franklin, Pa.; Frank Bower, Philadelphia, Pa.

Central District—G. M. Fogg, Nashville, Tenn.; Wm. Edwards, Cleveland, O.; W. R. Allen, St. Louis, Mo.

Western District—U. C. Blake, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; John L. Mitchell, Milwaukee, Wis.; Charles Swartz, Chicago, Ill.

Pacific District—N. T. Smith, San Francisco, Cal.; J. D. Carr, Salinas, Cal.; E. S. Rothschild, Portland, Or.

The secretary and treasurer will be elected by the Board of Review at its May meeting in Chicago.

Ed. A. Tipton, who had acted as clerk of the committee on revision of the rules, then presented the report of that committee. It was taken up, rule by rule and section by section, and disposed of. Free and full discussion was indulged in regarding nearly every change of importance.

The rules, as finally adopted, with all amendments and alterations, are as follows:

RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE NATIONAL TROTTING ASSOCIATION.

RULE I—MANDATE.

SEC. 1. All trotting and pacing over courses represented by membership in "The National Trotting Association" shall be governed by the following rules from and after February 10, 1892:

RULE II—ENTRIES.

SEC. 3. The hour for closing the entries for all purses or premiums offered by any of the associated courses shall be 11 o'clock P. M., except for stakes and purses for horses to be named at the post, the entries to which shall close one hour before the time fixed for the race.

SEC. 4. If the nominator is not the owner, he shall state the name and residence of the owner with the nomination, or he shall be subject to a fine if the owner is disqualified, such fine to be not less than $50 nor more than $100.

SEC. 6. Every entry shall constitute an agreement that the person making it, the owner, driver and horse, shall be subject to the rules, regulations and by-laws, and will submit all disputes and questions arising out of such entry to the authority and judgment of this Association.

RULE V—HORSES TO BE ELIGIBLE WHEN ENTRIES CLOSE.

SEC. 1. Unchanged, except that "2:29½" is made 2.29 and a fraction," and the horse remain eligible to the 2:30 class.

RULE VI—DESCRIPTION AND NAME OF EACH HORSE REQUIRED.

SEC. 3. Is changed in the last two lines: "If the pedigree or record of a horse be falsely stated, for the purpose of deception, the guilty party shall be expelled."

RULE VII—IDENTIFICATION.

SEC. 2. Same as Sec. 3 of old Rule VII, except that the seventh line should read: "Judges or member," instead of "judges and member."

RULE IX—NO PURSE FOR A "WALK-OVER."

SEC. 1. The last sentence is changed to read: "The restriciion herein as to 'walk-overs' shall not apply to stakes, nor shall added money be construed to be a part of the stakes."

RULE X—IN CASE OF DEATH ENGAGEMENTS VOID.

SEC. 1. All engagements including obligations for entrance fees, shall be void upon the death of a horse, but upon the death of the nominator or owner the entry may be declared out, without payments that may thereafter become due. Forfeits, also matches made "play or pay," shall not be affected by the death of the horse.

RULE XI—MATCH RACES.

SEC. 1. In all match races these rules shall govern, unless the contrary be expressly stipulated and asserted to by the club, association or proprietor of the course over which the race is to come off.

RULE XII—WHEN MATCHES BECOME "PLAY OR PAY."

SEC. 1. In all matches made to come off over any of the associated courses the parties shall place the amount of the match in the hands of the stakeholder on any day before the event is to come off (omitting Sunday) at such time and place as the club, association or proprietor, upon application, may determine, and the race shall then become "play or pay."

RULE XVIII—POWER OF POSTPONEMENT.

SEC. 1. Unchanged, except that the word "sweepstakes" is changed to "stakes."

RULE XXII—WHEN RIDERS AND DRIVERS ARE OVERWEIGHT,

SEC. 1. If the bodily weight of any rider or driver shall be found to exceed that which is prescribed in the rules, or that which is required by the conditions of the race, and the overweight shall exceed twenty pounds, it shall be announced from the stand before the heat; and the judges shall have the power, if in their belief such extra weight was imposed on the horse for an improper or fraudulent purpose, to substitute another rider or driver of suitable weight.

RULE XXIV—SELECTION OF JUDGES.

SEC. 1. In every exhibition or race, over the course of a member, the presiding officer or manager of this member shall choose or authorize the selection of three (3) competent judges for the day or race, who shall understand the rules of this Association, and shall rigidly enforce the same; and all their decisions shall be subject to and in conformity with said rules. A starter may be employed, and he or the judge selected to do the starting shall have control of the horses and drivers, under the rules, with the approval of the judges, from the score in every heat until the word "go" is given.

SEC. 2. Any person who at the time is under penalty of suspension or expulsion, or who has any interest in or any bet dependent upon the result of a race, or has any interest in either of the horses engaged therein, shall thereby be restricted from acting as a judge in that race. And if any person who is thus disqualified shall intentionally violate this restriction, he shall, upon conviction thereof by the Board of Appeals, be expelled.

RULE XXV—JUDGES' STAND.

SEC. 1. None but the judges of the race in progress, the starter, the clerk of the course, or secretary and their assistants, shall be allowed in the judges' stand during the pendency of a heat.

RULE XXVII.—CLERK OF THE COURSE.

SEC. 1. It shall be the duty of each member to provide the services of a competent person to assist judges in each and every race upon their respective courses, who shall be styled the clerk of the course

SEC. 2. He may, at the request of the judges, assist in weighing riders or drivers, assigning the positions of horses before the race or other similar duties, and shall keep a book, in which shall be recorded a description of the dress or colors worn by each rider or driver and the weight carried; he shall note the time when a heat is finished, and shall notify the judge or ring the bell at the expiration of the time allowed between heats; he may assist the judges in placing the horses at the finish of the heat.

SEC. 3. He shall record, in a book suited to that purpose, an account of every race in the following form—to wit: First, all horses entered and the names of the riders or drivers; next, the starting horses and the positions assigned them; next, a record of each heat, giving the position of each horse at the finish; then the official time of each heat, and at the end an official summary of the race, giving the drawn, distanced and ruled-out horses, if any there be. He shall record all protests, fines, penalties and appeals. This book shall be signed by the judges and shall constitute the official record.

RULE XXVIII.—DISTANCE AND PATROL JUDGES.

SEC. 1. Same as Section 1 of old Rule 27, except to strike out the words "But in the absence of a distance judge or his failing to act."

RULE XXIX.—POWERS AND DUTIES OF JUDGES.

SEC. 2. Same as Section 2 of old Rule XXVIII, except the last sentence, which now reads: "But in all stakes and matches a failure to appear promptly at the appointed time shall constitute a forfeit."

SEC. 5. Relates to a horse that has been "pulled." The first half of the section is the same as Section 5 of old Rule XXVIII, but there are several changes in the last portion, which now reads as follows: "And any professional rider or driver who, without good and sufficient reason, refuses to be so substituted, may be fined, suspended, or both, by order of the judges, upon approval of the Board of Appeals; and the judges may declare such heat void, if it be a deciding heat of the race; and if the result and circumstances of the race shall confirm their belief the rider or driver so removed may be fined not to exceed the amount of the purse or stake competed for, or suspended, or expelled. And if the owner or person or persons controlling the offending horse shall be a party or parties to such fraud, he or they may be similarly punished. The judges may waive distance, except for fouls, as to any horse for which they have substituted a rider or driver."

RULE XXX.—STARTING AND KEEPING POSITIONS.

SEC. 1. Same as Section 4 of old Rule 29, except that after the words "and in scoring" in the fourth line, is added the following: "Any horse delaying the race may, after notice to the driver, be started regardless of his position or gait."

SEC. 2. The starter shall choose one of the contending horses to score by. And no driver shall come up in advance of said horse, nor shall he hold back, under penalty of a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $50, which shall be imposed and collected at once.

SEC. 5. In all cases the starting word or signal shall be given by the starter.

SEC. 12. Only one heat in a race may be dropped by any horse in a race, and only then by permission of the judges, first obtained and announced from the stand prior to the heat, and no money shall be won or lost on such horse on that heat. A violation of this rule may be punished by fine or suspension or expulsion.

RULE XXXI.—HORSES BREAKING.

SEC. 3. In case of any horse repeatedly breaking or running, or performing in a mixed gait, while another horse is trotting, the judges shall punish the horse so at fault by placing him last in the heat, or by distancing him. A horse breaking four times in a heat may be regarded as repeatedly breaking, but nothing herein shall be construed into permitting a horse to make four or less number of breaks without being liable to the penalties prescribed. If, in the opinion of the judges, a driver allows his horse to make repeated breaks for the purpose of fraudulently losing a heat, he shall be liable to the penalties elsewhere provided for frauds and fouls.

RULE XXXIV.—TIME BETWEEN HEATS; PASSING TO THE LEFT; HORSES PERMITTED ON THE TRACK.

SEC. 4. Horses meeting on the track shall pass to the left.

RULE XXXV.—TIME ALLOWED IN CASE OF ACCIDENT.

SEC. 1. In case of accidents only so much time shall be allowed as the judges deem necessary and proper.

RULE XXXVII.—PLACING HORSES.

SEC. 1—A horse must win a majority of the heats which are required by the conditions of the race to be entitled to the purse or stake; but if a horse shall have distanced all competitors in one heat, the race will then be concluded, and such horse shall receive the entire purse or stakes contended for unless otherwise provided in published conditions.

RULE XXXVIII.—DISTANCE.

Secs. 1 and 2. Same as sections 1 and 2 of old Rule XXXVII. (Section 3 of old Rule XXXVII. is dropped.)

RULE XLII.—SUPPRESSION OF TIME.

Sec. 1 and 2. Same as corresponding sections of old Rule XLI.

Sec. 3. Any person who shall, as judge or timer, be guilty of fraudulent suppression of time in any public race should be ruled off from the courses of all members.

RULE XLIII.—PUBLIC RACE.

Sec. 2. All races where no distance or way of going is specified shall be trotted in harness, mile heats, three in five, except for horses under four years old, in which event they shall be mile heats, two in three.

RULE XLIV.—TIME RECORDS AND BARS.

Sec. 4. Time made on non-association tracks shall be records and bars, as the case may be, the same as if made over association tracks.

RULE XLVII.—DECORUM.

Sec. 1. Any owner, trainer, rider, driver or attendant of any horse, or any other person who at any time and in any place shall use improper language to an officer of the course or a judge of a race, or be guilty of any improper conduct toward such officers or judges or persons serving under their orders, such improper language or conduct having reference to acts and things connected with the administration of the course or of any race thereon, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or by suspension or expulsion.

Sec. 2. Same as Section 2 of old Rule 46, except the last word, "expulsion," is changed to the words "being ruled off."

RULE XLVIII.—LOUD SHOUTING.

Sec. 1. Loud shouting or other improper conduct is forbidden during the pendency of a heat, and shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $100 or by suspension.

RULE XLIX.—"FOULS," OR MISCONDUCT.

Sec. 1. Any misconduct during or in respect to a race, fraudulent in its nature or injurious to the character of the turf, although not specified in these rules, is forbidden and is punishable by a fine not to exceed $100, suspension or expulsion.

RULE L.—FINES.

Sec. 1. All persons who shall have been fined under these rules, unless they pay the fines in full on the day when imposed or when demanded, shall be suspended until they are so paid or deposited with the treasurer of the National Trotting Association; and if there shall be due, or shall thereafter become due to such person from any member any sum whatever, so much thereof as is necessary to pay said fine shall be deducted, or if the amount shall be less, same shall be applied on account thereof.

SEC. 2. Same as Sec. 2 of old Rule XLIX., except to add these words: "Within ten days after meeting."

RULE LII.—SUSPENSIONS AND EXPULSIONS.

SEC. 4. Any member wilfully allowing the use of its track by an expelled man or horse, after notice from the secretary of the National Trotting Association, shall be subject to a fine not exceeding $500 for each offense, or suspension or expulsion.

RULE LIV.—AGE OF A HORSE.

SEC. 1. The age of a horse shall be reckoned from the first day of January of the year of foaling.

OTHER BUSINESS.

The rules having been disposed of, Judge Whitehead presented the following resolutions, which were adopted:

RESOLVED, That the actions of the Board of Review heretofore taken touching the relation of this association with the American Trotting Association are hereby approved.

RESOLVED, That all periods and horses under expulsion for fraud by the American Trotting Association or by reputable running associations conducting races under established rules, and such persons and horses as shall hereafter be expelled, shall, during such time, stand expelled from courses of the members of this association. The power is reserved to the Board of Appeals, and in case the board is not in session the president of the National Trotting Association is vested with the power, for good cause shown, to revise or modify any such expulsion in so far as it affects this association.

The question of licensing drivers was ably advocated by Secretary M. M. Morse, and it was finally referred to a committee, consisting of Gov. Bulkeley, President Johnston and J. C. Sibley, who will confer with a committee from the American Trotting Association and have power to act.

The President of the National Trotting Association has not heretofore received any compensation. A resolution was offered and unanimously adopted fixing the salary of the president at $2,000 a year.

The "tin cup" was not mentioned during the entire proceedings, nor was any action taken touching that method of obtaining records. After the congress had adjourned, several delegates spoke of the fact and considered it an oversight.

It is quite probable that the next congress will be held in California, but it was not definitely settled, and was left to the president for final action.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were adopted, and show the association to have the largest membership during its history and to be in a flourishing financial condition.

Adjourned.

BOARD OF REVIEW.—OFFICIAL REPORT.

A special meeting of the Board was convened by order of the President on February 9, 1892, at 11 A. M., at the Murray Hill Hotel, New York.

The following cases were considered:

1,935—The National Trotting Association vs. C. H. Nelson, Waterville, Me., and b s Nelson; F. L. Noble, Grand Rapids, Mich.; George Robens, Grand Rapids, Mich., and g s Alcryon. Application for an order in the matter of alleged fraud in the $10,000 Stallion Stake race trotted at Beacon Park, Boston, Mass., on September 23, 1889.

Mr. Noble did not appear. Defendant Robens was heard by himself and by counsel. Messrs. Bonner and Archer, having been judges in the race, were by request excused from voting in the decision of the case. After consideration it was determined that this Association would have no more business dealings or connection with defendant, F. L. Noble, and it was Ordered, That he and the gr s Alcryon be expelled for fraud in the Balch Stallion Stake race.

The case was partially investigated as to defendant Robens and continued to the May meeting of the Board at Chicago, Illinois.

2,188—Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, Lexington, Ky., ex parte. Application for a re-hearing of case No. 1,939.

Case No. 1,939 was the application of L. A. Davies for removal of fine and suspension imposed by order of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association November 1, 1889.

It was ordered that the application be denied.

At 6 P. M. an adjournment was taken to the next day at 1 P. M. At that time no further business appearing, the Board adjourned sine die. M. M. MORSE, Secretary.

Importations of Animals for Breeding Purposes.

Two weeks ago we published the law as it was in vogue, this week we present to our readers the law as revised and published January 22. The attention of importers of live stock is drawn to the following:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY, WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 22, 1892.

TO OFFICERS OF THE CUSTOMS AND OTHERS:

The following lists of recognized breeds of animals stating name of each breed, the country where bred, and the name of the record book for the same, where such book has been established, together with a list of American books of record, said lists having been furnished to this Department by the Honorable Secretary of Agriculture, is published for your information and guidance, in connection with Department's Circulars, No. 111, of Oct. 30, 1890, (Synopsis 10305); No. 6, Jan. 14, 1891 (Synopsis 10595); No. 17, of Feb. 4, 1891 (Synopsis 10688); and in lieu of the list contained in Circular No. 125 of Aug. 6, 1891 (Synopsis 11611).

It having been ascertained that registers have been established for the sole object of making crossbred and mongrel animals eligible for free entry into the United States, and as paragraph 482 of the act of Oct. 1, 1890, provides that no animal shall be admitted free unless pure bred of a recognized breed, the object of the law being, in the opinion of this department and the Department of Agriculture, to exclude from free entry animals not absolutely and strictly pure bred, it is hereby directed that on and after April 1, 1892, no animal which is brought into the United States from foreign countries for breeding purposes shall be admitted free of duty unless the importer furnishes a certificate which shall contain a pedigree in the form hereafter given, showing that all the ancestors have been recorded in a book of record established for that breed for five generations on the side of the sire, and four on the side of the dam, together with the affidavit of the owner, agent or importer that such animal is the identical animal described in said certificate of record and pedigree.

Unless such certificates of pedigree is produced, therefore, the animal shall be considered dutiable as not being pure bred of a recognized breed, and duly registered in the book of record established for that breed.

In case such certificates are not at hand at the time of the arrival of the animals, and other evidence is produced satisfactory to the collector, showing that the animals are entitled to free entry, the collector may so admit them, taking a bond in double the value of the animals for the production of the proper certificate.

In accordance with the recommendation of the Secretary of Agriculture, officers of the customs are hereby directed not to admit horses recorded in the so called "Select Clydesdale Stud Book" to free entry under the paragraph of law above referred to.

O. L. SPAULDING, Acting Secretary.

The act upon which this order is is as follows:

482. Any animal imported specially for breeding purposes shall be admitted free: Provided, That no such animal shall be admitted free unless pure bred of a recognized breed, and duly registered in the book of record established for that breed: And provided further, That certificate of such record and of the pedigree of such animals shall be produced and submitted to the custom officer, duly authenticated by the proper custodian of such book of record, together with the affidavit of the owner, agent or importer that such animal is the identical animal described in said certificate of record and pedigree. The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such additional regulations as may be required for the strict enforcement of this provision.

The act is not liberally interpreted by the Department. It is easy to trace every thoroughbred horse for five generations, and with him there should be no deviation from the rule. It is different with Percherons, Clydesdales and Hackneys. In many cases it is impossible to trace these for five generations on the side of the sire and four on the side of the dam. A rigid enforcement of the order will shut out from our ports much of the trash which up to this time has been admitted free of duty. This may prove a hardship to some, but it will certainly improve the breeds of stock which we are trying to adapt to the wants of the country.

There is necessity also for a law compelling all exporters of horses to show a certificate of the breeding of all animals that are intended for breeding purposes in foreign countries before they leave a port in the United States and a duplicate, or the certificate should be sent to the foreign consul and a triplicate should be kept on file by the collector of the port from which the animal or animals are shipped. The certificate should contain a complete description as well as the pedigree and name of the breeder of all such horses.

PALO ALTO FARM BROODMARES.

Fifty-six of Them Sold Under the Hammer at Fair Prices—The Purchasers, Pedigrees and Sums Realized.

Wednesday last was the day appointed for the sale by Killip & Co. of fifty-six matrons from the trotting department of Senator Stanford's far-famed Palo Alto Stock Farm. Early the sun began to peep out and create a disturbance among the clouds, and the vigorous waving of the baton of Old Sol resulted in a quick scattering around the corner, out of sight, of the Rain God and his fickle followers. Then the large crowd present remarked that it was a great day for a horse sale. Soon the large sale-yard was fairly filled with a gathering of California's representative breeders. They all showed that they were in favor of lotteries, for the buying of these mares, almost without exception non-producers in the past of 2:30 speed, was nothing, if not a chance in lottery, in nearly every case. However, there were a few comparatively young mares, many were right royally bred and stinted to some famous horses. The choice ones in the consignment were singled out without delay by the well-posted horsemen present, and lively bidding resulted.

One thing we noticed was the fine condition of every mare sold, and the sale was not spoiled by sparing the brush.

The highest-priced animal of the sale was Belle Isle (sister to Carlisle, 2:26½), nine years old, by Piedmont, 2:17¼, dam Isabelle, by Hambletonian 10; second dam, Godfrey Star, by Seely's American Star 14; third dam by Hector, son of Latourett's Bellfounder. She is in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¾. Henry Pierce, of Pierce Bros., the well-known breeders, secured her after some lively tilting, for $1,325, and she is undoubtedly a bargain at the figure, everything considered. John McCord, of Napa, purchased Urania, a good-looking brown mare by Kentucky Prince, dam Lady Belmont, by Hambletonian 10, for $950. She is heavy in foal to Azmoor, 2:20½, and is undoubtedly cheap for the money. Henry Pierce, in Nettie Benton (by General Benton, dam Nellie Walker, dam of Peruvian Bitters, 2:23½), got about the best-looking mare in the lot, and she went for $610. D. J. Murphy corraled a royal one for $625 in Myrtha, by Contractor, 1084, dam McCa, by Almont 33; second dam, Dolly (dam of Director, Czarina, Thorndale and Onward), by Mambrino Chief. Genie, a good-looker by General Benton, dam Gipsy, by Paul's Abdallah, with foal at side by Electricity, 2:17¼, went wonderfully cheap at $655, Henry Pierce being the purchaser. That gentleman also captured Juanita at $660. She is by General Benton, dam Juniatta (sister to Clay, 2:25½), by Fred Low, 656. Wilfred Page's purchase, Millie, by Milton Medium 4782, dam Belle (dam of Overman, 2:19¼), is a very fine-looking bay mare. Dan McCarty, of "ye white bonnet," was a very busy man, and bought more than any one at the auction. His eldest boy, Joe, also succeeded in securing a number of well-bred ones at mighty cheap figures. Camiola, a nine-year-old standard mare by General Benton, was a great bargain at $195. Frank H. Burke, in Alvaretta, Bright Eyes, Gazelle and Nettie Walker, secured the only producing matrons in the consignment.

The fifty-six head brought $16,350, an average of $291.98—a very satisfactory sum considering the age of most of the mares and their failure to produce anything to startle trotting turfdom.

In the large and good-natured assemblage we noticed the following persons: Frank H. Burke and Mrs. Burke, Henry and Ira Pierce, J. I. Crooks, M. B. V. Watson, Pat Farrell, Mike Ryan, F. Clausen, James A. Dustin, J. A. McKerron, Ariel Lathrop, John Layng, D. J. McCarty and son, William Vioget, R. B. Milroy, J. Gamble, F. C. Lusk, Louis Livingston, Peter Brandow, George Covey, H. P. Saxe, city; Gilbert Tompkins, of Souther Farm; Fred Loeber, of Vineland Stock Farm, St. Helena; T. B. Valentine, of Belvedere; Thomas Duncan, of Salinas; Professor E. P. Heald, Dr. Laviaga; Cy White and J. R. Rose, of Lakeville; William Murray, of San Joaquin county; Ben Smith, of Mooneyville; S. E. Herd; G. Valensin, of Valensin Stock Farm; Wilfred Page, of Rancho Cotate, Penn's Grove; E. Newlands, of Oakland; D. J. Kern County, California.

The conditions which surround and obtain in that portion of the famous San Joaquin Valley, known as Kern County, are of such a nature as to impress one with the largest amount of the favors, with the fewest possible burdens known to this life. The rich, alluvial soil, strong in all the requirements of a rich and incomparable productive fruit region, contains possibilities for the accumulation ofwealth rarely equalled and in no other place in the world excelled. It stands as a demonstrated fact that at no other point in the entire country exist conditions so favorable for the upbuilding of homes with all of the beauties and comforts of climate, scenery and rare products which go to make life worth the living. The system of irrigation adopted by the Kern County Land Company whose advertisement appears elsewhere in this issue is one of the most perfect, covering over 400,000 acres of the choicest lands in this incomparable valley ever placed in operation. There can be no questioning the fact that this company is enabled to offer and is to-day offering an opportunity to all who may desire to acquire homes to do so at low prices and on such terms as render payment therefor an easy matter. See their advertisement elsewhere in this issue and write them for particulars.

Bloomfield Maid, dam of Baden 2:24¾, Charley C. 2:18½ and Lilly C. 2:20¼, foaled a brown filly Thursday, Feb. 25th. The lusty little youngster is by Mr. Potter's stallion, who was by Guy Wilkes 2:15, out ot Laura M. 2:27.

IS LIFE WORTH LIVING?

That depends upon the Liver, for if the Liver is inactive the whole system is out of order the breath is bad, digestion poor, head dull or aching, energy and hopefullness gone, the spirits are depressed, a heavy weight exists after eating, with general despondency and the blues. The Liver is the housekeeper of the health; and a harmless, simple remedy that acts like Nature, does not constipate afterwards or require constant taking, does not interfere with business or pleasure during its use, makes Simmons Liver Regulator a medical perfection.

"Have tested its virtues personally and know that for Dyspepsia, aiffiousness, and Throbbing Headache it is the best medicine the world ever saw. Have tried many other remedies before Simmons Liver Regulator, and none gave more than temporary relief, but the Regulator not only relieved but cured me.

The Fast Trotting Stallion

Silas Skinner.

RECORD 2:17. STANDARD, 10,681,

Will make the season of 1891, commencing February 1st and ending July 1st, at De Turk's Breeding Stables on Donahue Street, opposite De Turk's Wine Cellars, Santa Rosa, Cal.

SILAS SKINNER, sired by Alcona Jr., 2:24; first dam Fontana, dam of Flora Belle, 2:24 by Almont 33, sire of thirty-eight in the 2:30 list; second dam Fannie Williams, dam of Bay Chieftain, 2:28¼, by Alexander's Abdallah 15, sire of Goldsmith Maid, 2:14; Rosalind, 2:21¼; Thorndale, 2:22¼, etc.; third dam by Gaine's Denmark; fourth dam by Robert Bruce; fifth dam by Virginia Whip.

ALCONA JR. was sired by Alcona 730 (sire of Flora Belle, 2:24; Clay Duke, 2:30; Prince Warwick, trial 2:18, etc. by Almont 33. First dam Madonna by Cassius M. Clay Jr., sire of Durango, 2:22¼, Harry Clay, 2:22¼; Clay Davis, 2:26½; Cora, 2:30, etc.

The above is a condensed pedigree of Silas Skinner, but enough is given to show him to be as richly bred in the best trotting lines as any horse living, besides being a great individual with remarkable speed and staying qualities, which was shown by his performance on the California Circuit last season. In 1890 Silas Skinner started in six races, trotting in all twenty-three heats. Of these six races Skinner won four and was second in two, and closed the season of 1892 with a record of 2:19.

The performance of Silas Skinner during the season of 1891 has also been very meritorious, having started in seven races, three of which he won, being second twice and twice third. In his race at Sacramento, September 19, 1891, Silas Skinner trotted so horsemen said—one of the gamest races ever trotted in California. His competitors were Frank M and Wanda, whom he defeated, winning the first, third and fourth heats, the second heat falling to Frank M. Time of each heat 2:17, 2:17, 2:17, 2:19.

SILAS SKINNER is a black horse, sixteen hands high, and weighs in stud season about 1,100 pounds. In color, breeding and conformation he approaches very near the ideal stallion, and he descends on both his sire's and dam's side from ancestors who have few equals in the history of the American trotting horse.

TERMS: $100 FOR THE SEASON.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned next season free of charge, provided SILAS SKINNER remains the property of the present owners. Pasturage $5 per month. Every attention and care given to mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, apply to

THE SEAL BROWN STALLION

ONWARDO

11,985.

Sixteen and a quarter hands high. Five years old. Sired by ONWARD, son of George Wilkes, dam Lady Thorn 2d, by Darby, a son of Mambrino Patchen, out of Puggee, by Brignolia. Onward has forty colts in the 2:30 list, and is only sixteen years old—more than any other sire of his age in the country.

The dam of Onwardo has a record of 2:25 and a trial of 2:19. He is perfectly sound and free from all blemishes and imperfections. Has never been handled for speed, but shows great promise; has shown a 2:24 gait to road cart. He is perfectly broken in every respect, and is entirely free from vice and a sure foal-getter.

He is for sale because his owner resides in a limited breeding locality. Cash; no trades or exchange will be considered. Correspondence solicited. Address

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

G. Y. B., San Jose, asks: Can any of your readers tell us if a mare called Endora, by Alexander, has a record, and also give her breeding on her dam's side? Her name does not appear among the 2:30 performers.

J. W. P., Walla Walla, Wash.—Give breeding of Hunt's Commodore. He figures in the pedigree of Warwick Maid, (dam of Prince's Warwick, trial 2:18). Answer—By Mambrino, dam by True American, second dam by imp. Tom Bogus.

W. M., Davisville.—Give me the breeding of the stallion La Harpe? Do you know anything of such a horse? Answer—By Fame (son of Belmont 64)f dam Prairie Bird, by Flaxtail 8132. In 1883 he was standing at the farm of L. H. McIntosh, Chico, Cal.

G. G., Santa Rosa.—Please give the breeding of Robert Bonner, who stood at Petaluma some years ago, or can you refer me to some one that knows? Answer—There was a horse of this name by Gen. Knox 140, dam Pet (or Drew Mare), 2:32, by Gen. McClellan.

D. C. W., Modesto.—Kindly inform me as to how many, and the names of all 2:30 performers Nephew has on his list. Answer—Nine. Beauty Mac, 2:19¾; Voucher, 2:22; Ha Ha, 2:22¼; Lottie H., 2:24; Lucilla, 2:28¼; Geneve, 2:29¾; Ecru, 2:30; Bracelet, (p) 2:21; Barney Horn (p), 2:23¼.

Subscriber, Eureka, Cal.—1. Give breeding of Wayland Forrest. Is he alive and standard? 2. Are any of his get in the list? 3. Has he sired a dam with any in the list? 4. Is Wayland W. standard? Answer.—1. By Alexander's Edwin Forrest 49, dam by St. Charles, thoroughbred. 2. Don't know. 3. He is sire of the dam of Maud Singleton, 2:28½. 4. Not at present.

G. G., Haywards.—Would you kindly furnish me the pedigree of Vermont Messenger in your next issue. He was once owned by Mr. Crittenden, of the Club Stables. I believe, and if any of his get is in the 2:30 list? Answer—The only Vermont Messenger we find was by Hambletonian 10, dam Lady Lockwood, by Neave's Cassius M. Clay, second dam by Rediker's Alexander W.

M. J. C., Merced, Cal.—Please answer in your next who owned Oakland Boy when he died. He died in Tulare I think. What is his breeding and how many has he in the 30 list? Answer—He died in February, 1891, in Tulare City, Cal., the property of Batchelder & Eaton. He was by Winthrop, dam by Blackbird 101 (Simpson's). He has nothing in the list, but he sired the dam of Kate Agnew, 2:28½.

R. H., Kukaian, H. I.—Please inform a reader of your valuable paper the whereabouts of the original old Joe Daniels. If dead, how long since? There is a horse here on the Hawaiian Islands by the name of Joe Daniels, but some people have their doubts about him being the original old Joe. Answer.—Joe Daniels is not dead, to the best of our belief, and at last accounts was owned by J. B. Haggin, of Rancho del Paso Stud, near Sacramento. The horse on the islands is not the original Joe Daniels.

Subscriber, Ukiah.—Will you be kind enough to let me know what Pasha's record is, also who owns him? Answer—Pasha, by Echo, has a record of 2:27¾, made at Marysville on September 7, 1889. J. B. Haggin bred him, and if he does not own him now you could find out by writing to Superintendent Mackey, Rancho del Paso, near Sacramento, Cal. Pasha, by Sultan, has a record of 2:36, and is owned by Dave Bryson, Linden, San Joaquin County, Cal.

B. C. A., Milpitas.—1. Give me the dam of Woful? 2. Give me the dam of Molly Clay? Is Thomas Rysdyk at all fashionably bred, or is he just medium, or what? Answer—1. Wier, by Kentucky Whip. 2. The only Molly Clay we find is by American Clay 34, dam by Peerless, son of Vermont Black Hawk 5. She was foaled in 1868, so this is hardly the one. 3. We like this breeding very much, but it has thoroughbred blood too close to be deemed "fashionable" by the majority. On the dam's side it could almost be called "fashionable."

F. W., Crow's Landing.—Please inform me through your valuable paper the breeding of a horse called Oddfellow, that belonged around Woodland. Was he a trotting or running-bred horse? What was his record? Answer—By Jack Hawkins, dam Lola Montez, by Grey Eagle; second dam, Corinna, by Trumpeter, etc. Jack Hawkins was by Boston, dam by Medoc, second dam Mary Stresbley, by John Henry, etc. He was a thoroughbred, and fast, we understand, but we do not know his best record. He belonged to George W. Grayson, of this city.

M. F. T., Alameda.—Are the following stallions standard and registered or standard or registered: Ulster Chief, by Hambletonian 10, dam Lady Ulster; Stanford, by Electioneer, dam Annie Laurie; Revolution, by Prince of Orange, dam Cricket; California Chief, by Hamilton Chief, dam Lady Vernon; Comet, by Young Black Hawk, I believe, dam I do not know. Answer.—Ulster Chief is not registered, we believe, but is entitled to registration; Stanford is not; Revolution, although the sire of Sidney J., 2:26¼, is not eligible to registration; Hamilton Chief is not registered or eligible to registration; Comet is not registered or eligible to registration.

The Play, Sacramento.—Please to decide this question through the columns of your valuable paper: Six men are shaking dice, A, B, C, D, E and F. A shakes three sixes. C bet A that three sixes won't win pot. B shakes two fours, C shakes two deuces, D shakes three sixes, E shakes two trays, F two fours. Does the side that bet on three sixes winning win or lose? Answer—If you were shaking but three dice, C. wins; if five dice, it would depend upon how you had agreed to shake. If it was "Eastern" dice, ace counts highest, and whichever party had thrown the highest dice, outside of the three sixes, would be the winner.

W. A. C., Stockton, Cal.—Give breeding of a bay horse that ran in Stockton and I think named Morphine, and then I want to know the breeding of his dam as far as you can trace it. Answer—Morphine, bay horse, foaled 1872, bred and owned by A. Miller, of Stockton, was by Norfolk, dam by Lodi. Susie Blair, the second dam, we know nothing of. Molly Rogers, third dam, owned by W. M. Williamson, of California, was by Conflagration, dam by imp. Monarch; second dam Polly Peacham, by John Richards; third dam Fair Forester, by imp. Chance; fourth dam, Celia, by Symme's Wildair; fifth dam Lady Bolingbroke, by imp. Pantaloon; sixth dam, Cades by Wormsley's King Herod, etc. [See Vol. 1, Bruce's American Stud Book, page 407.]

E. W. C., San Jose.—Can you give me the pedigree of Billy Wilson's Patchen (of San Jose), Belmont Boy, or Bufington's Nutwood Boy, who, I believe, are brothers. I want the dam's pedigree. There is in Tulare, a large, heavy, bay horse called Juanito Almont, owned by Amos Roberts, of Oakland, said to be the sire of Almont Patchen. Is it a fact? Answer—We find a bay gelding called Patchen, record 2:45, by George M. Patchen, Jr., 31, dam by Excelsior. He trotted at Salinas in October, 1881, and won against Happy Ellen, Lucy and Josie, driven by W. Peck. Belmont Boy (p) 2:15, was by Nutwood, dam Lilly Vernon, by Tom Vernon. Nutwood Boy was by Nutwood 600, dam by Goldfinder (son of imp. Belshazzar and a Wagner mare), second dam by Grabair.l, third dam a Morgan mare. He belonged to Walter Mastin, of Sacramento. Juanito, by Tilton Almont, 2:26, is the sire of Almont Patchen (p), 2:15. The horse you mention is probably the sire of Corey's great horse.

Sonoma and Marin Agricultural Society.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the above-mentioned organization in another column. The conditions of the various trotting stakes make them within easy reach of all owners of trotters, and the added money shows great liberality and enterprise on the part of the members of the society. The district (No. 4) comprises the counties of Sonoma, Marin, Napa, Solano, Contra Costa, Yolo, Lake, Mendocino and Humboldt, and Petaluma is one of the best racing points on the whole circuit. Entries, which should be addressed to the popular Secretary, Thomas Maclay, close April 1, 1892. Do not fail to read the society's advertisement.

Modesto Spring Races.

By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that the Stanislaus Stockbreeders' Association have prepared a programme of races to take place at Modesto, March 29th, 30th and 31st. Entries will close March 19th. This will be a grand opportunity for owners of thoroughbreds to have a good time and try the mettle of their youngsters. A large crowd generally attends all the meetings of this association, and all visiting horsemen can rely upon to receive to best of care and attention from the officers and members.

A CLEAR-HEADED, PRACTICAL MAN.

This looks like him. Whether he's breeder, trainer, superintendent or veterinary, he's one who knows a good thiug when he sees it. It will pay you, if you don't know it already, to find out what he has to say.

Such men, hundreds and hundreds of them, here and abroad, are using, approving, endorsing, and recommending the Perfection Stallion Guard.

That's natural. It's the only device on the market which, without torture or any risk of injury to the parts, will effectively prevent your stallion from self-abuse.

Every practical man knows what that means to him. It's dollars and cents, and a great many of them.

Price $6.00 each. Send for catalogue and testimonials. Sold by all dealers, or address,

CONDITIONS.

Half of all entrance money of starters added to purse. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association Rules to govern runs and National Association rules to govern trots.

Special races will be run if time allows.

The Board reserves the right to run or trot any two races alternately or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board no horse is qualified to be entered in any district race that has not been owned in the district two months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted without any right to compete for a purse.

All colts properly entered in the district, if sold, are entitled to start in such race.

In all races noted above, four or more paid up entrances are required to fill, and three or more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold entrance and start a race with a less number and may deduct a proportionate amount of the purse.

Colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

All entries closed for races Saturday, March 19th, at 6 P. M.

Subscribers liable for first payment only, but should a subscriber fail to make any subsequent payments when due he thereby surrenders his subscriptions and previous payments to the association, with the right of substitution.

The Standard Stallion

WILKES PASHA 2618

Will make the Season of 1891 at the Stables of the undersigned, at the Trancas Bridge, two miles north of Napa, on the Soda Springs Road.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

WILKES PASHA 2618 is a dark bay with white hind feet; 16½ hands high; bred by R. P. Pepper, of South Elkhorn Farm, Frankfort, Kentucky; sired by Onward 1411, record 2:25¼, trial 2:17; he by George Wilkes, 2:22, sire of seventy-five horses in the 2:30 list, ten with records below 2:20; first dam Fisher (dam of Clara Wilkes, 2:18¾, trial 2:25), by American Clay 34, sire of Maggie Briggs, 2:27, Ella Clay, 2:27½, and the dams of Executor, 2:24½, Ranchero, 2:21½, Judge Hawes, 2:24, Ambassador, 2:22¼, Sir Walter, 2:18¾, and nine others in 2:30; second dam by Wilson's Snow Storm, sire of Jim Irving, 2:23; third dam by Paddie Burns, thoroughbred.

WILKES PASHA is the only son of Onward in this part of California. He combines the much-prized Clay cross, his dam being a producing daughter of American Clay 34, who traces to the very best of thoroughbred foundations. As an individual, Wilkes Pasha is as handsome a horse as one could wish to see. He has been bred to ordinary mares. Every one of his progeny shows perfect trotting action and fine size; in color they are all deep bays or browns, and in disposition they cannot be excelled.

TERMS—$30 for the season. Pasturage $4 per month. Every attention and care will be given to mares, but no liabilities assumed for accidents or escapes.

DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently-formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better-bred stallion stands for public service in California to-day. He is only six years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON,

with the usual return privilege. Excellent care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

ABDOL 17,716.

RECORD, 2:28.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

Abdol was foaled in 1883, bred by John Watson, Oakland, and is one of the finest sons of the Grand Moor. He is a handsome black in color, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a horse of splendid proportions, exquisite style and perfect trotting action. He is remarkably level-headed, intelligent and of kind disposition, and possesses the qualities of speed and gameness to a remarkable degree. His record is no mark of his speed. When it was made it was the intention to keep him in the 2:30 class. He has shown in his work last quarters in 34 seconds—a 2:16 gait—and can get away equally fast.

    - Lady Fallis, by American Star 14
  - Daughter of
    - American Star 14
    - Daughter of Harry Clay 45

The attention of breeders is called to the above pedigree, which shows three crosses of American Star, embracing also the following great broodmares: Imogene, Clara, Dolly, Lady Fallis and Gretchen.

GUIDE'S sire has a record of 2:17, made in a five-heat race, and he is also closely related to Phallas, record 2:13¾ fourth heat, Jay-Eye-See, record 2:10, and Clingstone, 2:14. Guide, with a record of 2:16¼, is the fastest trotting son of the "Black Tornado," showing himself to possess the greatest share of the best qualities of his sire and grandsire, which, with his three crosses of American Star blood, makes him the peer of any trotting sire in the world.

TERMS: $200 for the season, with usual return privileges. Excellent pasturage, $5 per month, and the best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

THE BEST-BERD AND FINEST-LKOOING WILKES STALLION IN THE STATE.

No. 8707. BILLY THORNHILL Rec. 2:24 1-2

By BEVERLY WILKES, Brother of
PROSPECT MAID, 2:23½, WALSINGHAM, 2166 (sire of LATITUDE, 2:19¾ at 4 years).
GEORGIA WILKES, sire of VALENTINE, 2:18½, BASBLEN WILKES, 2:24½, BILLY WILKES, 2:29½, BESSIE WILKES, 2:31½.

Dam EMILY, Dam of
FORTUNA, 2:22, BILLY THORNHILL, 2:24½, COL. YOUNG, 2:30.

Second dam SUE STOUT,

Third dam LEAR MARE, Dam of
JIM IRVING, 2:23, and YOUNG JIM, sire of BUTTERFLY, 2:19¾, GARNETT, 2:19, and twelve other performers.

By GEORGE WILKES, Sire of
GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-four others in the 2:30 list, and seventy-five sires of 249 trotters.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of
Seventy-five producing sons and forty-six producing daughters.

By ASHLAND 47, Son of
MAMBRINO CHIEF 11 and sire of HIGHLAND WIN 1226, and others in list and the dams of EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, and others.

By LEAR'S SIR WILLIAM, Son of
HOWARD'S SIR CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES (who died when but three years of age) was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot 2:27½ (sire of Hannis, 2:17¾, and others), out of Juliett, by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2½ hands, and weighs 1,080 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well-built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well-shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:40 without boots of any kind. His first colt showed trials last fall in 2:20 in his 3-year-old form, and all of his 2-year-olds that have been handled any show lots of speed and a nice way of going. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

    - REBEL DAUGHTER, by Williamson's Belmont.

NUTWOOD WILKES is a handsome chestnut in color, stands 15½ hands high, is level-headed, kind and intelligent.

RAPID TRANSIT,

Limited to Fifteen approved Outside Mares at $75 for the Season.

RAPID TRANSIT is a fine-looking bay horse, stands 15½ hands high. He is by DIRECTOR 1989, 2:17; dam Lida W., record 2:18¼, dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½ at 3 years. (See above tabulated pedigree.) He is a horse of splendid individuality and excellent blood lines.

LONG BRANCH.

Limited to Fifteen Outside Mares at $50 for the Season.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¾ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, sire of seven with records from 2:17¾ to 2:30), by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Zola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25¾ (sire of seven with records from 2:10 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty Outside Mares at $50 for the Season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27¾, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¾ (sire of 77 with records from 2:11½ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11½ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track); dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30; the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23½, made in 1860; the fastest and gamest representative of the Clay family). This pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great broodmares. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains—the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race-horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and nineteen others from 2:18¼ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or ten per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

Delwin 14,681, record 2:26 1-2, will, if he has no setbacks, pace in 2:15 or better, and beat 2:30 trotting over the fast Stockton kite track this fall. Delwin is one of the handsomest grandsons of the great Moor; in color, he is a dark dapple bay, sound as a dollar, outside of his broken hind leg, and the best of feet and legs; 15.1½ hands high, and weighs 1,000 pounds; he is one of the finest-formed horses for great speed in the land; has the same level head and intelligence that his half-brother, Guide, 2:16¼, has; in color and form he resembles Harry Clay 45 (sire of the dam of Electioneer and George Wilkes, 2:22), more than any horse that we ever saw. Delwin has the same blood lines as the handsome grandson of The Moor, Stamboul, 2:11; he has two crosses of American Star 14, also of Clay, one of Hambletonian 10, sire of the dam of Stamboul, 2:11; one to Mambrino Chief, sire of the dam of Director, 2:17, and two of the great Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Nutwood, 2:18¾, combining altogether the same blood lines that lay in the grandest stallions, living or dead—Arion, 2:10¾, Stamboul, 2:11; also the first yearling to beat 2:30, and who trotted the fastest last quarter in that mile that was ever trotted by any yearling, 31 seconds—Freedom, 2:29¾.

Del Sur, 2:24, sire of Don Tomas, 2:20, and Cousin Joe, 2:20¼, being a full brother to the dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, sire of Freedom, 2:29¾, and two others better than 2:28. Delwin's colts all show the trot out of any kind of mares.

Terms $40, with usual return privilege.

Good water and pasturage at $5 per month, but will not be responsible for accidents or escapes. Mares can be shipped to the farm and home of Delwin, the Meese Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County, Cal., per S. P. R. R., via Martinez. For further particulars, address,

DESCRIPTION—ROSEMEATH is a handsome bay, with black points, foaled 1889, stands 15.2 hands. He is a splendid type of a highly-finished horse; in conformation, style, gait and disposition he is faultless. Rosemeath was bred by L. J. Rose, of Los Angeles.

KHARTOUM 15,208.

PEDIGREE—KHARTOUM 15,208 was sired by Soudan 5103, record, 2:27½, dam Black Bettie (dam of Mamie Comet, 2:23¼, dam of Macleay, 2:22 as a two-year-old), by Sportsman; second dam by St. Clair. Soudan was sired by Sultan, 2:24, dam Lady Babcock (dam of Morrow's Elector, 2:21½), by Hambletonian 725; second dam by a son of the Eaton Horse. Sportsman was by Easton's David Hill. DESCRIPTION—KHARTOUM is a handsome coal-black stallion, foaled 1889, 15.3 hands high, and is very symmetrically built, well muscled, heavy-boned, perfectly gaited and will make a low record this fall. Khartoum is considered one of the most promising young trotters in the State.

Both of these young stallions will make the season of 1892, ending July 15th, at $50, with usual return privileges, at the Moorland Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal. For further particulars address

MISS ALICE, 2:17¼, THORNTON, 2:26¼, WILKESDALE, 2:29.

Second dam BRIDESMAID, Dam of

THORNDALE MAID, 2:30, and TRIXIE, (trial), 2:25½.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of

GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-five others in 2:30 list.

By MAMBRINO PATCHEN, Sire of

Eighteen in 2:30 list, and the dams of GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HOURI, 2:17, ASTRAL, 2:18, BARON WILKES, 2:18, and sixty others in 2:30 or better.

By THORNDALE, 2:22½, Sire of

EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¼, DAISYDALE, 2:19¾, and five others in 2:30 list, by ALEXANDER'S ABDALLAH, sire of GOLDSMITH MAID, 2:14, ALMONT, etc., out of DOLLY, dam of DIRECTOR, 2:17, ONWARD, 2:25¼. THORNDALE, 2:24¼, and CZARINA, 2:21, by MAMBRINO CHIEF.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five producing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12¼, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼ (who was shown trials the past season in 2:14); Thornton, 2:26¼, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:22¼, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12½, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, (the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams, Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, soft and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29½. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

For further particulars, or complete circulars, address

JOHN T. PRICE, Stockton, Cal.

LANCELOT.

The Only Son of ELECTIONEER Standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION—LANCELOT is a seal-brown stallion, 15.1 hands high, foaled April 15, 1881. Bred by C. C. Bemis, San Francisco. He is a horse of fine conformation. He has a beautiful head and neck, fine loins, well-shaped body, deep through the heart, sloping shoulders, fine arms, large stifles and the very best of feet and legs. In action he is pure-gaited. As a three-year-old he trotted quarters in 32 seconds, but was injured and placed in the stud. His colts are all blood-like, large and fast trotters. Several of them are eligible and will enter the 2:30 list this Fall. Lancelot is one of the surest of foal-getters.

PEDIGREE—LANCELOT was sired by the immortal Electioneer (sire of 100 in the list), dam Lizzie Harris by Comus, second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus, the sire of Lizzie Harris, was a full brother to Iowa Chief 528 (sire of Corisande 2:24½, and others). His sire was Bashaw 50, sire of 17 in the 2:30 list, he by Vernol's Black Hawk, dam Belle by Webber's Tom Thumb; second dam Chas. Kent mare, the dam of Hambletonian 10. Vernol's Black Hawk by Long Island Black Hawk, dam by Webber's Kentucky Whip, son of Blackburn's Whip. Long Island Black Hawk, by Andrew Jackson, dam Sallie Miller by Tippo Saib; Andrew Jackson by Young Bashaw, son of Grand Bashaw. Arnold Harris by Whalebone, dam Sportsmistress; she was out of Cub by Medoc; second dam Ann Merry by Sumpter; third dam Grecian Princess by Blackburn's Whip, and so on to the 15th dam.

SALADIN.

The Only Son of NUTWOOD Standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE—Chestnut stallion, 16.1 hands high, foaled April 9th, 1880. By Nutwood 600, the greatest living sire, bred by C. C. Bemis, San Francisco, First dam, Lady Utley Jr. by Speculation, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley, grandam of Western Girl, record 2:27½. Saladin has now a number of yearling and two-year-old colts, all showing great uniformity in size, style and color. All of them are fast trotters, and several will trot in 2:30 this year. Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, by Belmont 64, dam Miss Russell (dam of Maud S., 2:08¾), by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell, by Boston. Nutwood is the sire of 77 in the 2:30 list. Belmont is the sire of 32 trotters in the 2:30 list and of 29 sires of 120 trotters. Lady Utley Jr. is by Speculation, dam Lady Utley, 2:38½, grandam of Western Girl, 2:27½. Speculation (sire of Crown Point 2:24, Gracie S., 2:22, Oakland Maid, 2:22, and the dams of Alfred G., 2:19¾, and Waterford, 2:27), by Hambletonian 10, dam Martha Washington (dam of Hambletonian 725), by Burr's Washington; he by Burr's Napoleon, by Young Mambrino, dam Willis mare, by Mambrino. TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON, for service of each of these stallions. No other opportunity is offered breeders to obtain these blood lines at such prices. Excellent care taken of mares in any manner that owners may desire, at reasonable rates. Usual return privilege. Call on or address C. C. BEMIS, Owner, at Private Stable, First Avenue, between Turk and Eddy Streets, where colts and fillies by these stallions can also be seen.

MARKS L.

Will make the Season of 1892, ending July 1st,

AT THE BAY DISTRICT TRACK.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

MARKS L. was foaled 1888; he is a handsome bay in color; stands 16.2 hands; weighs 1,150. He is a remarkably well-muscled, heavy-boned, clean-limbed horse, and a more perfect-formed or a more promising one is not standing for public service. In action he is a perfect line trotter, and although never having been handled for speed, there is little doubt but that he will trot close to 2:20 this fall.

MARKS L. was sired by Antevolo, 2:19½, out of Maggie L., by Grand Duke Alexis; second dam Vashti, by Chieftain 721; third dam by Nena Sahib (thoroughbred). Antevolo, by Electioneer 125. Grand Duke Alexis was by Stephen A. Douglas 422, out of Black Bessie, by Blucher. Stephen A. Douglas was by Hambletonian 10, out of Kate, by Balsora 1024; second dam Neva, by Vincente Nolte, etc. Chieftain 721 was by Hiatoga, out of a daughter of Trimble's Eclipse. Terms, $50 for the season. For further particulars, address

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14¼ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¾; Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08½. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08½. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Christman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Ray Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½, Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:40 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan, it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000,

AND HIS SERVICE IS OFFERED AT $100 FOR THE SEASON.

The services of no other young horse of his conformation, breeding and quality, with such a record, is offered at so low a figure.

Bear in mind that colt stakes will soon be given for the get of stallions with records of 2:15 or better. If you want to raise colts which will be eligible to enter in all stakes, BREED TO BALKAN, as he is the only horse in this region with a record of 2:15 whose services are offered to the public.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

This horse can be seen at The Oakland Track, in charge of

A. L. HINDS.

Agnew Stock Farm,

HILLSDALE, SANTA CLARA COUNTY.

SERVICE FEE $150. LIMITED TO 20 MARES.

DAWN has a record of 2:18¾, and three heats of a race in 2:20 or better. His sire, Nutwood has a record of 2:18¾ in a third heat, and is now regarded as the greatest of living sires, having put seventy seven into the list altogether, of which twenty-six entered the list in 1892. At his present fee Dawn really is the CHEAPEST OF AMERICAN STALLIONS, and, as a recent writer has said, "his form baffles description." Being by the great Nutwood 600, now standing at $1,000, out of Countess (dam of Strathway, 2:20, Placida and Morna, driven as a double team a trial mile in 2:26), Dawn shows that his family is a trotting one on each side of the house. Countess was by Whipple's Hambletonian, sire of Graves, 2:19, and fourteen others in the 2:30 list. The chestnut stallion

BOSWELL, JR.

BOSWELL JR., sired by Boswell (a son of Almont 33), dam Nellie B., by Kirtley's Patchen; grandam Sophie (grandam of Nancy Hanks, 2:09), by Alexander's Edwin Forrest; great grandam by Parker's Brown Pilot. This stallion Boswell was purchased by King Kalakaua from Gen. W. T. Withers, Fairlawn Stock Farm, Lexington, Kentucky. Boswell Jr.'s dam, Maude, 2:20, by Bertrand 3262, sire of Frank Fisk, 2:29; second dam by Hamilton Chief, son of Royal George 9; third dam the Dooley Mare. MAUDE started in twenty-one races and won eighteen first moneys, and is well known to all horsemen. BOSWELL JR. showed miles in 2:26 and quarters in 35 seconds on two weeks' work.

Mares stabled or pastured (as owners may desire) on reasonable terms. All bills payable before the animal is removed. No liability for accidents. Best fences in the country. Address,

SECOND DAM NAPA QUEEN, BY EUGENE CASSERLY.

THIRD DAM BY STEVENS' BALD CHIEF 1766.

NAPA WILKES was foaled in 1884, bred by Wm. Corbitt, San Mateo; is a handsome bay stallion; 16¾ hands high, and weighs about 1,200 pounds. He is a horse of splendid conformation, tylish, remarkably level-headed, intelligent and of kind disposition. His trotting action is perfect, and for the little work he has had, has shown himself to be a horse of wonderful speed and a producer of speed, which is demonstrated in all his colts.

NAPA WILKES will make the season of 1892 beginning FEBRUARY 1st and ending JULY 31st, in Salinas City, at W. R. Ellis' Stables on Alisal Street.

TERMS FOR THE SEASON, $75.

One-half of the service fee for mares that do not prove with foal will be returned. Excellent pasturage and the best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

DON MARVIN

Five-Year-Old Record 2:28.

DON MARVIN is a beautiful seal brown, foaled bred by Senator Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal; hands high and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by s, 2:23 (sire of four in 2:30 list), he by Electioneer. Dam, CORA (dam of Don Marvin, 2:28, and Elected [3] 2:26) by Don Victor, (sire of the dams of five in 2:30 list) by Belmont. Second dam, CLARABEL (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24½, and Rebecca, dam of four 30 list) by Abdallah Star. Third dam, FAIRY (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:29½, and Sweepstakes, sire of 22 in 2:30 list, and three other producing sires and dams) by Rydsyk's Hambletonian. Fourth dam, EMMA MILLS (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 per- formers) by Seely's American Star.

DON MARVIN is a horse of great natural speed. His record was made with scarcely any preparation, and making a large season in the stud, and is no measure of his speed. His oldest colts (only five in number) are three years old this spring. One of them with very little work trotted quarters last fall in 36 seconds, and could have easily entered the 2:30 list in his two-year-old form had he been given an opportunity.

DON MARVIN will make the season of 1892 at $50, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—Four producing dams.

DIRECTOR JR.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1892 AT THE ASYLUM RANCH, SAN RAFAEL.

DESCRIPTION.

DIRECTOR JR. is a grandly-formed stallion, a handsome black in color; stands 15.3 hands; weighs 1,175 pounds. In appearance and disposition he is more like Director than any other son of that famous sire. He has never been trained for speed, but can easily show a 2:20 galt on the road, and will surely get a mark much below that this fall, as he will be put in training for this season's campaign. Up to the present time he has been in the stud in Oregon and never given an opportunity to show his speed. His colts, like himself, are all grand lookers, show great trotting action, intelligence and gameness. A three-year-old now in training has shown a mile in 2:21, and Directwood, a two-year-old son, won every race in which he was entered last year, and could have gone in the thirty list had his owner so desired. At the Oregon State Fair last year Director Jr. and five of his get were awarded first premiums.

PEDIGREE.

GEO. WILKES

— And the Greatest Son of

ELECTIONEER,

ANTEEO WILKES.

Black horse, foaled May, 1889; sired by GUY WILKES, race-record fourth heat, 2:15¼.

First dam Amy Fay, by ANTEEO, race record 2:16¼, sire of Myrtle, three-year-old record 2:19½, Alfred G., four-year-old record 2:19¾, James Madison, record 2:17¾; second dam by Alexander, record 2:31¼, son of George M. Patchen Jr., record 2:27, and grandsire of Yolo Maid 2:12; third dam by Naubuc, son of Toronto Chief, record 2:24½ and Gypsy Queen, ten-mile record 28:30, and full brother to the famous trotter, Thomas Jefferson, record 2:23; fourth dam Sacramento Belle, ten-mile record 31.07, one-mile record 2:38.

Anteeo Wilkes as an individual is worthy of his great blood lines; he is 15.3 hands high and of perfect form. Although handled but little and never driven once by a professional driver he has trotted a mile in 2:52 quarters in forty seconds without shoes, as a two-year-old, with the marked purity of gait, for which the Guy Wilkes trotters are noted. At close of season will be trained for a great record.

Anteeo Wilkes will make the season of 1892, at the stables of his owner, cor. 45th and Watts street, near Oakland race track; look for sign board on Park Ave., leading from San Pablo Avenue to race track.

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18¼, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:24¼ and 2:24¼. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. "LACONA" made a 2-year-old race record of 2:42¼, with 17 days track work. Every one of the above descendants of ALCONA were trained by different men, in different parts of the country, and all made their records in races over regulation tracks. ALCONA is 11 years old and has already two producing sons and a producing daughter. TERMS, $75 FOR THE SEASON.

GRANDISSIMO 14,995. RECORD, 2:27 3-4. (FULL BROTHER TO GRANDEE, THREE-YEAR-OLD RECORD, 2:23½).

GRANDISSIMO got his first work last season better than 3 minutes November 11, 1891. Was worked out four times and trotted to a record of 2:27¾ in a race Thanksgiving Day at Napa, finishing the last quarter in 36 seconds. Fifteen days training,—certainly a remarkable showing. I expect him to get a low mark next season. His colts are fine lookers and natural trotters. He will be bred to a limited number of mares at the low price of $50 FOR THE SEASON.

ALCONEER 15120. (FULL BROTHER TO ALCONA JR., 2:24, SIRE OF SILAS SKINNER, 2:17). Sired by ALCONA 730, dam Madonna (dam of Alcona Jr., 2:24, Del Rey, 2:29), by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22; grandam by Joe Downing 710.

ALCONEER is a handsome, good-sized horse, and a natural trotter. With two months training last fall as a 3-year-old he trotted a mile in 2:41; last quarter in 37½ seconds. TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CADUCAS 10,840. Sired by ALMONT MEDIUM 2133, record 2:28½, dam Amelia T. (full sister to Prince Warwick, trial 2:18), by Alcona 730; grandam by Almont Mambrino 761; g g dby Delmonico 110; g g g d by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22. CADUCAS is a handsome individual, and will make a trotter. His pedigree is all one could desire. He will be bred to a few mares at the low price of $25 FOR THE SEASON.

KING WHIPPLETON (Standard). PRIVATE STALLION.

Sired by WHIPPLETON 1883, dam Kate Chapman, by Nauduc 504; grandam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31 g g d by Ethan Allen 2903.

The season to commence February 1st. ALCONA'S season to close September 1st. GRANDISSIMO, ALCONEER and CADUCAS' season to close July 1st, as I expect to trot them during the circuit. Mares can be shipped by rail from any part of the State direct to St. Helena or by boat to Napa City, where they will be looked after. The very best of pasturage at $4 per month; hay and grain $8 per month for mares if necessary. Mares kept same as my own at $60 per year. Mares not proving with foal can be returned the following season free. Should any of my stallions die or be sold, mares will be returnable to any of my other stallions by paying difference in service, if any. For further particulars, address

FRED W. LOEBER, St. Helena, Cal.

CYRUS R., 2:17 3-4.

The Fastest Son of Nutwood, 2:18 3-4, now in California.

Will make the SEASON of 1892 at the stable of T. W. BARSTOW, San Jose, Cal.

TERMS, $75 FOR THE SEASON,

With the usual return privilege, providing the stallion or mare does not change ownership.

DESCRIPTION Coal black horse, small star; stands 15½ hands high; weighs 1,100 pounds; well formed and of good disposition. This horse got a record of 2:17¾ with only four weeks' work; he can show a half-mile in 1:06½ and one-eighth in 16 seconds.

PEDIGREE Got by Nutwood 600, first dam Belle, by Jack Roberts; second dam Young Nance, by Shakespeare, thoroughbred. Jack Roberts by Eclair, and he by old pacing Pilot; the dam of Jack Roberts was by Copperbottom. CYRUS R. has two crosses of the great Pilot blood, once through Nutwood and again through Belle, his dam.

SPECIAL NOTICE -No service fee if this horse does not trot in 2:12 or better in 1892, barring accidents.

ANTEROS NUTWOOD.

PEDIGREE -By Anteros 6020, full brother to Anteeo, 2:16¾, Antevolo, 2:19¼, by Electioneer, the greatest sire the world has ever known. First dam Newark Belle, by Nutwood, 2:18¾, the greatest living sire; second dam Tillie, 2:40, by San Bruno, he by David Hill, and he by Vermont Black Hawk; third dam by Young Grey Eagle

DESCRIPTION ANTEROS NUTWOOD is a handsome bay horse with black points, no white; stands sixteen hands one inch high; weighs 1,150 pounds. He is a horse of immense power, and yet so highly finished as to give him the appearance of a thoroughbred. He gives promise of trotting as fast as the celebrated Arion 2:10¾, as he can show better than a 2:20 clip to a road cart without training, and is of the same blood as the phenomenal Arion, 2:10¾, two years old. No service fee will be charged if this horse does not secure a record of twenty-five or better in 1892, barring accidents.

LIMITED TO 20 OUTSIDE MARES AT $50 EACH FOR THE SEASON,

With the usual return privileges by paying difference in price if any. Season to commence February 1st and end June 1st, 1892.

Whipple's Hambletonian Stock Breeds On!

STEVE WHIPPLE 10,179.

(RACE RECORD, 4 YEARS, 2:23.)

Sired by CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN 10,178, dam TWIST by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN 725; second dam JENNY LIND by VERMONT BLACKHAWK 5, etc.

Will make the season of 1892, from February 1 to May 15, at the

PLEASANTON STOCK FARM, PLEASANTON, CAL.,

Under the control of the celebrated driver, GEORGE STARR.

Pasturage at reasonable rates. Best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

TERMS, $100 FOR THE SEASON.

For further particulars address GEORGE STARR, Pleasanton, Cal.,

VOTER.

ELECT was sired by ELECTIONEER, dam INEZ, by NORDALE; second dam LIZZIE, by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT; third dam "THE THRIFT MARE," a thoroughbred brought from Kentucky.

NORDALE, by NORFOLK, dam BLUE DALE, by OWEN DALE; NORFOLK, by LEXINGTON, dam NOVICE, by IMP. GLENCOE; OWEN DALE by WILLIAMSON'S BELMONT, dam MARIA DOWNING, by AMERICAN ECLIPSE. YOUNG TELESCOPE by IMP. TELESCOPE, dam by IMP. MESSENGER.

VOTER is a dark bay, solid color, with black points; foaled 1886; 15 hands 3 inches high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a horse of magnificent form, and is in every way a superior individual. In him is combined the HAMBLETONIAN, CLAY, MORGAN and thoroughbred blood. This horse was in Charles Marvin's care for about ten days during the record meeting at Stockton last fall—the only time he was ever on a track—and the first time he was speeded he showed Marvin an eighth of a mile in 19½ seconds. He was taken sick, and notwithstanding he showed such remarkable speed, had to be taken home.

VOTER will make the season from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON.

ANDY R.

(FULL BROTHER TO STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23.)

Sired by CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of STEVE WHIPPLE, four-year-old race record, 2:23, and KATE AGNEW, 2:28½), dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23, and VOTER), by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of 15 trotters in 2:30; of 9 sires of 12 2:30 trotters, and of 12 dams of 16 trotters in the list.)

CHRISMAN'S HAMBLETONIAN 10,178, by WHIPPLE'S HAMBLETONIAN (sire of nine sires), dam FLORA (dam of three sires of 2:30 speed) by CHIEFTAIN 721; second dam a thoroughbred mare.

ANDY R. is a bright bay, with small star; foaled 1885; 15 hands 2½ inches high, and weighs 1,025 pounds. He is a beauty, and a perfect horse in every way. Will make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

TERMS, $40 FOR THE SEASON, FEBRUARY 1 TO JUNE 1.

PRINDEX.

Sired by DEXTER PRINCE 11,363, (sire of seven in the list) dam TWIST (dam of STEVE WHIPPLE, VOTER and ANDY R.)

PRINDEX is a dark brown horse, white hind feet; foaled 1888; 16 hands high, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He is a good-sized, fine-styled and well-gaited colt, and will certainly make a trotter and sire of speed. He will also make the season at the BELLOTA STOCK FARM from FEBRUARY 1st to JUNE 1st.

AT $40 FOR THE SEASON.

The reader will perceive that the four stallions mentioned herein are all from the same mare. Four individually better or nicer-looking stallions can not be found on any stock farm in California. Horsemen are especially invited to inspect the horses, and I wish to call special attention to their feet and legs—better were never put under a horse. Their dam, TWIST, at sixteen years old, is as sound as the day she was foaled. Their second, third and fourth dams were used for all purposes of farm and road work, and all lived to be over thirty years old—their limbs, at the time of death, being as free of blemishes or of any marks of unsoundness as a suckling colt's.

The disposition of these stallions are of the very best, and their produce are all good size, of fine conformation, have perfect feet and legs, and all show speed to a remarkable degree.

I do not favor extremely high service fees, and the prices on these stallions for this year are placed comparatively very low; that of STEVE WHIPPLE in particular being much less than of any other stallion of equal value or merit in this State.

Mares sent to my address, care of WEBER STABLES, STOCKTON, CAL., will be taken to my ranch at BELLOTA free of charge, provided two or three days' notice be given me by letter.

Pasturage on mares to be bred to VOTER, ANDY R., or PRINDEX free for two months, after that $3 per month. All bills payable at time of service or before the mares are removed.

Usual return privileges, provided mare or horse does not change hands, or money refunded at my option. For further particulars, address

C. E. NEEDHAM, Bellota, San Joaquin Co., Cal.

THE GUY WILKES STALLION

HOCK WILKES.

Sired by GUY WILKES, Record 2:15¼.....By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22.
(Sire of Regal Wilkes, 2:17½; Lillian Wilkes, 2:17¾; Sable Wilkes, 2:18; Vida Wilkes, 2:18¾; Hazel Wilkes, 2:20; Una Wilkes, 2:19¼; Allanna, 2:18; Rupee, 2:14¾, etc.) (Son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian and sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½; Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼; Wilson, 2:16¼; Richardson J. B., 2:16¾; Baron Wilkes, 2:18, and 71 others in 2:30 or better.)

Dam LADY BUNKER.....By MAMBRINO PATCHEN. (Son of Mambrino Chief and sire of 18 in 2:30 list, and of the dams of Houri, 2:17; Astral 2:18; Baron Wilkes, 2:18, and 60 others in 2:30 list.)
(Dam of Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼; Joe Bunker, 2:19, and William L., sire ot Axtell, 2:12.)

HOCK WILKES' First Dam, EDA.....By HOCK-HOCKING.
(Thoroughbred, sister to St. David.) (Having one cross each of Boston, imp. Trustee, imp, Glencoe, eight crosses of imp. Diomed, and being the sire of Beaconsfield, St. David, Batchelder. Arthur H. and Four Aces.)

Second Dam, EVA COOMBS.....By BILLY CHEATHAM.
(Dam of St. David, Wildidler, Maid of the Mist, and second dam of Beaconsfield, Batchelder, Arthur H. and Four Aces.) (Having one cross of Boston, five of imp. Messenger, seven of imp. Diomed, and two of American Eclipse.)

Third Dam, RUBY, by Winnebago, son of imp. Glencoe and imp. Delight.

Fourth Dam, ELLEN JOURDAN, by Blacknose, by Medoc, son of Duroc by imp. Diomed, and Miller's Damsel, by imp. Messenger.

Fifth Dam, EMILY JOURDAN, by imp. Jourdan.

Sixth Dam, ELLEN TREE, by Henry, son of Sir Archy by imp. Diomed and of a daughter of imp. Diomed.

Seventh dam, Betsy Ransome by Virginian, son of Sir Archy by imp. Diomed; Eighth dam, Favorite, by imp. Bellair; Ninth dam, Fairy by imp. Bedford; Tenth dam, by imp. Pantaloon; Eleventh dam, by imp. Master Stephen; Twelfth dam, by imp. Juniper; Thirteenth dam, imp. Duchess, by Cullen Arabian, etc.

DESCRIPTION—HOCK WILKES, foaled 1888, is a handsome bay with black points, 15½ hands high, of speedy conformation, good bone and powerful muscular development. He is pure in trotting action, very speedy, and, but for difficulty with one fore pastern, he would now have a low record. He is one of the handsomest sons of Guy Wilkes, with the Wilkes substance and trotting instinct and the thoroughbred quality and type of conformation. The sire of Hock Wilkes, Guy Wilkes, stands at a service fee of $1,000, and he is conceded to be the best representative of the great Wilkes and Hambletonian family. The dam of Hock Wilkes is a large mare, 16¾ hands, of powerful build, a daughter of Hock-Hocking, who produced the speedy and long-distance performers St. David, Beaconsfield, Batchelder, Arthur H., Four Aces, etc., and whose dam was the third dam of Anteeo, 2:16¼, Antevolo, 2:19½, and Coral, 2:25.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON of 1892, from February 1st to July 1st, with return privilege for the season of 1893 on any mare not proving with foal, provided either the mare or stallion does not change ownership. The season of 1892 will be made at 2536 Market Street, San Francisco.

Will Make the Season of 1892 at my Ranch Four Miles south of Gridley, Butte County, Cal.,

..... AT $50 FOR THE SEASON. .....

PEDIGREE.

Woodnut B.

WOODNUT, 2:16½ (In a race.)		NUTWOOD, 2:18¾	Sire 77 in the 2:30 list.
Full brother to Manette (dam of Arion, 2 y o, 2:10¾), and Manon, 2:21.		ADDIE,	By Hasbrouck's Hambletonian.
LADY PATCHEN		GEO. M. PATCHEN JR. 31	Sire of 10 in 2:30 list.
		By NORWOOD 522.	Sire of Ida Norwood, 2:26½; Tommy Norwood 2:26½, and dams of Guide, 2:16¼, and Delwin, 2:26¾.
Third dam by Langford, thoroughbred, the great four-miler.

DESCRIPTION.

WOODNUT B., 3 years old, is a handsome bright bay stallion with black points; no white; stands 16 hands 1 inch; weighs 1100 pounds. He is a remarkably symmetrical and well-finished horse, stylish and pure-gaited. He has had but little training and shows great speed. He is closely related to the great Arion; his sire Woodnut, 2:16½, being a wonderful race horse, and his dam from a leading producing family. With his splendid blood lines and individuality he is the peer of any young stallion standing for service in the State.

Excellent pasturage and the best of care taken of mares in any manner owners may desire, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

For further particulars address HENRY BLOCK, Gridley, Cal.

SONS OF ELECTIONEER ✣1892✣ ✣1892✣ AT THE SOUTHER FARM

All mares bred to the Souther Farm Stallions in the season of 1892 will be kept free of charge from March 1st to July 1st. Mares may be sent to the farm at any time, and will be kept at reasonable rates until March 1st, when the free care begins. Best of attention given to mares at foaling time.

The Reputation of the Souther Farm is a guarantee of fair treatment for all animals sent there

Fifth dam Mary Howe, by Tiger.
Sixth dam Lady Robin, by Robin Gray, sire of third dam of the great Lexington.
Seventh dam by Quicksilver, son of imp. Medley.
Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¼; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

As the dam of Green Mountain Maid and grandam of Electioneer, Shanghai Mary may be called the foundation stone of the Electioneer family, which now holds practically every best on record. Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

Glen Fortune's oldest colts were foaled in 1891, and show up splendidly in the kindergarten, where they may be seen any week day.

Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

The Souther Farm Swimming Tank is in regular operation and horses are given swimming work every week day in good weather. Swimming gives EXERCISE WITHOUT CONCUSSION, and is an invaluable aid in training trotters or runners. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

ALCONA JR. 2,755.

Record 2:24, last half in 1:10½ and last quarter in 31½ seconds.

PEDIGREE.—Alcona Jr., 2:24, was sired by Alcona 730, out of Madonna, by Cassius M. Clay 22; second dam by Joe Downing, by Alexander's Edwin Forrest. Alcona 730 (sire of Alcona Jr., 2:24; Flora Belle, 2:21; Clay Duke, 2:29, etc.) is by Almont 33, out of Queen Mary, by Mambrino Chief 11, etc.

DESCRIPTION.—Alcona Jr. is a handsome dark mahogany bay stallion, 16.1 hands high and weighs 1,250 pounds. He represents the highest type of the large trotting horse. His symmetrical conformation from the fine-finished head to the fetlocks, his stylish way of moving, perfect trotting action, magnificent limbs and great muscular development commend him at once to all lovers of the trotting horse. He was not given any training until late in the year, and on a heavy track in a race at Santa Rosa he earned his record of 2:24.

TERMS—$75 for the season, ending July 1st, as this horse will be put in training.

The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Pasturage, $2.50 per month.

The Thoroughbred Stallion

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1892 at

WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,

715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

THREE CHEERS

Young Fashion: Fashion (Beanets o'Bize; Trustee (imp.)); Monarch (Delphine; Priam)
Hurrah (imp.): Jovial (Sister to Grey Momus; Bay Middleton); Newminster (Beeswing; Touchstone)

HURRAH, sire of Three Cheers, produced the great winners Bonnie Lizzie, Chaquita, Ohio Boy, Nellie Peyton, Little Buttercup, Red Fox, Medusa, Brad, Referee, Monk, Hostage, Lady Middleton and many others.

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS.

Seventy-five Dollars for the Season.

Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

CONDITIONS.

In all 3-in-5 races a horse not winning one heat in three shall be sent to the stable regardless of number of starters, but if eight or more start, no horse shall be sent to the stable if placed second in one of the first three heats.

In all races of mile heats, 2 in 3, a horse not winning a heat in two shall be sent to the stable, but if eight or more start, no horse which has been placed second in one of the first two heats shall be sent to the stable.

The right reserved to start each stake or purse in trial heats if more than nine declared to start, starters to be divided by the Board of Directors.

First payment, whether for purses payable in installments or for stakes, MUST ACCOMPANY NOMINATIONS, or they will not be considered.

Omission to make any payment as above stipulated, incurs forfeiture of any previous payments and of the right to start.

Horses and colts owned outside of the Pacific coast are eligible to all stakes and purses without requirement of membership: persons residing in States and Territories lying in whole or in part west of the Rocky Mountains, MUST become members of the P. C. T. H. B. A. to entitle them to make entries.

No added money will be paid for a walk-over. If only three horses start in a stake race, only first, second and third money shall be paid—if but two start, the Directors reserve the right to call it a walk-over and divide the stake money paid in; two-thirds to the winner, and one-third to the second horse. In case of a walk-over, only the moneys received from entries to said stake will be paid. In purse races, three horses will be required to start. The right is reserved to call two starters a walk-over.

A horse distancing the field shall only be entitled to first and third moneys.

The Directors reserve the right to change the hour and day of any race except when it becomes necessary to anti-date a race, in which instance the nominator will receive three days notice of change by mail to address of entry.

Entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race, shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person or in one interest, the horse to be started must be named by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race.

Trotting and racing colors shall be named by six o'clock P. M. on the day preceding the race, and must be worn upon the track.

Otherwise than the above National Trotting Association Rules to govern.

Suspension and expulsions of the American Trotting Association will be recognized.

Persons desirous of making entries in the above purses and stakes, and who have not as yet joined the P. C. T. H. B. A. should make application for membership to the Secretary, and remit the sum of $25 to cover membership fee before March 1st, 1892.

Programme for Aged Horses, Trotters and Pacers, and for Special Events, will be announced at the proper time

JAS. P. KERR, Secretary, 313 Bush Street, San Francisco.

Kentucky's Futurity

FOR FOALS OF 1892 TO TROT IN 1894 AND 1895.

$25,000

.....GUARANTEED.....

By The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association.

REMEMBER IT TAKES BUT TWO SMALL PAYMENTS, AMOUNTING TO ONLY ONE-TENTH OF ONE PER CENT TO CARRY ENTRY TO JUNE 1 OF YEAR OF RACE, AND THERE IS NO HEAVY PAYMENT TILL NIGHT BEFORE RACE.

FOR FOALS OF 1892 Colts, fillies and geldings (the produce of mares that may be nominated in this stake) to trot as two-year-olds at FALL MEETING, 1894, and as three-year-olds at FALL MEETING, 1895, the first race to be mile heats, 2 in 3, and the second mile heats, 3 in 5. On or before March 15, 1892, the mares whose foals may become eligible to start in these races must be nominated, and any mare that has foaled, or is due to foal, in 1892, is eligible. The association guarantees the stake worth not less than $25,000, of which $5,000 will go to the two-year-olds and $20,000, OR MORE, to the three-year-old race, as follows: In the two-year-old event the winner will receive $3,000; the second colt $1,000 and the third $500, and the nominator of the dam of the winner, $500; the three-year-old winner will receive $15,000; the second $3,000; the third $1,000, and $1,000 will go to the nominator of dam of winner. If the whole stake (for the two races) exceeds $25,000, THE EXCESS will go to winner of three-year-old race. Entrance as follows: $10 to nominate mare March 15, 1892; $15 November 1, 1899, when color and sex of foal must be given, and all foals on which payments (of $15 each) are made, November 1st, 1892, will be eligible to start in either or both races without further payment till June 1st of year of race. Those desiring to start in the two-year-old race shall, on June 1, 1894, name and describe their colts, and pay on each a forfeit of $25 (and as many may be named as the owners desire to keep in). On the starters $100 more must be paid by 7½ o'clock of evening before the race. If fewer than three start, those starting and the nominator of the winner's dam will receive only the money that each would have received had three horses been placed; but the other money or moneys will be carried to the three-year-old race. Those desiring to start as three-year-olds shall, on June 1, 1895, name and describe (as in the two-year-old event) and pay a forfeit of $50; and those who start must pay $250 more by 7½ o'clock of evening before the race. In case of a walk-over in the three-year-old race the winner will receive the whole amount paid in, less the amount paid the two-year-olds, and that paid nominators of winners' dams. National Association rules to govern.

If a mare proves barren, or slips, or has a dead foal or twins, or if either the mare or foal dies before November 1, 1892, her nominator may substitute another mare and foal, regardless of ownership. The death of a nominator will not make void his entry or entries. In entries the name, color and pedigree of mare must be given; also the name of horse to which she was bred in 1891.

ANTI-STIFF

To Strengthen the Muscles.

To Strengthen the Muscles.

It is a marvelous preparation for Strengthening the Muscular System. With Anti-Stiff there is a faith required, it goes straight for the muscles, and you can feel it at work. It has a peculiarly warming, comforting and stimulating effect on all weak or stiff muscles and sinews. Quick in its action, cleanly and pleasant in use.

Rub it into the muscles every night for a fortnight and you will be pleased at its supporting and strengthening properties. There is not, nor has been, anything like it till now. It differs from all Oils, Embrocations and Liniments, both in substance and effect. Some athletes are so fond of it that they rub it all over them.

PRICES 25 AND 50 CENTS PER BOX.

WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU

That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is glori ously mistaken. However, don't point ou the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing o both heels and the entire wearing surface.

The Standard-Bred Trotting Stallion

ALTO

Sired by Anteeo, 2:16¼, dam Emma Taylor, by Alexander, 490; second dam Belle by General Taylor, third dam Belle, by Boston Boy, he by David Hill's Black Hawk, out of Boston Girl, an inbred Messenger and Morgan mare that trotted on the Centerville Course, Long Island, in 1853, two miles in 5:31½ and 5:32, and on the same course in the same year three miles in 7:45.

ALTO, as can be seen by the above pedigree, is related to the most promising fast horses of the day. In appearance, he is a beautiful shade of seal brown with tan muzzle and flanks. He is 15.3 hands high, and weighs 1,080 pounds; in conformation he is unexcelled by any young horse in the State. His disposition is perfect, and has no vices. He has never been trained for speed except when he was three years old. At that time he received some six weeks' work and trotted halves in 1:12. He has been bred to a few mares and proved a sure foal-getter. He is just seven years old, and would pay for himself either in the stud or on the track the first year.

I will also sell

EMMAVOLO.

By Antevolo

Out of the dam Alto. She is five years old, bright bay in color, with black points, never been trained for speed, but can be driven anywhere. She is a fine, large, rangy mare, and just the kind that is most needed on a stock farm. She was stinted to Stammoor last spring and is believed to be in foal. Stammoor is by Stamboul, 2:11, out of a mare by The Moor.

BAYWOOD.

Thirteen years old. He is sixteen hands high; dark mahogany bay; weighs 1200 pounds; fine mane and tail; game, high life, very showy and stylish trotter; has a record of 2:33 with no preparation; has colts with records as low as 2:20. He is a sure foal getter, and for the opportunity he has had produced some fast ones. He will have five or six in the 2:30 list this year. His sire is Nutwood 600; first dam by George M. Patchen Jr.; second dam by Champion (running horse); third dam by Williamson's Belmont.

FLEETWOOD, 12 years old; standard; sorrel, two front feet white; strip in face; stands 16 hands high; weighs 1100 pounds; game and high life; looks very much like his sire; has never been trained, but can trot fast. His dam is the dam of Dr. Swift, record 2:20. She being a producer of speed, and he from Nutwood 600, should make him valuable for breeding purposes.

DR. SWIFT, 6 years old; sorrel; 16 hands; weighs 1100 pounds; started in seven races and won six of them. He is a game race horse. He got a record of 2:20 twice in the same race last year at Bay District Track. He can pace in 2:15 and trot in 2:30 in less than two months. Sire Baywood, he by Nutwood 600. His dam American Girl by Young America, and he by Jack Roberts. Same dam as Fleetwood.

Some full brothers and sisters of Dr. Swift for sale. Inquire of E. S. SMITH, 119 Empire St., corner of Third, San Jose, Cal.

For Sale.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3,50.

THE YOUNG TROTTERS.

Care and Development of Colts from Weanling to Racing Time.

We take the colt as a weanling. He should have been broken to lead as a suckling, but, as a rule, he is not, so we begin with him as a green colt, just out of the pasture. Get him into a stall, which should be a large one, well-ventilated and nicely bedded. Allow the colt to follow a horse, one that has been his daily companion in the stall; lead out the horse, leaving the colt in the stall, and put the horse in an adjoining stall, having partition between the stalls so arranged that the colt can see the horses This will go a long way towards keeping the colt cheerful and preserving his good temper. Don't keep him up too long at a time at first, but turn him out on the grass every day. From the pasture to the stall is a great change for a colt, and should not be made suddenly. Such changes, if not made gradually and carefully, are liable to affect a colt's health as well as his disposition. Turn the colt out every day for a while, gradually accustom him to the change of feed, and get the grass out of him. You have got him into the stall and want to begin breaking him. Form his acquaintance by approaching him gently and feeding him from the hand, caressing and talking to him. Put on a close-fitting halter and leave it on him. Teach him to lead by gently pulling him to one side; don't try to force him to lead by pulling and jerking him. A gentle pull will have more effect upon a colt than all the hard pulling you can do. A neighbor bought some unbroken Montana horses, caught one of them by main force, put on a halter made on the end of a large rope—a halter that would tighten about the head if pulled upon. The horse positively refused to lead; a singletree was tied in the other end of the rope and a mule hitched to it and started; the result was the horse was made desperate, reared and fell, and was killed by the fall. Pull gently and to one side, and if he wants to get away from you keep his head towards you by a firm but elastic pull, and he will soon yield and come towards you. Pat him on the neck and talk kindly to him, give him to understand he has done as you wished him to do, stand to one side, again pull lightly upon the rein, at the same time talk to him, and when he comes reward him by feed him from the hand something he likes. Keep this up until he will yield to the slightest pull, and in a couple of days you can lead him out of the stall. Have a long halter strap, and if he makes a break to play don't jerk him, but let the strap slip through your hands, being careful not to let him get his head from you. Keep his head towards you. He will soon remember his lesson in the stall, and come to you. Repeat the lesson every day, treat him kindly at the same time teaching him that you are his master, and you will soon have him so he will lead like an old horse. Now familiarize him with the bitting rig; first the bridle. Use a light but strong head stall with smooth snaffle bit covered with rubber, put it on over the halter by coaxing rather than forcing him to take the bit, lead him around the stall by the halter rein, and give him time to become accustomed to the bit. Take off the bridle, one at a time first is enough, hold to the halter strap and allow the colt to see the harness, let him smell it and with your right hand rub it against his neck and shoulders; don't scare him, and soon he will let you lay across his back. Buckle the girth very loosely at first, not tight enough to touch him. I have known horses made incurable kickers by buckling the girth tight the first time harness was put on them. Keep working with him in a way not to frighten him until he allows you to put the crupper under his tail, lead him about the stall a few minutes, and this will do for the first time. Repeat next day, gaining a little further. Buckle check rein on to strap for that purpose, but don't rein him up. Fasten side straps loosely at first let him wear them five minutes, but not long enough to worry him. Do everything by degrees. Don't expect a colt to learn in a day what he ought to be a week in learning. Teach him to wear the bitting harness by gradually tightening it on him. By gradually reining him up you will teach him to carry an easy and graceful head; he will learn that to raise his head slackens the check rein. Let him wear the bitting harness a while every day, but not long enough to tire him. I have known colts left to stand half a day with their heads reined and braced in one position which is both cruel and injurious to the colt. Put on long lines and pass them through rings attached low down on the saddle ,and you are ready to give him his first lesson in driving. If you are not careful the lines will scare him, he will begin to back and kick, and you will have spoiled all your previous work. Your success depends upon your good judgment and natural fitness for the business. You do all the work, or send in your hired man and he spoils the job. Any one, even an awkward hand, can handle a horse that is properly broken, but you can do the breaking better without the aid of such fellows ;in fact, I think you can do the breaking better without the aid of any one. Men have different ideas about doing the same thing about a colt, and a lesson given one way one day, and in an entirely different way the next, is calculated not to teach him to do all the work. Repeat the lesson every day, one at a time and in the same way always, until it is thoroughlyy learned, being careful not to give too much at a time, and you will have no trouble. There is as much in knowing when to stop as when to start. Make everything as pleasant for the colt as possible. In breaking, as in training, the minute you go too far, that is, worry, scare or excite the colt, you are breaking his courage and losing his confidence. Overwork a colt and you are preparing him for a break-down. To resume, the colt has learned that the bitting harness will not harm him, and you have put on the lines. You still have hold of the halter strap with your left hand; with your right gently rub the lines over his hips and down against his hind legs, in the meantime talking encouragingly to him. There is more in the way a thing is done about a horse than in the doing. The same thing done by a man who has not in his character the sentiments that must be in the make-up of all genuine horsemen would frighten the colt. Teach him to drive, turn either way in the stall; in fact, everything up to this time has been done in the stall save leading, which has been thoroughly taught him, and you can lead him almost anywhere. Keep up this driving and turning him in the stall until he is thoroughly acquainted with the lines and will yield to the slightest pull, and you are ready to take him out in the lot. Lead him in and out of the stall with the bitting harness on, stop him in the door, rub and slap the door post with the lines, and in this way accustom him to wear the harness in and out of the stall, and he will not scare at the straps striking the door post. I have known colts so spoiled by carelessly leading them out of the stall with harness on that they would not come out at all ff harnessed. The stall is the proper place to harness and unharness a horse. Have a man to lead him out of the stall while you walk out after him holding the lines. Have him led around for a minute, and if everything has been thoroughly taught him up to this time, you will have no trouble in driving him alone. Keep this up till he has learned to guide, start and stop at the word and to stand when stopped till told to go.

Don't forget to remind him that it will not hurt him to wear the harness in going in the stall. In taking off the harness let it fall on the ground about his heels, in fact accustom him to everything that would be liable to frighten him. Fright is the cause of horses doing most of their bad tricks. If you hook your colt and start him out and he begins to try to buck and kick, stop him and talk to him; the trouble is he is afraid of the harness. Reach over and pat him gently on the hips, push the harness against him; he knows you are his friend and that it is you behind him, and he will quiet down and go on. It is well to have a whip all along, provided you know how and when to use one. Always carry a whip, but rarely ever use one. You have gotten him to driving well in bitting harness, he will stop and stand at the word, back up, etc. Now put on the break harness and let him learn to wear the breeching. When he is broken to wear a full set of harness you are ready to hook him. If possible hook him double first; hook him on the right of a quiet, level-headed horse, one that will not be rattled if the colt indulges in a few jumps, but will go ahead and attend to his business. Have a man to hold the colt by the bit while yourself and another man hook him; get into the wagon, give the word, and have the colt led for a few steps. Have the man handling him step aside, drive him around for a few minutes, ten or fifteen minutes being long enough for the first time. Go slow until he is used to the traces and rattle of vehicle; keep him going double, working him on one side and then the other until he is well broken to double harness, being sure to stop each time before he tires, and then you are ready to work him single. Put on the break harness and see that everything is working; use a good, strong kicking strap; lead him to the cart, which should be a light one, drive him around the cart and up to it, and let him see what it is; have the cart pulled along after him, stop him and talk to him; let a man hold him by the bit, stand to the left side holding lines, while a third man quietly pulls the cart by right shaft up to him; have him held while he is being hooked, and don't keep him standing too long; don't have kicking strap too tight; have it so there will be no strain on it unless he tries to kick. Quietly get in the cart, cluck to him and have him led for a few steps, have man leading him step to one side, and if the colt seems excited (the shafts may scare him) stop him, talk to him, and soon he will go along all right.

Drive him around an open field, or any place where there is nothing to scare him, and in a few minutes take him in. Have a man hold him by the bit while yourself and a third man unhook him; be very careful and don't frighten him, for this is his first lesson in single harness, and the first impressions made in harness have a lasting effect upon a colt. He ought not to have been worked long enough at first to be heated up, but if he is have him rubbed lightly, and when he is dry turn him out on the grass for awhile. A colt should have all he will eat, but don't keep oats lying by him or you will get him off his feed. Give him what he will eat up clean, and keep him fat. Keep him going every day until he will work kindly, never tries to kick, or do other bad tricks, and soon you can get him to the sulky and begin to step along a little.

If you have left nothing undone you have had his feet trimmed occasionally, and kept them from breaking and in shape. His feet have been handled,and it is no trouble to shoe him. Put on light shoes with a spur on front shoes for weights in the event that weight is needed; but don't put on weights just because you have him shod that way, and have the toe weights. If you can give an intelligent reason why you think a certain change ought to be made in shoeing or harnessing a horse, all right; but don't make changes because you saw some other fellow do it, without being able to give any reason for doing it.

I heard an owner, after a trainer put ten-ounce shoes on his horse's hind feet, ask him why he had shod his horse in this way. The trainer told him he thought it was the best way to shoe a horse; that Mr. ——— shod them that way. You have him shod and want to begin training him to trot. Colts need very little or no jogging, and aged horses much less, I think, than a great many get. Put on his boots, and if he is a yearling drive him a mile and a half or two miles at a lively clip, stop him, turn, let him catch his breath, and send him a hundred yards. This is enough for the first time. Take him in, cool him by light rubbing and walking, giving him a swallow or two of water occasionally, and then turn him out on grass for a while. Work him a little every day, give him short, sharp work, but not too much of it. Keep his spirits up by kind treatment, plenty of good, clean oats and hay, a kind groom, and when you drive him out he will feel good and want to go. Avoid sweating and scraping him too much, but keep him strong. Have his legs bandaged after work, allowing them to stay on for an hour and a half, not longer. Bandages are indispensable in training, but their use can be abused. It is wrong, and no good comes of keeping a horse standing all day with bandages on his legs. After the bandages are taken off have his legs rubbed with the hand and a dry cloth, and in the afternoon have him turned or led out to grass for a while; the walk and grass will do him good. Keep him wanting to go, see that the boots do not chafe him, give special attention to his feed, and if he gets off his feed, take it away from him; give him a change of food and let him have free access to salt. By this time you can begin to form some idea as to how to rig the colt best. Don't drive him too high, if you do you will nine times out of ten effect his gait, get him to hitching and hopping. Drive him out on the road occasionally; the change will relieve the monotony of the track. Keep him wanting to go, and if he is a trotter he will soon begin to show it. Stop every time before he tires, while he is still full of trot, and he will be ready again to-morrow. You go out with your colt, he feels good and so do you, and between the fascination and excitement of sitting behind a good-going colt you overwork him. If you see you have given him too much and he loses his usual snap and vim, let up on him for a week, turn him out every day and allow him to regain what he has lost. Working a tired colt is training the wrong way. In a week take him up and go at him again; you have learned a lesson. Some colts will stand more work than others, and any can be very easily overworked. They all differ in disposition, and each colt requires somewhat peculiar handling. Life force that ought to go towards speeding and and learning to trot is, I think, very often exhausted in monotonous stout jogging. But at the same time you can give a colt twice the work speeding that you can jogging in the same length of time. I worked for a trainer once who went upon the idea that anything would break a colt. He was one of the "slam-bang" sort who did everything by main force, and would scare a colt to get him used to being scared, and whip him to make him familiar with the noise and sight of the whip.

When he went to training for speed he had one day one of his rubbers and the next day another up behind his horses, and the result was he had half of the stable knocked out before the season was half over. In training as in breaking you will succeed better to do all of the driving. Keep the colt going square; don't push him too much in speeding or you will get him to hitching, hopping and to breaking. A colt ought not to be whipped for breaking; pull him back and to one side and then the other, reprove him, let him know he has done wrong, but don't excite or frighten him, and you will teach him to catch quickly. Whip him, and you make him a bad breaker and unreliable. Don't push him close enough up to his clip for him to want to break. The way to keep a horse from acting badly is to never allow him to do bad tricks; don't give him a chance. It is much easier to prevent bad habits than to cure them in horses.—W. F. Freeman, in Dunton's Spirit of the Turf.

Should the Pacer be Recognized?

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—It seems to me that Mr. Simpson has scarcely done justice either to the breeders that disagree with him or to himself in the views set forth by him in his "Special Department" last week on the "Admission of the Pacer to the Standard." I do not know of any breeder who denies that the pacer or pacing-bred horse, to speak more correctly, has played an important part in establishing the breed of trotters; it would, indeed, be just as futile to assert that the thoroughbred was entitled to no credit in forming the nucleus of this "breed."

When "The Standard" was adopted the preamble thereto read as follows:

"In order to define what constitutes a trotting-bred horse and to establish a BREED of trotters on a more intelligent basis, the following rules are adopted to control admission to the records of pedigrees."

The rules that follow have reference to trotters or to sires and dams of trotters and of trotters only. Why?

Because the purpose in view was to establish "a breed of trotters on a more intelligent basis," that purpose as I understand it, being so to strengthen the foundation of this trotting breed that in the course of time, be it twenty or be it a hundred years, we should ultimately by intelligent selection so emphasize the inherent traits of the breed that no individual thereof should either pace or run, but would naturally and invariably adopt the trotting gait as its fastest way of going when pursuing or pursued.

Can it be done? I believe so. But can it be done by encouraging the infusion and intermingling of pacing and thoroughbred blood? I do not think it, but Mr. Simpson and other eminent writers do so maintain, and they constantly recur to the fact that great speed at the trot has been and may be attained by crossing the trotting stallion with thoroughbred and pacing mares. Granted! Are we then simply aiming to secure speed at the trot or even the greatest speed at the trot? I do not so understand the purpose for which The Standard was adopted; the object as I interpret it is to establish a breed of trotters; a race of animals that will, with the utmost certainty, transmit the trotting gait, and in order that that gait should be accompanied or allied with speed, certain rules or qualifications were provided, which excluded all animals to registration, whatsoever their origin, that did not develop in themselves or their progeny the necessary speed to entitle them to recognition in the foundation of the breed.

We acknowledge the potency of the thoroughbred blood descended from Messenger through Hambletonian 10 and Mambrino Chief. To Pilot, Blue Bull and other pacing strains we doff our hats. To Diomed, Boston, Lexington and to even more recent crosses of thoroughbred blood we may owe much that is excellent and was lacking in the descendants of Messenger, but because these have brought us some good qualities must we forever be replenishing our stock of these auxiliary bloods strains?

Do all—do most—do many breeders of thoroughbreds today go back to the Barb and Arabian source to renew the good blood that originally came therefrom?

Can a parallel be drawn between the Arabian source and its improved type known as the "thoroughbred," both of them natural runners, and the thoroughbred pacer and trotter commingled for the purpose of establishing, i. e. making natural an unnatural gait?

The great axiom in breeding is that "like begets like or the likeness of some ancestor" and the illustration used by Mr. Simpson, when he cites Direct as a natural pacer, simply proves that axiom to be well and wisely founded; but is it, can it be used as an incentive for an excuse to the selection and recognition of the likeness of the ancestor when the very object in view is to establish a breed, in which the peculiar traits of those ancestors shall be bred out?

The fine wool breed of sheep is, I believe, two hundred or more years old; in that time no black or spotted ram or ewe has been used or even allowed to live in the flocks, yet, even at this late day, an occasional black or spotted lamb will make its appearance (and is killed and quickly put out of sight). Here is the "likeness of an ancestor" croppingout, and a devilish old one at that! Should he be recognized and registered? Worse still! Should therefore, all black sheep be recognized and registered? Registered not as white sheep; nor yet as black; but as white or black sheep?

Hambletonian 10 [illegible] edit, and we had [illegible] we almost had his [illegible] g sire could and [illegible] nothing but trot- [illegible] that dream by [illegible] ought in contact [illegible] ave failed to materialize owing to the "deep f[illegible] e kindergarten. If Mr. Simpson's surmise be corre[illegible] n end to all our difficulties! The Board of Di[illegible] American Trotting Register Association, need [illegible] w rule to "The Standard as revised," viz:

"And furthermore provided, [illegible] ny of all horses otherwise eligible to registration under [illegible] above qualifications shall be trained as weanlin[illegible] artens with deep footing." (For particulars, buy [illegible] k.)

Unfortunately for us, a good many [illegible] son [illegible] nd daughters of Electioneer that have achieved [illegible] en 2:16 and 2:30 were neither foaled nor trained at Palo Al[illegible] nor under Palo Alto kindergarten methods, yet [illegible] have developed the lateral gait. There is yet th[illegible] course, as even they were conceived at that far-famed fa[illegible]rm [illegible]t the pacing batilli or bacteria may exist in that neighborhood and that the mares brought there were innoculated thereby (probably through the pricks of the numerous mosquitos); yet it is singular that the bacteria do not spread as far as the home of Rupee and Alannah in the same county.

But, to "return to our muttons," will Mr. Simpson deny that far in excess of those obligations that we are under to the pacer and thoroughbred, we have of late years had to thank the non-standard trotting sires or dams for many of the accessions to the standard list? If now his argument be good and strong enough to admit the pacer to standard registration under pacing qualifications, is there not far greater and stronger reason for admitting the non-standard trotting-bred sire that out of a non-standard trotting bred mare throws progeny that trots in 2:30½, yet are shut out from the register?

Wilfred Page.

What Longfellow Has Done.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 20, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Without the aid of the Futurity the get of Longfellow, who heads the American winning sires of 1891, have won sufficient to cross over the million-dollar line, a showing which is all the more remarkable when the fact is taken into consideration that in his early stud days but few choice mares visited his harem. A marked contrast to the opening of the stud careers of Lexington and imp. Glenelg, the only other million-dollar winning stallions in American breeding annals, they being from the beginning by mares worthy, by performance and pedigree, to be mated to such famous horses. Percentage of winners of his get, numbers considered, and Longfellow not only beats Glenelg, but, perhaps, Lexington, but as well probably overtops the record made by any sire on American soil. He now also holds the honors of being America's biggest winning sire for a single season, his get having won $229 more than that to the credit of imp. St. Blaise in 1890, which was the record up to the close of the year just passed. The sum total of the earnings of his get since they first appeared in public in 1876, foot up $1,059,774. The following table gives a resume of what his sons and daughters have accomplished each season since they first appeared on the turf:

Year	Number of starters.	Times started.	Times first.	Times second.	Times third.	Times unplaced.	Amount won.

By the foregoing table it will be observed that Longfellow's get have run a total of 1,312 races, a remarkable showing, overtopping, as it does, by 136, the number of races won by the sons and daughters of the immortal Lexington. The compilation which follows gives Longfellow's most creditable winners, covering those of his get that in their turf careers have won $5,000 and over:

D. M. B.

Parted.

We stood in the meadow as the twilight was falling,
Her head rested fondly and soft 'gainst my arm;
The crickets were chirping among the tall grasses;
Each note had a sound that was tender and calm.

And as she would cuddle more close to my shoulder
A shudder passed thro' her small, delicate frame;
She was thinking, I knew, of our parting to-morrow;
A farewell forever, and I was to blame.

I adorned her soft hair with some sweet-scented flowers,
And gazed in her eyes that were tender and brown,
But she turned her dear face in a half bashful manner,
And stood there in silence, with eyes looking down.

Our parting was sad, but 'twas best that we did so,
And now she's another's I know she don't care.
I feel better off and am more independent
Since I had the good fortune to sell my old mare.

The Nitrate King's Entries

Chicago, Feb. 23.

Colonel John F. North "the Nitrate King," has the distinction of being the first Englishman to make entries in the big American stake races. The entry blank, dated Febrnary 13th, reached Secretary Swrgert to-day. The British sportsman's subscription to these fixed events is particularly significent of the probability of his active participation in Chicago's turf doings during the exposition year.

He had already made thirteen entries to Washington Park events, and by adding these additional engagements practically declares his intention of competing with American horses for American gold. All the candidates named by North were bred from his own mares and most of them sired by his stallions at his immense stock farm, Avery Hill, in Eltham, Kent, where his collection of thoroughbreds and dogs rivals that of any breeder in the world.

For the Garfield Derby and Hesing stakes of 1893 North enters five animals previously enrolled in the American Derby and Sheridan stake lists. Besides a filly named Mericomer in the Grant stakes, he places two fillies and a colt, now yearlings. His entries for the Queen Isabella stakes are three fillies named for the American Derby.

North's Garfield Park entries for the Derby (guaranted value $20,000, one and one-fourth miles) and the Hesing stakes (guaranteed value $10,000, one mile), for three-year olds, are Emita, Royal Harry, Donna Juanita, Antipyrine, Eltham Queen, Mexicomea; Grant stakes (guaranteed value $10,000, six furlongs) for two-year-olds, Joe Thompson, Philormarden, Miss-my-Chree.

Agricultural District No. 1.

A meeting of the Directors of Agricultural District No. 1, comprising Oakland and Alameda, was held Tuesday afternoon at 420 Eighth street, Oakland. W. M. Kent acted as temporary chairman, and Secretary J. I. Dimond and Directors Eli Dennison, Charles Neal, D. E. Dalton, H. W. Meek and A. P. Waugh were present.

Senator de Long of Sonoma county, acting as representative of the State Board, was present for the purpose of trying to induce Directors of the local board to change their usual date for the fair from that preceding the State Fair at Sacramento to the week commencing August 15th. After a lengthy discussion it was decided to postpone action in the matter until the next meeting of the Board.

The election of officers then took place as follows: President, W. M. Kent; Vice-President, C. S. Crittenden; Union National Bank, Treasurer, and J. I. Dimond, Secretary.

The report of the financial committee showed that the Association has a balance on hand of $4,594.69, not including $3,793, which belongs to the Futurity Stakes, which will be trotted in 1893 for foals of 1890.

On motion the Chairman was appointed to select all committees for the year 1892, and will report at the next meeting.

Grand Breeding.

Sacramento, Feb. 24, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—I saw in your last issue that G. U., of Rohnerville, Cal., wanted to know if there was a stallion standing in California with three producing dams. Don Marvin has four, which no other public stallion has on this coast. This should make him a great speed-producer. He has the thoroughbred cross, the same as the fastest horses in the world. He is expected to trot in 2:20 or better this season, as 2:28, his record, is not the limit of his speed.

Colonel Fleischman, His Trip and His Horses

Colonel Charles Fleischman, the wealthy Cincinnatian, accompanied by his son George, Albert Kuhn, of Cincinnati, and S. A. Gunst, of Portland, Or., favored us with a call the other day. Colonel Fleischman, who is a new-comer to the turf ranks, is starting in right. He is a believer in securing the best blood of producing families, and at the Belmont sale last fall was the heaviest buyer of young thoroughbreds at that famous sale. Among his purchases were a weanling chestnut colt by St. Blaise—Carita, by Kingfisher, for which he paid $7,500; chestnut weanling colt by imp. St. Blaise—Delilah, by imp. The Ill-Used; bay weanling colt by imp. The Ill-Used—imp. Dauntless, by Macaroni; chestnut weanling filly by imp. The Ill-Used—Affinity, by Kingfisher; bay weanling filly by Kingfisher—Bahama, by imp. Mortemer; chestnut weanling filly by imp. The Ill-Used—Cordelia, by imp. Matador.

"I have in training at Latonia track in the hands of Scott Williams," said Colonel Fleischman, "the following, in addition to the above well-bred ones: Ronald, a three-year-old colt by imp. Rossington, dam Secret, by Longfellow (I paid W. H. Cheppu, of Lexington, $8,000 for him); a two-year-old colt by Blue Eyes—Clarina; Woodban, chestnut colt by imp. Woodlands—Gilban; an unnamed filly by imp. Rossington; Governor Foraker, bay colt, by imp. The Ill-Used—imp. Madcap; Jesse Lee B., chestnut colt, by imp. St. Blaise—Genevra; The Hunter, by colt, by Springbok—Edith (own brother to the good Huntress); Betty Archer (full sister to Nina Archer), bay filly, by Hindoo—Morgan Girl; Sarah Ramey, bay filly, by Longfellow—Fannie Ellis, and last, but not least, Traverse, bay colt, by imp. Deceiver—Traviata. The latter is half-brother to Tristan. I also own some fourteen trotting mares and two stallions. They are quartered at Somerset Stock Farm, East Millstone, N. J. One of the stallions is an Antevolo. Brown Bess, 2:30, by Culpepper Allen, dam Black Bess, by Stump the Dealer, ought to make a good one in the harem, as Black Bess is in the Great Broodmare Table with Brown Bess and Darby, 2:16½, to her credit.

"On my trip out here I seemed to have a 'hoodoo' hanging over me. At New Orleans, in the 'Sunny South,' I struck snow, at El Paso a blizzard and in California rain. While in the southern part of the State I visited Santa Anita farm, and I tell you it is the finest stock farm I ever saw. Mr. Rose has a very nice place also, and he ought to get some of the money with his thoroughbreds this season. He intends sending a consignment of twelve horses East on the 7th of March, to be sold at Chicago, I believe.

"I shall visit Palo Alto, San Mateo and Rancho del Paso ere I return, and it is not unlikely that I will secure a few good ones in my perambulations. They breed good horses in California, surely. I am afraid the bottom will fall out of the market for horses all over the country inside of the next ten years. It appears to me that it will be an impossibility to keep up the present high prices."

Colonel Fleischman is accompanied by his family and is stopping at the Palace Hotel. Alfred Kuhn is very well posted on both runners and trotters, but seems to prefer the latter.

State Fair Opening.

A subscriber sent in an item regarding the date of the opening of the State Fair for several years, and as he had not fully understood why it was opened on the second Monday in 1890, and neither did we, the secretary sends the following communication, which we believe will end all discussion in the matter:

SACRAMENTO, CAL., February 29, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: -I do not care to go into a controversy regarding the dates of the State Fair, but I cannot afford to be misrepresented as attempted in your last week's issue. You publish a table of dates on which the State Fair was opened for the past seven years in contravention to my communication of the week previous, and then in foot-note make the sweeping assertion that the custom has been different from what I have said, when facts will not warrant it when taken from your own statement, as a majority of the dates named therein are those of the FIRST MONDAY IN THE MONTH OF SEPTEMBER. In 1890 we opened on the second Monday for the reason that the first Monday was the first day of the month. Other than these there are BUT TWO DATES in your entire table that calls for the SECOND MONDAY in the month, namely, 1887-1889. The fairs of 1885, '86, '88 and 1891 were on the first Monday. Nor was your statement correct when you stated that "The State Fair had pushed its dates a week earlier," as the opening day (the first Monday in September) corresponds exactly with dates of 1891.

Very truly,
EDWIN F. SMITH, Secretary.

TURF AND TRACK.

Baby McKee's name has been changed to Athel.

Begin at the top and take your stock up with you by breeding to the best.

The Monterey county fair will be held this year from the 4th to the 8th of October, inclusive.

General Lee, the sire of Lee 2:20, is standing for public service near Gonzales, Monterey county.

Every district meeting in this State should have a paid judge this year. It is an absolute necessity.

Adonis, 2:11½, is going to be a very hard horse to beat this season if present indications count for anything.

Among the mares to be bred to the pacer, Manager, three-year-old record, 2:11½, is Stella, 2:30, by Electioneer.

A full sister to the mare that produced Goldleaf, 2:14¼, and Thistle, is owned by R. F. Carey, of Independence, Iowa.

F. S. Hatch's gray stallion, Nelson Nutwood, went East with the Shippee trotters to be sold for what he will bring.

The smallest purses offered at the Overland Park meeting, Denver, is $400, instead of $300, as we erroneously stated recently.

Mr. Frank H. Burke has disposed of a half interest in the handsome Electioneer stallion Eros, 2:29½, to William Vioget.

A great horse is like a great man. He will make opportunities, and, in spite of adverse circumstances, make himself famous.

William Appleby has quite a number of runners at the race track, San Jose. All of them are moving fast enough to satisfy him.

Lee 2:20 is in fine fix; he has entirely recovered from his lameness, and Mr. Thierkauf, his owner, drives him every day on the road.

John Garrity, the well-known horseman, has been lying at death's door of pneumonia. The latest news regarding him is that he is convalescing.

We understand that Superintendent Henry Walsh was offered $15,000 for the weanling Flambeau-Fairy Rose colt, and refused it.

Theodore Winters sold four of his colts a few days ago to Cy. Mulkey. The purchase price is said to be $4,000.—Nevada State Journal.

H. S. Henry, Morrisville, Pa., has bought of Smith McCann, of Lexington, the two-year-old Anticipant, by Anteeo, dam by Red Wilkes; price, $5,000.

Nerea, 2:23¼, by John Nelson 187, has foaled a bay miss, with three white legs, by Eros, 2;29½. This ought to be a fast and game trotter when she "grows up."

Some of the sporting associations vow winter races must go. That is just the trouble. They do go with a lot of old skates and sway-backed quitters in the cast.

Corbitt & Macleay have sold their wholesale grocery business in Portland, Or., to Wadhams & Co. after a successful and honorable career of twenty-six years.

High Jack and Low Game are the sporty names attached to a couple of sons of Three Cheers owned by Kennedy Bros. Acclaim will join the string in a few days.

Rev. J. W. Arney says: "Fast men are an abomination; fast horses are a Godsend, and like fast trains, are the right of people who have the energy and ability to produce them."

Walnut, by Woodnut, 2:16½, out of Nellie, by General Taylor, died of pneumonia at the La Siesta ranch last Monday. Mr. Burke esteemed this young stallion very highly.

We expect great things of Lodowic this season. He was a good three-year-old, but as the Longfellows are seldom at their best until four or five years of age, he will be better than ever.

The Spokane (Wash.) Fair Agricultural Association claim the following dates for their meetings this year: Summer, June 28th to July 4, inclusive; Fall, September 19th to 24th.

Do not forget to attend the auction sale next Wednesday. Every one who wants to get representatives of fashion and broodmares in foal to the choicest stallions should be present.

There is no longer any doubt about the matter. Bakersfield is going to be a great race horse town with a first-class Guilderoy course within her precints. This was settled on last week.

William Simpson, owner of the Empire City Stud, is trying to breed a pacer. He will breed a mare by Sidney, out of the dam of Little Brown Jug, 2:11¾, and Brown Hal, 2:12½, to Direct, 2:06.

Fourteen head of the get of the great Nutwood 2:18¾ have been sold at public auction this year in New York and Kentucky at an average of $3,070; this included broodmares and yearling colts.

The Breeder and Sportsman comes to us bright and newsy as ever. No horseman or lover of the turf should be without this valuable paper. It is full of useful information. —Gonzales Tribune.

"Sandy" Hornbrook, of Mendocino county, who bred Fox, the well-known chief of the sprinters, is in the city. Mr. Hornbrook is the proud possessor of a full brother and sister to Fox, and both are exceedingly promising.

Kentucky horsemen and qualified veterinarians are now clamoring for the same thing that we have been fighting for in California—protection from quack veterinarians by means of a stringent law passed by the State Legislature.

The colts by Mount Hood are taking their daily exercise at the Talbot Stock Farm, and all the horsemen who have seen them say they are perfect in every way and show that they inherit the trotting instincts of their ancestors.

Hiram Corey, of Salinas, is rapidly coming to the front as a breeder, and in his beautiful place on the banks of the swift-flowing Salinas he has a number of colts and fillies that will make the Monterey races very interesting this fall.

A. C. Avery, of Portland, recently sold to R. Morton, Kissock, black mare, by Rockwood 1467, dam (dam of Pearl Fisher, record 2:29½) by Kisbar 1273, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian 10; second dam by Oregon Pathfinder 10,981.

Frank C. Baker, Oregon's State printer, has sold to Charles Riley, Salem, Rockwood 1467, bay horse, by Fleetwood 894, son of Happy Medium 400, by Hambletonian 10, dam Montezuma, by Abdallah 15, son of Hambletonian 10.

Iris, by Eros, and Maud Fox, the daughter of this Visalia sire, is to be trained this fall and given records. The people of Visalia have only one cause for regret, and that is that the beautiful colt Rosiris is not alive to compete for fame also.

Mr. Rose has not yet definitely decided whether he will send a string of runners East. If Fairy is all right and some of the two-year-olds show up in fair style at the Blood Horse meeting, the Rose colors will be seen on the Eastern tracks.

A Merced (Cal.) dispach, dated February 27th, says: A company is being organized to build fair grounds with a kite-shaped track near the city. Nearly $20,000 have been raised. The spring races will be held here in April on the old race course.

"The finest grandson of Electioneer near or around Stockton is Needham's colt, Voter," was the remark of a Stocktonian the other day and in this we cheerfully concurred, only that we wish to add that we believe he will also prove the fastest.

Dan Miller is enthusiastic over the outlook for the year 1892. He has four good animals in Melanita, Ida Glenn, Tycoon and the charming Charmion. Mr. Miller thinks Sacramento track the best in California on which to work horses in the winter.

The trotting dog "Doc," owned by Willie Ketchum, of Brighton, Ont., has been matched against a pointer owned by Willie Circe, of Carson, Nev. Circe's dog can trot an eighth of a mile at a 2:21 gait, and Ketchum's dog has gone a full mile in 3:11.

Fewer animals and better quality seem to be the motto of the day among breeders. It is a good motto, too, It is better to make sacrifices in selling than to hold on to animals year after year that will never appreciate in value; better sell out and start again.

C. W. Williams, of Independence, Iowa., announced last Tuesday that Allerton will meet any one stallion in a race in the first week in August, and will meet all stallions during the second week on this track, but on no account will he ever again board the cars.

The best foot-dressing to preserve the hoof and assist it in retaining moisture is as follows: Beef suet, two parts; beeswax, one part; tar, two parts; honey, one part; whale oil, four parts. Mix and melt over a slow fire, and apply to sole and wall of foot twice a week.

The fastest natural trotter that any man ever saw run loose in a lot is now owned at Woodburn Farm, says the American Sportsman. The little wonder is a filly by Re-election, out of Elite, by Messenger Duroc; second dam Green Mountain Maid. The filly knows no gait but trot, and can march.

Frank H. Burke, of La Siesta Stock Farm, has sold the pacing mare Sunrise, 2:27, to A. B. Spreckels. Sunrise is by Regent (son of imp. Bonnie Scotland and Lady Lancaster, by imp. Monarch), dam Lucy, by Hambletonian 10. She is a grand individual, and should make a great matron.

Mountain Boy last Tuesday passed from the hands of John McCord into the possession of Frank H. Burke and William Vioget. He is a grandly-bred horse, being by Kentucky Prince, dam Elise, by Messenger Duroc; second dam, the great Green Mountain Maid, by Harry Clay 45.

James Sutherland is driving quite a string of young trotters, besides looking out for the welfare of the highly-bred Director stallion, Guide, 2:16½. Mr. Hatch, the owner of this seal-brown horse, has a number of colts, mares and fillies that will some day astonish the trotter-loving people.

The latest news from the Oakwood Park Stock Farm is that the colts are all doing splendidly, and that there will be some of them seen in the circuit earning fame this year. We hope so, for last year at this time the youngsters were all stricken with the distemper and were unfitted to stand training.

Jas. McDonough met with a serious loss a few days since, his fine Altamont mare, Susie Hawkins, having had her leg broken by a kick from a horse confined in the yard with her. She was one of the best and most promising animals ever raised in southern Oregon.—Jacksonville (Or.) Democratic Times.

Vic Jenkins, the jockey who attended to the string of thoroughbreds belonging to the Owens Brothers, returned from his visit to Australia last week. He will assume his old position, and with the material he now has to work upon they ought to be seen in the front of many a field of horses this year.

Susquehanna and Feu Follett dropped foals to St. Blaise last week at Fairview Stud, Gallatin, Tenn. The former has become famous as the dam of Potomac and Chesapeake, while the deeds of St. Florian, Mamie B., Lizzie, Firefly and others have distinguished the latter as a broodmare of the highest quality.

J. P. Guerin, of Litton Springs, who has the large, well-formed stallion, Alcona Jr. 2:24, in charge will give this horse a lower record this fall. This young man is a careful trainer and driver and it would not surprise the people of Sonoma if their favorite stallion lowers his mark to 2:20 while in his care.

Our article about Ned Gifford, "the thoroughbred trotting stallion, sire of Direct, 2:06, the fastest pacer in the world," has had the effect of making the Nevada managers of Ned Gifford acknowledge that the horse is only a "half-brother to Direct," being by Director, 2:17. This is still wrong, as Ned Gifford is not out of Echora, consequently is not a half-brother to the black whirlwind.

L. J. Rose, of Los Angeles, will be on hand at the coming Blood Horse meeting with the fast Fairy, now a four-year-old; Motto, the speedy three-year-old daughter of Sir Modred and Mottle, and seven two-year-olds of unknown merit. However, Mr. Rose always has something pretty sweet in his string, tra-la.

Our old friend Luke B. Dubois, of Denver, has a couple of high-class fillies among his purchasers here last Fall. We speak of a roan miss by Warwick and a bay by Hyder Ali. Reports from the Colorado metroplis are to the effect that they are now in excellent shape in the hands of the colored trainer, John Winfield.

The handsome stallion Silver Bow is looking as well as he did this time last year, and the colts and fillies by him show that horsemen were not wrong in their prophesies regarding his worth as a sire. They are all natural trotters, and for conformation, good color, perfect limbs and well-shaped heads, they are the crème de la crème of youngsters.

John A. Goldsmith returned from the East last Sunday. He does not look as rugged as when he left, but now that he is back again on the Golden Slope, watching the little Wilkes' youngsters trot at that well-appointed place—the San Mateo Stock Farm—it is hoped he will soon be as robust and healthy-looking as ever.

Freedom, 2:29¾, the first yearling to enter the charmed circle, has developed in every way, and will be adding fresh laurels to his sire's brow this year. All of the Sable Wilkes' colts are doing splendidly, but let it not be assumed that Guy Wilkes has not a few youngsters this year that are worthy of him. He is still the king of the harem.

George Bayless has enough of the McCarty string of gallopers working to fill the track, and as soon as the agile jockeys, dressed in their "fatigue uniforms," are hoisted on the backs of the young Cheviots and instructed how to ride every eighth in the mile, he gets up on the fence and sees that his orders are executed. The colts are looking well and moving fast.

Charles Marvin says: "Attention to details is a great thing in training as in all other branches of human endeavor. The man who gets in the sulky when the horse is ready to work, drives him his mile and repeat, and leaves all the rest to the rubbers to do, if they will and as they will may have an easy and pleasant time in this life, but he won't break many records."

The string of horses now at the San Jose track, belonging to Messrs. Burke and Vioget, is gradually getting straightened, and ere long we will be hearing of some fast quarters and halves made by some of the Eros youngsters. William Vioget is a hard worker and a good, careful conditioner and trainer, and understands the art of getting horses in readiness for a race as well as any man in California.

William Donathan is able to be around the stalls again, and is trying to convince the boys that he is as strong as ever, but it will take time to do so, for this trainer came very near being "retired" forever, and were it not for his iron constitution and indomitable will he would undoubtedly have gone where all good men go. We understand that since his appearance near the scene of his former labors, he has had six fine young trotters sent to him.

The noted trotting sire Mark Field by George Willers, dam Corinne by McDonald's Mambrino Chief, second dam the dam of Hindoo Wilkes, 2:20½, by Alexander's Edwin Forrest, died at Aurora, Ill., on February 24th. Mark Field was the sire of Called Back, 2:27½, and Veritas, 2:18½, the blaze-faced gelding that Budd Doble took through the grand circuit in 1889, winning many races. Mark Field was valued at $5,000. and was owned by F. A. Lyon of Aurora.

S. O. Gregory, of Hames, Monterey county, says he does not know whether he will have his Eclectic colt trot in the district races or not this year. He says he feels as if it would be almost a hardship to put harness on him and give a few scrapes, he is so beautiful, pure-gaited and gentle; besides, he is of good size and good color. This youngster is out of Emma Steitz, dam of Peep-'o-Day, the Dawn stallion that Mr. Hickok will take East to show that Nutwood left his best sons here to act as sires.

There was foaled at the Oakwood Park Stock Farm last week a colt that great things are expected of. He is by Charles Derby, 2:20, out of Bertha, (sister to Bayard Wilkes 2:22) by Alcantara; second dam, Barcena, by Bayard, by Pilot Jr.; third dam, Blandina, dam of Swigert and King Rene, by Mambrino Chief 11; fourth dam, the Burch mare, dam of Roselind, 2:21¾, by Parker's Brown Pilot, etc. This youngster is a full brother to Diablo, a chestnut three-year-old belonging to Messrs. Murray & Richards.

According to a number of breeders who have made entries at the Tennessee meeting there seems to be a great diminishing in the sizes of the purses, and concessions are asked for by the directors of these associations. It would be better to make your entries at home, gentlemen, hereafter, if such modes of procedure are enforced beyond the Rocky Mountains. California has several fine tracks, and the people will come to the trotting meetings in greater numbers just as soon as our races are managed properly and the public know it.

M. Lynn, one of the leading citizens of Salinas, and J. Iverson, another whose name and fame are known throughout the length and breadth of that great county, have a mutual fondness for fine trotting stock and never let a bargain slip through their fingers. As judges of good horses and students of the science of breeding they are the peers of any two in the neighborhood. They have youngsters by the sons of Electioneer, Carr's Mambrino, Nutwood, George M. Patchen Jr. 31., and Geo. Wilkes, and are becoming more and more interested in progressive horse-breeding every year.

The beautiful stallion by Electioneer out of Lady Ellen, 2:28, that is owned by a syndicate of horsemen at Salinas, Monterey County, has always been known as Eugene, and under this name was sold at Palo Alto. It now transpires that there is another Eugene in the field, and each member of the syndicate has taken home a volume of Wallace's register to ascertain whether any name they selected is not duplicated. We would advise these gentlemen to wait until next week. The new volume of the Register will be received by that time, and then they will be better prepared to make a proper selection.

IRELAND is to have a trotting association, a corporation to be known as the Irish Trotting Association (Limited), being in the process of formation, with a capital of $17,000. The track will be built near Dublin, land having been rented from Lord Ashtown for a long term of years. This is close to "White-hat" McCarty's Irish estate, if we are not mistaken, although Dan had nothing to do with the formation of the organization.

TO THE business man, shopworn and prematurely old through exasperating details, the breeding or owning of the horse is the only nepenthe for his overtaxed mind. He hardly enters the threshold before its rare and exhilarating philosophy permeates his entire being, makes a new man of him, and he takes on views and is ready to meet annoyances in mercantile and private affairs with a sang froid not usual. Long live the horse! Man's best friend, his companion, his teacher his physician, his servant.

THE death of another of the daughters of the famous Bonnie Scotland occurred recently. This was the twenty-four-year-old mare Bonnie May, dam by imp. Glencoe. She was placed in the stud at three years old, and has produced many fairly good ones, of which, Leander, Respond, Blue Lodge, Royal Arch and Violante will be the best remembered. She has been bred to Spokane shortly prior to her death. Her owner, Mr. Rodes, has a couple of youngsters from her which he expects will turn out good ones.

IN an old chronicle of the "sport of kings" there is this description of racing in Italy that may suggest a way of deciding the finishes that the ardor for racing causes to be made in dense fog or in the dark. "At Ancona they have a singular but very admirable method of determining the winner. Across the course, at the coming in post, a thread is stretched, saturated in a red mixture, that the first horse breaking leaves a mark upon his breast, which mark, whenever it is a near thing, is deemed decisive of victory."

A BICYCLE manufactory in Ohio has been experimenting with wire wheels with rubber ties for road vehicles. The experiment has proven to be such a great success that they now feel confident that they can manufacture a wheel for sulkies not only much lighter than the lightest that can possibly be made of wood, on account of the rubber tire doing away with all vibration, but the resistance from the air will in the wire wheel be nothing compared to that in the wooden wheel. It now looks like wire wheels, rubber tires and ball-bearing axles and these improvements should do their part in still further reducing the trotting records.

THE Electioneer stallion Mortimer, 2:27, will be a success in the stud in Kentucky. He is in the hands of Capt. Will L. Crabb, Eminence, Ky., who will take an interest in pushing his colts. Already the best breeders are booking their mares. Hon. John Landrigan, of Illinois, sends one Nutwood and one Princeps mares to him. The dam of Colonel Tom, 2:22,is booked, and the dam of Banner Bearer, 2:28½, will also be bred to him. With such mares it is safe to say Mortimer will be a credit to the great Electioneer family, from whence he comes. It is doubtful if his service fee will ever be as low as announced for 1892.

THERE is much rejoicing among the Palo Alto folks over the advent of two lusty-looking colts that came into the equine world last Monday. They are both by Palo Alto, the King. One is out of that great matron, Beautiful Bells, the "queen of matrons," the other is out of Elaine, 2:20, the famous dam of Norlaine, 2:31¼, the ill-fated yearling that was burned to death. An analysis of the blood lines shows that this latter youngster traces to Green Mountain Maid twice, once through Palo Alto and once through her dam. The Beautiful Bells colt is the thirteenth that she has had, and he is by the Senator's favorite stallion. The probabilities are that if he lives he never will leave the farm.

OF THE fast and game mare, Nelly W., who took a record 2:14¼ last year, a correspondent says: "She was bred, developed and driven in all her races by her owner, G. W. Robertson. Nellie was offered for $125 when two years old, and her sire, Rolla Golddust, sold at auction for $165, and was worked by the side of Nellie's dam in a log wagon. Mr. Robertson owns the dam, a full brother and two full sisters. He considers one of the latter more promising than was Nellie at the same age. Somewhere among the cotton plantations of the South, in blissful ignorance of their distinguished relation, are two half-brothers of the famous Nellie. They can never be registered, for they were sired by a jack.

ONE of the most prominent-looking men noticed around the horse sales, says one of our Lexington exchanges, is A. H. Moore, the millionaire of Philadelphia. He is not over 35 years of age, but has lived over a hundred. He wears a beaver hat and overcoat and looks to be 50 years of age. He spent $100,000 for dogs,and took more dog premiums than any man on earth. His attention has been turned to horses,and he now owns over twenty broodmares with records of less than 2:20. He says he is not going to buy fine horses and keep them locked up in a barn like Bonner. He proposes to let the people see his horses go. Mr. Moore lives in a palace and enjoys life. His father is worth about $20,000,000.

IN 1867 Hambletonian 10 commanded a service fee of $500, and shrewd business men wrung their hands at the exorbitancy of such a price. Ethan Allen was the second to enter the $500 list, and now the service fee of Arion, grandson of Hambletonian 10, is $2,500. If, as Mr. Williams predicts, a trotter will some day be sold for $500,000, we offer a companion prediction, that about that same time some horse (it may be a grandson of Arion and Nancy Hanks), record 2:00, will command a fee of $5,000, limited to ten choice mares, as after July 1st he will be put in training to lower his record. There are men who would be glad to give $1,000 to see the horse that trots the first mile that stops the watch at two minutes. —Horse Breeder.

THE latest declaration in the Suburban is Pierre Lorillard's filly La Tosca. This leaves the list up to date as follows: Kingston, Longstreet, Banquet, Yosemite, Reporter and La Tosca. The declarations in the Volunteer Handicap, for three-year-olds, include Victory, Chauncey, Paragon and Yorkville Belle. The declarations in the Brooklyn are not so numerous as those in the Suburban, still they include one horse that race-goers would have liked to see start; that is Lamplighter, which was handicapped at 105 pounds. Teuton, 108, is the other Brooklyn declaration. Those horses which have declined the weights assigned them in the Fort Hamilton Handicap are His Highness 124, Victory 120, Ludwig 112, Yo Tambien 110, Alonzo 110 and Paragon 106.

A VISITOR at New Orleans who had several times backed a certain horse, and noticed him finish always behind, although he generally ran in the lead in the early part of the race, approached the owner and said: "Why don't you change your horse's name and give him a more appropriate one?" "I don't know," was the reply. "What would you consider a more appropriate one?" "I'd call him Criterion," said the first speaker. "Why so?" "Because I notice all the others go by him!"

RICHARD HAVEY, the clever reinsman, left Hobart Stock Farm last Tuesday, March 1st. There will doubtless be a large number of calls for his services. He has been around horses ever since he was able to toddle, and at a very tender age was considered a first-class lightweight jockey. It was Havey who piloted Norfolk to victory in the memorable two-mile match heat race against Lodi in 1865. At that time the youngster had the famous Gilpatrick to try his skill against. Getting too heavy to ride, Richard went to training throughbreds, and finally drifted into the business of conditioning and driving trotting horses. At everything he has undertaken Havey has made a marked success.

THERE was some racing at Selma, Cal., on Friday, Eebruary 26th. The first race was 600 yards and repeat, between Queen, Tulare Chief, Lady Franklin and Sleepy Fred. Queen won the first heat, with Sleepy Fred second and Tulare Chief third, Lady Franklin being shut out. Second heat—Queen first, Sleepy Fred second and Tulare Chief third. Second race, five-eighths of a mile and repeat, between Springwater and McGinty. McGinty won the first heat. Dissatisfaction with Springwater's rider was expressed, and the judges ordered a change in riders, Springwater winning the second and third heats. At the conclusion of the five-eighths mile race Springwater, owned by William Works, of Tulare, was sold for $400, Denicke & Ray, of Tulare, being the purchasers. Dick Bozeman will have charge of the horse in the future.

EVERY breeder who purchased mares at the last Palo Alto sale is anxiously looking forward to the time when the foals by the Palo Alto stallions come. There are a number of other matrons at the famous farms that would be heard from as dams of producers if bred to stallions that represented different families, and yet are growing in prominence in this State. Take Sidney, Guy Wilkes' and his sons; Sultan's sons, Soudan and Bay Rose; Onward's sons; Thornhill; Dexter Prince; Nutwood's sons, or any of the other young sires, and then let time prove that these mares have been buried for years in the famous home. No finer-looking lot of matrons ever were brought to the auction block. Their sleek appearance reflected great credit upon the superintendent and his employees. There is a lack of certain strains of blood on many of our large stock farms, and a sale like this helps to scatter the representatives over many places.

THE programme of the new Salt Lake Driving Park Association is announced, and the liberality of the purses is a general surprise to the horsemen. The spring meeting opens Saturday, June 11th, and continues seven days. The are four stake races worth $1,000 and $1,500 each. The purses range from $300 to $2,000 each. The free-for-all trot is for $2,000. Horsemen are greatly pleased with the programme, and as the dates do not conflict with the Montana dates, Salt Lake may look for a large representation from this coast. There will be three races each day. There are seven trots and five paces, the balance being running events, with six furlongs the shortest distance. The Association is backed by representative citizens of Salt Lake city, with S. W. McIntyre, President, and G. W. Parks, Secretary. A fall meeting will be held in September-October, with purses equal to the spring meeting.

ONE of the first California racing stables to start East this season will be that of J. C. Follansbee who will send seven or eight horses this way about the middle of March. Most of Mr. Follansbee's horses are now at Sacramento, Cal., where they are doing slow work, but some are still at his Mexican ranch. The string will consist of Almont, Del Mar, Dr. Ross, Ragna, Gloaming, a three-year-old filly, by Forester—Etiquette, and a three-year-old filly, by Mr. Pickwick. or Miser, out of a full sister to Belle of Maywood. Mr. Follansbee's horses will not be raced in California, but will go Direct to Sheepshead Bay. Henry Marson, an old-time Kentucky man, will train, and Hamilton will ride when at liberty from his other employers. Kingmaker also belongs to this stable, but he is already East, in care of Albert Cooper, who has entered him in some of the big handicaps. Mr. Follansbee, who is a cousin of Mr. Foxhall Keene, has a great opinion of what his horses will accomplish the coming season, and he expects to place some of the important Eastern events to his credit.

L. A. RICHARDS, of Grayson, Stanislaus county, was in the city last week on a flying visit. He has not quite recovered from his hard tussle with la grippe. It gave him a great shaking up, if one is to judge by his appearance, but in that climate and amid his pleasant surroundings "Richard (s) will be himself again," and will not take a "kingdom for his horse" (Elector) when the days become short. We understand that a number of game campaigners have been sent to the embrace of this stallion, hence we have a right to expect his roll of honor to increase every year. Mary Lou, 2:19½, was the latest to be booked to him. Elector was bred to but five mares his first year. From them he sired five colts. One was injured and each of the balance trotted better than 2:35 as three-year-olds. He never was bred to a standard mare, or a mare that produced a 2:30 performer, until last year. Surely his future looks bright, and we hope to see Mr. Richards live long to receive the congratulations of every horsemen.

SOME men there actually are who claim that alfalfa is good enough food for brood mares with their foals by their sides, but not substantial enough for horses that have passed the yearling period; that it is valuable only as a milk food and makes flesh only, thereby producing a washy class of horses, with inferior legs and shelly feet. But the experience of some very successful breeders is to the contrary. Hon. L. J. Rose says that Stamboul, Alcazar, Ruby, and a score of other great trotters were fed on alfalfa, either green or in the shape of hay, until they were five years old, and that they received twice as much alfalfa as they did of barley or oat hay during that period. E. J. Baldwin of Santa Anita farm corroborates what Mr. Rose says, citing his gallopers Santa Ana, Cleopatra, Santiago and Sinaloa as examples of what alfalfa can produce. Over in Australia, Frank Reynolds of New South Wales has fed alfalfa ever since 1873. His favorite stallion, Goldsbrough, is accredited with 112 winners of races, among them such as Melos, Arsenal, Merriment, Cardigan and Ethel.

THE feet of the colt need a great deal of attention during the winter. When he is running in the yard or standing in a loose box on a pile of manure, there is nothing to wear down his hoofs as they grow out. It is necessary, therefore, to trim them down to the proper shape with a knife and rasp. Some hoofs will be found to have grown out at the toe, and others at the heel. Both are bad and often result in spavins, windgalls, contracted feet, curbs or ring bones. Many young horses have unsound feet and limbs, and their owners think the unsoundness hereditary, while in reality it came from neglect.

A HORSE of 1,000 pounds needs,in addition to fifteen pounds of good timothy hay, not more than ten pounds of corn coarsely ground, and this allowance of grain may be considered as equal to fifty per cent more of whole grain. This supplies about twenty pounds of dry substance, containing of digestible matters fourteen pounds carbohydrates, a pound and three-quarters of albuminoids and half a pound of fat, which is ample for a horse of that weight, and even for 1,200 pounds, kept in a warm stable without work, but having sufficient exercise to keep the blood stirring, and maintain a healthful consumption of food.

THE meeting between John E. Turner and Josiah Sessions at Pleasanton was very affecting. When "Yank" was told that the gentleman walking with James Dustin was John E. Turner, the man who drove May Queen in her races in the East nearly thirty years ago, he ran over and placed both hands on Turner's shoulders and exclaimed, "Great Heavens! are you the Johnny Turner that drove my old mare May Queen? I'm "Yank" Sessions; you've heard of me. I've wanted to see you ever since you came; let's sit down somewhere in here and tell me how you are, and how you liked my old mare." The two linked arms, and in the Pleasanton Hotel these two old-time horsemen, whose memories were as fresh and as bright as school-children, sat down and talked upon their favorite subject, the horse. Passers-by could once and awhile hear the words: "She was fast!" "May Queen never needed a whip!" "How sick she made 'em that day!" and so they chatted away, entirely oblivious to their surroundings, for every moment they were binding their friendship for each other firmer and firmer, and we doubt if two greater friends exist to-day than these gentlemen.

STOCKHOLDERS representing 165 of the 200 shares of the capital stock subscribed for the building of a fair ground in Kern county met at The Southern Hotel Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of organization. After electing temporary officers the members present proceeded to discuss in outline the plan of procedure to be followed in starting the enterprise and then elected the following temporary officers: President, John C. Morrison; Vice-President, S. W. Fergusson, Secretary, J. M. Reuck; Treasurer, J. J. Mack. Directors: S. W. Fergusson, J. C. Morrison, Sol. Jewett, W. H. Scribner and J. M. Reuck. Upon motion Alvin Fay and J. W. Wiley were appointed attorney for the association for the ensuing year and were instructed to at once prepare the necessary papers for the incorporation of the society. The Secretary was instructed to make application for a charter as soon as possible. It was decided to call the new organization the Kern County Fair Ground Association. It was decided that all shares of stock subscribed for shall be paid up in full on or before April 1st next. The meeting then adjourned until Tuesday, March 8th.—Californian, Bakersfield.

LOVERS of thoroughbred horses are enthusiastic over the appearance and condition of Carlile & Shield's stable at Pueblo. The following list may prove interesting. It comprises the principal horses the above gentlemen have entered at Overland Park, Denver, for next spring's meet: Governor Adams, five years, by Nathan Oaks; Dungarvan, four years, by Hindoo, out of imported Calphurnia; Brookwood, four years, by King Alfonso; Prince Henry, three years, full brother to Fortunatus, by Fonso, Bob Weitbrec, three years, by Longfellow, our of Rena B., by Ten Broeck; Bob Lytle, three years, by Onondaga; Parson Crook, four years, by Regicido; John Daugherty, three years, by John W. Norton; Senator Wolcott, two years, by Duke of Montrose; Dr. Thombs, two years, by Emperor; Patience Stapleton, two years, by Cary; Mahlom, two years, by John W. Norton, out of Longhamie by Longfellow; Casa, two years, by Carey. Bob Weitbrec and Bob Lytle are gelded maidens. The former has been entered for honors in the American Derby for 1892. Bob Lytle is the favorite for that honor this year, in the Colorado Derby, in which his stable mate, Bob Weitbrec, will start also, and perhaps Prince Henry.

"AUGUR" writes in the London, England, Sporting Life: "Some of the best runners ever known have been nourished from the milkpail. The most notable instance, perhaps, was Beeswing, whose dam died shortly after her birth, and Mr. Orde had a cow put apart for the use of the foal. Jemmy Watson, of Belle Isle, remembered her, and said that she would follow the dairymaid into the large Yorkshire kitchen and neigh for her breakfast, being the pet of the place. From the first Beeswing was a hardy little lady, and she grew up to be the pride of her owner, who scarcely liked to see her go off in due course to the training stable. Here she soon gave proofs, though, that being nursed and petted had in no way damaged the constitution she had inherited from her sire, Doctor Syntax. She became the idol of Yorkshire and Northumberland, and in her mighty struggles with Lanercost on Newcastle Moor nobles, citizens and pitmen joined in delirious excitement whenever the bonny mare won. Then she must be regarded as the first mare of the 'Stud Book,' as the dam of Newminster; and so when some little orphan colt or filly is seen drinking cow's milk with an aptitude very pleasing to the groom who has arranged the wholesome meal, there is a consolation in knowing that Beeswing, the stoutest mare of her day, and the greatest broodmare, was so sustained as a little one." Again: "I notice that Her Majesty's Stud has lost the valuable mare Bonnie Bouche, by Macaroni, her dam Cauldron, by Newminster, in foaling, and that her bantling has been saved and will be reared by hand. This is apropos of my remarks yesterday about bringing up such little orphans, and I am reminded by a correspondent that Lord Falmouth was a great believer in foals from nearly all mares being helped in their early youth through the aid of cow's milk, and Bowman, his lordship's stud groom, now in charge of Mr. Greenall's establishment, was also a great advocate of the cow as an assistant. My correspondent insists, though, on one cow being kept for one or two colts, no change of milk, and that she should be fed on much the same stuff as the mare, crushed oats in particular. On no account should such a cow be turned out on young spring grass, if there is any, and her milk is best to begin with about two months after she has calved."

THE GUN.

An Admonition.

By Charles Wesley Kyle.

When next I meet you at the club,
On trout to dine,
Pray do not give my faith the rub,
For as fish swim and are good grub
When flanked with wine.
It cannot stand to hear about
Tay w on trous'skill in luring trout
With rod and line.

Now mark it, friend, I do not say
Because forsooth,
My faith some wavering may betray,
That you have not ; in fact, alway
From early youth,
Been kind to her, aye, kept your word
Bright as a warrior's gleaming sword,
Defending Truth!

But, pardon me, if it seems bold
In me to ask :
Do other's faith lay firmly hold
Upon this tale when it you've told?
And do they bask
Beneath that self complacent smile
And does it every doubt beguile
A perfect mask?

You "cast" you say, full forty feet,
And lured a "rise"
Just where the alder bushes meet
The waters ; in that cool retreat
A shadow lies
Upon the stream and stills the roar,
Beneath a giant sycamore
Which towers the skies.

Your "catch" you say was seven pound.
And two foot three?
Well, well, it must be holy ground
Where such enormous trout are found.
The Banyan tree
No greater gift could ere confer
Upon the heathen worshipper,
Than this to me.

Direct me to this sycamore,
I pray thee, friend,
That my poor faith you may restore.
I truthful deem you as of yore,
And no more lend
An ear to doubt whene'er you speak ;
Be henceforth strong, as now I'm weak,
Unto the end.

The oily lines you love to use,
No doubt are fine,
But even oil you may abuse ;
Oiled lines of speech can but amuse,
For false design,
Reveals itself through every word,
And every oily tone that's heard
Is falsehood's sign.

So when you meet me next, my friend,
I truly wish
You graciously would strive to lend,
Your powers all thought to kindly tend
Away from fish ;
I seriously bewail your fate,
You lie so easily of late
When trout's our dish.

THE COUNTRY CLUB.

The Opening Event of the Season For This Club at the Trap.

On Saturday last the Country Club met at the trap in Oakland Shooting Park for the purpose of inaugurating the sport of pigeon shooting for the season. The day was cold and damp, especiallly during the earlier median hours. A dull, heavy bank of mist enshrouded the foothills to the eastward, leaving exposed to view only the dark forms of the heavy-foliaged eucalyptus trees which skirt the environments of the park. Dark-colored birds fast penetrating this mist-cloud, the sportsmen found not remarkably clear or easy targets to hit. To score on many of the birds furnished required quick work. For once, let it be said, the birds furnished were as near perfect as they could ever be expected to be. They had evidently not been long caught or they had received proper care, food and a good, roomy place in which to exercise. They were clean, strong and hence thoroughly active, as the appended scores will substantiate..

Mr. A. C. Tubbs was first to face the score, and he opened his work for the season by grassing his first six birds in splendid form. His seventh, a right-quarter incomer, was undershot with first and heavily hit with second charge, but managed to escape ; his tenth and twelfth birds, each right-quarter drivers, escaped, each being slightly punished.

Mr. R. H. Sprague found his second, third and fourth birds lively "drivers," only one of which he succeeded in punishing visibly. His sixth but managed to sustain its flight until the boundary was passed, where it fell dead.

Mr. J. A. Robinson found the birds all too lively for his skill, but as this was the first shoot of the season it is no criterion by which to judge of the work of any of the gentlemen at the trap.

Mr. E. B. Bosqui was not in his usual form, and the score made by him is in no sense a measure of his skill. He is one of the best all-around shots in the club.

Mr. F. R. Webster grassed nine of his first dozen birds, fired at in fine form, a quarter to either hand and an incomer escaping, two of which were severely punished. Mr. Webster starts out in very good form.

Mr. J. M. Adams divided honors with the birds allowing them point for point. This is not by three birds at least up to Mr. Adams' average.

Mr. W. S. McMurtry is one of the new disciples of Nimrod, and, as the season passes, will doubtless be found improving in skill with the gun.

Mr. W. B. Tubbs was another man whose skill equaled that of the birds, and they succeeded in compromising at half rates with him ; of course it was a forced balance as far as he was concerned, and one not subject to revision.

Mr. R. A. Eddy missed a "lightning driver," which sprang from trap two at his first call of "Pull." His second bird fell to one of those phenomenal shots which occasionally occur at the trap. The bird was near the boundary at farthest point from score, and "fell like a rag," so dead was it on the instant of firing. His ninth, a right quarter driver, was undershot with each barrel.

Mr. W. S. Kittle's second bird fell dead just over the fence, his fourth and eleventh also escaping, the latter also dead out of bounds.

Mr. A. Hamilton is just becoming accustomed to trap shooting, and found this experience to be one of the most severe as to conditions that he will ever have to encounter. He holds his gun well, takes a good position and will no doubt rapidly improve in his shooting.

Mr. George Crocker was shooting ammunition which we are convinced was not adapted to trap work. He succeeded in hitting a great many of his birds, several of which fell in the distance. There is no class of shooting which requires so strong charges uniformly as pigeon shooting at the trap.

Mr. F. W. Tallant started out in this match fully up to his best shooting of last year, and it will be remembered that he secured first prize in this club last season. His only escaping bird fell dead only a few feet over the boundary fence, most of his birds falling to first barrel near the traps. His shooting is very good, but his position at the trap might be improved. Next to killing the birds comes the grace and ease with which it is done. He killed every bird fired at during the day, although three were dead out of bounds

Mr. F. D. Atherton did some very commendable work on his first birds, grassing many hard, swift flyers with ease and grace ; two of his escaping birds fell dead out of bounds.

Mr. R. Oxnard, in additiou to being practically a beginner, was using a new and strange gun. All things being considered, he did very well, "feathering" a number of his escaping birds, one of which fell dead out of bounds.

Mr. W. C. Murdock was all out of form, and as a result a surprising number of "goose eggs" were scored against him. Two of his escaping birds fell dead out of bounds, but even this cannot be said to account for his shooting. He is away above the average in skill, and last year was "in at the death" with the best shots of the club, and we doubt not but that this year will close with him in the front ranks.

Mr. H. Woodward did some excellent shooting during the day, far better after than during the main match as scored below. Two of his four escaping birds fell dead out of bounds, while one of the others must have carried off a shot to almost every feather.

Mr. W. Newhall is one of the enthusiastic members of the club and while not a leading shot, manages to extract as much sport from an occasion of this kind as any one.

Mr. R. B. Woodward is one of the "old reliables" and can universally be depended upon to make a good score. This he did on this occasion for, all things considered, ten birds out of twelve was good shooting.

Mr. A. Jackson killed in excellent form nine out of his twelve birds, one of the escaping ones being dead out of bounds. Mr. Jackson takes a very neat position and shoots with ease and grace.

Mr. Joseph Donohoe did some very good work for an amateur at the trap. He will eventually make a good shot, else we mistake in our judgment.

Mr. E. P. Danforth is another beginner but should not think of being discouraged as these birds eluded the best shots of the club.

Mr. R. R. Grayson is still another new addition to the shooting membership of the club and right royally did he score with his first barrel on this occasion. He has one of the very best indications for making a successful shot, and that is he shoots quick. All his kills were with first barrel.

Mr. E. Donohoe made an excellent record during the day. One of his escaping birds in the main match fell dead out of bounds, while two others were very severely hit with each charge.

SUMMARY.

Oakland Shooting Park, Oakland, Cal., Feb. 27th, 1892.—The Country Club's first match of the series of seven events for the season of 1892 at the trap for the club's several trophies and medals, to be awarded to the best record made in five out of the seven events. Mr. Frederick R. Webster, President ; Mr. Joseph M. Quay, Secretary. C. W. Kyle Referee. The score.

Following this came a pool shoot with nineteen entries.

Bosqui	2	1	1	1	Jackson	2	0
Eddy	1	1	1	1	Oxnard	1	0
Ed. Donohoe	1	1	1	1	W. B. Tubbs	1	0
Tallant	1	1	1	0	Webster	1	0
Crocker	1	1	1	0	Tubbs	0	0
H. Woodward	2	1	1	0	Kittle	0	0
Grayson	2	1	2	0	Robinson	0	0
Woodward	1	2	0		Hamilton	0	0
Atherton	2	1	0		Sprague	0	0

In another pool Tallant and Ed. Donohoe divided on clean scores. A third found the birds short and the division was among a number on second bird. This closed one of the most pleasurable days ever enjoyed at this popular shooting resort.

An elegant lunch was a pleasing feature of the day.

The Selby Medal Contest.

On Sunday last a large number of the better shots of this city and vicinity, also some of the Stockton contingent met at the trap at Bird's Point, to contest for the Selby medal. The day was perfect ; all the conditions were of such a nature as to enhance the interest of the sport, and a capital good time was had by all sportsmen participating in this event. The feature of the day's sport was Mr. R. A. Eddy's shooting. The birds were strong and active but he succeeded in securing the first twenty fired at, while all the other able shots fell away below their usual records. Mr. Smith, Mr. Merrill, Mr. Haas and Mr. Robinson were not up to their usual shooting form and consequently fell below their usual records. The sport opened at 10 o'clock and continued so long as there were birds which was not near long enough to suit the gentlemen present. It seems strange that on such occasions enough birds cannot be furnished to give the sportsmen all the shooting which they may desire.

The score stood as follows :

R. A. Eddy	1	1	2	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	2	1	1	1	1	2	1	2	1	20
Chas. J. Haas	2	1	1	1	2	0	1	2	2	2	2	0	1	2	1	1	1	2	1	1—	18
"Lake"	2	0	1	2	2	2	1	1	2	1	2	2	0	1	2	1	2	1	2	2—	18
Chas. Merrill	1	0	1	1	2	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	2	2	1	2	0	1	0	1—	17
C. Robinson	1	1	2	0	1	2	1	1	0	1	1	1	1	1	1	2	2	0	0	2—	16
R. Barney	1	1	0	1	1	2	2	0	2	1	1	1	2	0	1	2	2	2	0	2	16
H. Schroeder	1	1	2	1	2	1	0	1	1	0	2	2	1	2	1	2	0	0	1	1—	16
C. B. Smith	1	0	2	1	1	1	1	1	1	2	0	2	0	0	1	0	1	1	1	2—	15
"Slade"	0	1	0	2	2	2	1	0	0	2	1	1	0	1	1	1	0	2	w
Fay	2	1	0	0	1	0	w

A six-bird match followed resulting :

Merrill	1	2	1	1	1	1	6
Haas	1	1	1	1	1	1	6
Smith	0	2	1	2	2	2	5
Schroeder	2	1	1	0	1	1	5
"Lake"	1	1	2	2	1	0	5
"Slade"	2	0	1	1	1	1	5
Robinson	1	0	1	1	1	1	5
Eddy	2	1	0	0			2

A second pool same conditions, resulted as follows :

Haas	1	2	1	2	1	2	6
Smith	2	1	1	1	2	1	6
Schroeder	2	2	1	2	1	2	6
"Lake"	1	2	2	2	2	0	5
Robinson	1	1	1	1	1	0	5
Slake	1	2	2	0			5
Eddy	1	2	1	0			3
Merrill	0						0

Another round and the birds being exhausted the sport was brought to a close.

Mr. R. A. Eddy was the recipient of many hearty congratulations on his victory in winning the medal. It has seldom been won by any man who has been the recipient of so many good wishes as was Mr. Eddy on this occasion.

Battle of Giraffes.

To the south and eastward of Lobengula's capital is situated Maculaca Land, says a correspondent in the London Graphic. It was conquered by that doughty monarch's father, Mosilikatze, and still remains subservient to the Matabeles. The approximate position of my camp at the time I witnessed the scene I will endeavor to describe was latitude 21 degrees south, longitude 32 degrees east.

This country is not destituse of water, as is attested by the numbers of baboons, monkeys and leopards which frequent the copjes, and the antelopes, zebras and guinea-fowl which wander over the flats. Possibly the indigenous bushmen know where to find this necessity of life, but these astute savages carefully concealed their secret from me and my people. I was riding slowly along admiring the beautiful colors of this distant landscape. In close attendance was my Massara guide. My reverie was broken by an unknown sound, which echoed and re-echoed from the surrounding crags. It was not the honest bark of the baboon or the reverberating voice of the lion or the hyena's discordant langh, but a combination of all of them uttered in quick successive gasps. On inquiry from my follower he informed me that kameels (giraffes) were the originators of the unknown sound. The Massara begged me to follow him. This I did, and so became witness of one of the most extraordinary signs in wild life that I had ever seen. Those who have dwelt in the distant East have doubtlessly seen male camels fight, and noted with what obstinancy, power and viciousness they try to maim or disable one another; how they shriek with rage over each advantage that they obtain, and yell with pain when they are severely hurt. A giraffe duel much resembled a camel's, as will be seen from what I proceed to state.

The rivals were not well matched—the taller was out of condition, and very old ; the other was in splendid form, and in the prime of life. I concluded that a fight was imminent, and had no difficulty in deciding which would be the victor.

Presently the belligerents came within a few yards of each other. Then commenced a scene that baffles all description. Some people might call it ludicrous ; it was far more ; it was side splitting, and, but for a desire to see the end, I must have given way to convulsions of laughter. Although the giraffe possesses a certain beauty when at rest, it loses its grace when in motion, and the greater its speed the more ungainly does it appear. But when two mature bulls begin to waltz and dance violently around each other, each endeavoring to outdo the other in agility, at the same time mumbling their jaws and emitting fearfully discordant roars, it is certainly one of the most absurd sights human eye ever looked upon.

I have often seen a crane dance—a function common enough north of the Vaal river. It is more than funny—it is ridiculous, but can not for an instant be compared to the antics of these two mammouth brutes. Their great height added to the grotesqueness of their behavior, but even if the beasts had been no bigger than goats or sheep the absurd manner in which they swung about their feet, contorted their bodies and swayed their heads must have moved the most phlegmatic.

We lay hidden and quiet while the rivals were getting closer and closer to each other ; at length, when they were nearly within striking distance, simultaneously each dropped upon his knees and commenced to twist and twine his long neck about that of the other, with the evident purpose of seizing his adversary's throat. This lasted several minutes, but both were "skilled of fence," and ultimately relinquished this style of fighting and adopted other tactics. They began rearing as if to bear the other down, their mouths all the time open to grip if opportunity occurred.

At length the violent exercise began to tell upon the elder beast. He made some mistake in a parry, and the youngster seized with his teeth the foot of the veteran, who in turn laid hold of his opponent's ear. For some moments there was a pause. It was very brief, and then the struggle was renewed. With a gigantic effort the younger giraffe threw the old hero upon his haunches. He looked very much as if he had played his last card, but there was pluck in his aged heart yet, though the battle was not for him. Years told against him, and victory lay with the youngster, who celebrated it by trying to drag the vanquished after him. This operation must have been painful, for the shrieks that the defeated warrior uttered were heart-rending.

After a final worry, the hero of the hour walked off, mobbed the two harems of ladies together, and, willingly followed by all, took the lead. Not one of the zenana of the fallen chief turned a head for an instant to see what had become of him.

The veteran finally tried to pull himself together, but he was dreadfully knocked about as well as very lame. With anxious eyes he gazed in the direction the herd had taken, possibly wishing to follow, or with a hope that one of his wives at least would return to him. Not so ; the poor old fellow was doomed to disappointment, and appeared to realize that he was deserted. The life before him I knew would be one of misery ; therefore what better could I do but raise my rifle, glance along my sight and send a bullet through his heart? It was a sad alternative, but, after all, I think it was humane.

Black Pointers.

The first kennel started in America was located at Newton, N. J., by A. C. Waddell in 1874, if my memory serves me right. One of the first dogs, then owned by Waddell, was Old Phil to become famous; a pure black. He now sleeps with a marble slab at his head in his kennel yard—his graveyard—at Edina, Mo. Champion Fan, a granddaughter of Old Phil, twenty-six inches high, bred to Champion Sleaford, a dog of immense bone and muscle, and what a cross! She is the dam of Barker's Phil Jr., by Old Phil, and Forest and Stream, mentioning the death of this dog, says: "It was the intention of his owner to send him to England to compete with the crack dogs there." Fan is also the dam of King Philip, another very remarkable dog.

I mention these dogs thus to show as near as I can that the black dog is not a new or untried one to this country, although I must admit a sadly neglected one. As a general rule, to Waddell belongs the credit of keeping his strain pure, and at the present time he has in his kennel descendants of this dog—pure blacks—which he is now crossing on the best liver strains—not for cause but for color only. Whirl is a black bitch of tried quality; is one I might mention at this time. She is by Sweep—Blackbird, and scores to me as follows: Well-sprung stifles, perfectly sprung ribs, nose a little snipy—not square enough for the rule—in general type a beauty, clean-cut, with great speed and wonderful nose; by the way, I never saw a black dog that did not possess a fine nose above the average. Blackbird, the dam of Whirl, is full sister to Judge Starr's great dog Wat—Starr says the best dog, any breed, he ever owned—a field trial winner. Peshall's Jimmy was another. King Philip was also from same parents, and was another remarkable one. Scott was another.

Now I wish to impress on my readers—who remember how these old-time pointers look and worked—that I had given up seeing again this type, to my eye the handsomest and best of all—no hot-house dudes, but workers from day to day, week to week, if necessary. This type I have found in Waddell's kennel, hence this letter. I do not know if he has any for sale, but I think not. Seven are now owned in and around Mitchell, and none are for sale. This much I am sure.

Mr. Waddell has in his kennel another dog that deserves mention, Hammers Bang 19305, by Minnistola Prince ex. Countess Nellie, she by Boom ex Rena. Prince by Nupt. Bang ex Jean, good blood this and he is now crossing his blacks on this strain and I predict some good ones—yes great ones. Bang is a fine looker, though to me somewhat throaty, with lip to correspond. His head is of that grand order you sometimes see overcoming minor defects. His nose is of the Stonhenge standard, but rather short, broad deep and square as a block, neck good, a little short—shoulders a little heavy—every where else a perfect dog, fine and strong—especially is his stern and feet extra, he works with his head well up, has marked individuality, having a good nose; he is a quick and sure birdfinder. He is a litter brother to Prince, winner eastern field trials, '86. It is not often I amled thus to describe any one's dogs. I have done this on my own account, especially as the idea seemed to prevail that the black pointers were a measley lot and a good one a rarity, when in fact the exact reverse is the truth, which fifteen years experience with them should entitle me to my say. Mr. Watson's proposition has warmed me up considerably and I want some of you to tackle him, don't let him shut you up that way, but come to the front at once and lets have a race—and may the best win—my word for it the blacks are worthy foemen—every one of them—and should you win? Why a glorious victory for you and yours. Aloin.

Puck Has a Good Motto.

I never glance at the highly-colored illustration of the tropically-clad littte cuss standing at the initial of "Puck," bearing a streamer on which appears, "What fools these mortals be," but that the appropriateness of this selection strikes me forcibly, especially when considering the would-be leaders of dogdom in this country. I refer to those self-complacent egotists, who, measuring the world from their center of being, possess only sufficient light and intelligence to comprehend only one point—the one fetid dung-hill upon which they stand and with their physical being cover.

They therefore imagine that there is nothing beyond themselves, simply because they cannot see, or know, or comprehend it. Like the poor simpleton whose birthday fell upon the occasion set apart for the review of the king's army, who when he saw the pomp and glory of the kingdom passing by smiled and shouted in glee, fondly thinking the demonstration was in honor of his birth, though he wore the rags and tatters of a beggar, and to that condition born.

These would-be giants and leaders in dogdom rush into print and over their own signatures display an assumption and vanity scarce less than that of the simpleton. If they exhibit more intelligence than the simpleton, disgust at their action is increased at the expense of pity for their natural defects. Avordupois has been given some men at a great expense—grossly out of proportion to that of the gray matter of their brains. Pompous strut and ignorant bluster and assertion is their only expression. They strut out with as much vanity as the peacock, but are far more silly as they have much less to be proud of.

The Bench Show.

It is to be hoped that the differences, which are really of minor importance in and of themselves, yet of sufficient influence to cause serious deflections in the ranks of the kennel men of this city and vicinity, may be overcome and a truce declared in time to unite all the interests so that the coming bench show may be as great a success as the circumstances and development of the kennel interests in this city and vicinity will warrant.

The last show held by the California Kennel Club was a financial success. This fact went far to excuse, in the minds of the kennel men of this city and vicinty, many other apparent defects, but these defects should not occur again, and it should be one of the main objects of the Executive Committee of the club, having in charge the coming exhibition to see to it that they do not recur.

There are unquestionably more good dogs within the radius of San Francisco and vicinity now than there was a year ago. It is also clear to the initiated that it will require some good diplomatic work in order to have all the better dogs represented at the bench show. In the west, particularly, a spirit of practical work has taken possession of our people, and especially is this true in the line of sports. The conditions which surround us account for this fact. We may here, during each month in the year, enjoy field sports without restriction. The vast territory which lies unoccupied in this State, the mountanous region which never can be occupied, save for other purposes than that of settlement, leaves a wide range for the sportsmen of the State to exercise their love for field work.

To establish as fully as may be,the interest in a bench show, extraordinary work and precaution must be taken, for there are many men in the State who own fine dogs who care little or nothing for the bench show interests, being entirely content to own and control their dogs strictly with a view of enjoying their practical work in the field.

Therefore, we say that in so much as the conditions for field work are superior in this State to that of the east, in so much must greater caution, care and added inducements be held out to interest our sportsmen in bench shows. Many of the best dogs are even now in the trainer's hands and will there in all probability remain until the next hunting season opens.

It will require much of prudence and caution to so arrange and conduct a show so as to best influence our field men to take an interest in this class of exhibitions. There is no doubt but that a grand exhibition will be arranged for, and it is to be hoped that any and all personal differences which may have existed between the membership of the club will be healed, and all as a unit work for the success of the coming show.

The National Greyhound Club has perfected the work upon its medal and presented a design which could not well be improved upon. Mr. H. W. Huntington is the author of the design, and to him the thanks of the entire coursing public is due for this very appropriate emblem. It presents on the obverse side a smooth shield with the words "awarded to" at the top, with space for engraving the victor's name and such other matter as may be chosen, and below the shield appears the inscription "National Greyhound Club, Incorporated 1890." To the right of shield appears a representation of a deer; to the left a wolf and above a hare in the act of leaping across the plain. On the reverse side, in the form of a triangle, appears the presentation of a greyhound, a borzoi and a deerhound, all shown at full speed, full of life and spirited action. The American Field presents illustrations of the medal, curiously enough reversing the sides of the medal, but as calling the tail the head does not alter the fact, it may be of little importance.

Dr. A. DeMonco, of Sioux Fall, has sent to Mr. A. T. Smith, of Bowie, Texas, for training a black pointer, Luck Jr. ex Hebe from A. C. Waddell's famous pointer Kennels Garden City, Kansas. This gentleman has a number of fine dogs among them being Westmoreland Don, Westmoreland Minnie, Helter-Skelter and Commanche. To which may be added a King of Kent and also a Molton Baron puppy. Bowie is a fine point for developing the dogs and we predict that few if any pointer kennels in the county will excel those of Dr. DeMonco's, as he is an enthusiast on the development of this variety of fielders.

It now appears that there will be a wolf-killing match between Mr. Macdougall and Mr. Hacke. The date will be soon announced and will be between April 1st and 15th. This will unquestionably be one of the most interesting incidents ever occuring on the continent in this line of sport. The first named gentleman replying to the Hacke through the press shows by his tone that a good stiff contest may be expected.

The New York bench show held at Madison Square Garden last week is said to have been one of the most satisfactory, quality of the exhibits ruling, ever held in that American metropolis of the kennel interests.

What a Long Tail Our Cat's Got!

Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that bloweth not his own horn will deprive all the people of hearing the sound thereof. We know it's cruel, but we never could refrain from puncturing a puff ball, whether it had been blown up by means of a quill or was a natural product. Here is one which we found in a contemporary. It reads:

"I read in last week's issue of a contemporary that Mr. Mason had been engaged to report the Westminster Kennel Club show for an English dog paper. Of still greater importance to canine enthusiasts in this country must be the fact that Mr. George Raper will write an exhaustive critique of the same show for the British Fancier. Needlesss to say, his searching, and at the same time unbiased criticisms, are unrivaled.

Incidentally, I may add, that I have been engaged to report the show for the greatest of all English sporting papers. Mr. Mason was engaged by this same paper until my advent to this country. Yours truly, R. F. Hayhew."

Selah, which being interpreted, means—Rats!

We are responsible for the italics.

What are Bench Shows For?

This question has a very practical aspect just now when bench shows all over the country are so popular. The Stockkeeper (England) has this to say of a recent show there in which the welfare of the management was by it evidently deemed to beuppermost. It says:

"There is no getting away from it, the mantle of Barnum has fallen on Cruft. He is a showman par excellence. If Mr. Cruft's intention was to get together a big show of dogs, and get the public to come in their numbers to see his show, then he has succeeded. If the tactics of this ingenious mind result in the benefit of the dog, well and good, if not, why then it is somebody's else's worry, not Mr. Cruft's. There are, it is true, many people whose sole aim is the good of the canine race, and they are ready to sacrifice their personal interests and the show's exchequer to that end; but this is not Mr. Cruft's policy he would wish to know where he came in under such an arrangement. Mr. Cruft's object is to benefit both the dog and himself, and for the sake of both it is gratifying to be able to believe that he has thoroughly succeeded."

Sir Edwin Arnold brought out one of the surpassing beauties of the teachings of Buddha in his incomparable recitations at the Grand, on Monday evening last, by depicting so graphically the love for and recognition of the rights of animals taught by this beautiful religion. It is said that on one occasion an adulteress, while on her way to be stoned to death, saw a half-famished dog by the wayside, and, stooping, removed her slipper, and, converting it into a drinking vessel, gave the poor animal to drink. The Emperor, on hearing of the act, ordered her release and full pardon, being convinced that a heart so moved to compassion by the sufferings of a dog could not be wholly depraved.

Some one connected with the kennel interests of Paris has kindly sent us a copy of what we take to be an announcement of their bench show.

We know it refers to dogs for there is a picture of two fine looking dogs on the cover. We are just as glad to get it as we can be to receive any other, to us, undecipherable communication, but here's our best wishes. May the dog show be a success.

"Now by St. Paul the fight goes bravely on!" We are led to quote these familiar words on reading Mr. James L. Anthony's latest, in current number of American Field, replying to Judge C. N. Post, in which he assumes a "chip on the shoulder" position regarding the points brought up in their interesting controversy. The subject is too interesting to be clouded by personal retort. Keep it clean and give the facts.

The thanks of every kennel man and reputable dog fancier is due the Examiner of this city for the able and persistent manner in which it has followed up the exposure of the disgraceful and brutal dog fighters in this city. It is to be sincerely hoped that every possible step will be taken to suppress this, one of the lowest forms of brutality by which the bestial passions of men are exercised.

We have inadvertently omitted to mention until now that Mr. E. D. Gibson, sheriff of Los Angeles county, was an interested onlooker at the recent field trials and that he at that time purchased of Mr. P. D. Linville one of the famous litter by Dan Gladstone out of Florine. Blood Royal is the name of this puppy and we shall doubtless see him at the trials next year.

The Hunter Arms Company have become famous from the fact that they have and are manufacturing one of the finest, neatest and most effective guns ever placed upon the market, of course every sportsman knows that we refer to the "L. C. Smith" gun. But it was not our object to speak especially of their guns at this time, but to call attention to the manner in which they are slandering the excellent bird dogs which exist and are owned by many of this firm's patrons all over the country. They issued a catalogue recently and as a frontis piece we are introduced to two dogs shown in the act of quarreling over a grouse. They are evidently tearing the poor bird to pieces. Gentlemen give us as good pictures as you do guns and we will be satisfied, but come to think of it we would then have nothing to "kick" at. If you must give us something questionable let it continue to be the pictures on your catalogues for a reflection, we can secure from your house a splendid picture by inducing McMurchy to sit for a photograph when next he comes this way.

We see by the English Stock-Keeper that the poultry-men from over the waters have adopted, at one show at least (Middlesbrough), a Court of Appeals in which the judges' decison can be reviewed. The method was to have three fanciers appointed as a court and let them decide all appeals. A more prolific source of discontent and dissention could not well have been devised, and we predict that this "court of appeal" will not be found to last very long or prove much of a help while it is in operation. These prominent exhibitors are, from the very fact that they are exhibitors, precluded from officiating in this capacity in an unbiased manner. Better drop it.

Pray "Can Can" Can We Not Live?

Mr. "Can Can," a special contributor to an Eastern exchange of alleged doggy proclivities takes umbrage at some of our remarks, in a recent issue, shows his long ears, brays and kicks with a wonderful amount of physical vigor. He evidently imagines that in working his long ears and heels that he is agitating "gray matter." Possibly he is a gray ass.

In order to warn the public of the extreme pointedness of his points, he places "steel pen points" at the head of his "hash" in each line of which, whatever else may be attempted to be said, is the clear and distinct meaning: This is wisdom, behold, even I, the great "Can Can," hath said it!

Under this warning, which was doubtless made by the scribbler to warn people against sitting on the publication referred to lest the "steel pen points" ruin their anatomies, he proceeds to dispense to this journal several of his self-labled samples of wisdom. We have sampled it and a more perfect concoction of wind-pudding we have never come across.

This Boreas dish he has mixed with aqua sewera and frosted with the frothings and drule of imbecility baking the whole under the fierce flame of his fiery indignation.

This remarkable bit of inane drivel was called out by our recent remarks in reference to Mr. Mason's letter to Mr. John Hawkes.

We did, come to look at the matter, lay some strictures upon Mr. Mason for his "The Lord am I", statements on that matter and we have no apology whatever to offer for them now.

Elsewhere in this issue we have punctured another "puffball" and shall continue to do so whenever they fall in our way and inclination invites. If they all pop like the one labled Mason why more's the noise.

Following our strictures on Mason was the remarks excepted to, showing our fairness in the matter by allowing our readers to read for themselves and compare their opinion with our own.

We quoted a letter last week from Mr. Mason which touches the same general allegation of supersensitiveness. The letter might have been headed "Why Mahomet went not to California to judge."

Our innocent, ignorant, and pointless remarks, for they were made with an extra soft faber No. 2, seems to have fallen with their dull, dead weight upon the supersensative cuticle of "Can Can" and caused him to seize his extra sharp steel pen and pirouette about over several pages of paper, until perspiring he glows a roseate pink, and between the lines we see him performing the French dance, after which no doubt he was named, as he reels off the following, after quoting a sentence or two without giving the context:

"That is how Western kennel editors refute a statement. That is how they prove (?) that they have a knowledge of dogs. It is in that way that they convince (?) their readers that a man can go to them for advice on kennel matters. Thus do they prove (?) they are not kennel impostors and that their ears are not too long. Genuine dog men, those who are honestly trying to advance kennel interests do not argue in that way. It is the argument only of those who plead a hopeless case; and even then there is no need to resort to vulgar personalties, and gentlemen do not. There is no apparent reason why these men, even though they are unknown as exhibitors, or breeders or owners of good dogs, and notwithstanding that they have already proved themselves incapable of conducting an instructive or consistent kennel department, should not be respectful and make an effort to infuse a little decency and common sense into their unreliable and vulgar effusions."

If this be the argument of the able, refined and polished "Can Can," to what are we coming? What will become of we "cowboys" of the great untamed West?

The facts of the case are, "Can Can," that the above is about the best and most refined sentiment we have ever seen over your signature. There is fully as much kennel news and real downright kennel wisdom in it as it is possible,evidently, for you to crowd into that much space.

'Tis well that Solomon won his title before you came on the stage.

As to the remarks of "Can Can" relative to our observations on the proper color of the Irish water spaniels' eye, we will let it rest by quoting his statement referring to Stock-Keeper's item:

"The intelligence and quality of the dog were not being considered."

That is just the point. When men confess so much, and go off after matters which do not concern the intelligence and quality of the dog, then we refuse to follow them, and if they find us designating their impractical proceedings by terms entirely proper when applied to men engaged in unimportant matters,they should learn to take their medicine and not make such wry faces over the potion. It will only take a few such doses to cure any but the most hopeless cases.

The following we quote from "Can Can's frothings which shows him to be an ignorant ass on matters whereon every passibly well-informed kennel man cannot be in doubt. He says: "A competent judge and an experienced sportsman has told the writer that the dogs in California, taken as a whole, are the worst lot of scrubs he has ever seen; and with such kennel slaughterers as they have out there who can blame the breeders if they are unable to make headway?"

We much doubt if any "competent judge" or "experienced sportsman" ever made any such statement. If he did, he must have been "temporarially incapacitated" or playing hide and seek with Truth.

The real gist of this matter is that "Can Can's" letter as shown by the remarks quoted, and various others which are too puerile to notice, clearly demonstrates the fact that he is of the same puff-ball, swell-head, Poo-Bah order as a number of would-be kennel writers and badly needs puncturing.

Come, come, "Can Can" if there was nothing to concern you—that touched your sore spot—would you become so frantic? If you become so frantically excited over this matter—the mere ignorant vaporings of a "cowboy"—what would you do should some one who would be able to protect themselves, and perchance to wield the steel pen with skill and deftness, in a slight measure, even imitating your own marvelous feats of surpassing force and grace—the skill of a maitre d'armes combined with the crushing force of a Hercules, once flash his weapon toward you?

Methinks I see you grow ashen with fear and slink away. Gods! if the time should ever come how the dogs would bark at your flying heels!

It would seem that even to this class of writers, who are continually obtruding and parading their personages before the public to the utter exclusion of all else would eventually realize in a certain vague, misty sense something of their stupendous asinine qualities. These rotund, inane and impotent drivlers seem to catch no glimpse of the pompous grotesqueness of their articles which would be enough to drown them with laughter and ridicule did not a nauseating sense of disgust arise from the fetid matter to check any sign of even the merriment of ridicule.

Read any one of the general articles coming from this class of men. How inordinately stupid and unutterably weary it all is. The idea that no one can know aught of kennel matters unless he go about constantly with a litter of young dogs in his arms! Well, well, in this age when realism is the rage I suppose we must endure, as best we may, such men. Mind—at least some minds—are not far removed from matter. Their bumptious excrescences cause them pain whenever touched. They have long so fondly cherished the weak, puerile creations of their own, that inbreeding has effectually and totally destroyed all signs of virility and vigor, hence the weary, innocuous, and utterly aimlessness of their productions.

If we step on occasional puff-balls, again we say more's the noise, especially if they "pop" like the man who has chosen to appear before the public under a nom de plume so suggestive of questionable antics. Perhaps it was chosen on account of the refined and elevated nature of its suggestion. No, come to think of it, it must have been that the writer could think of nothing which would so truthfully portray his wonderful intellectual dynamics.

It is said to be unsafe to put new wine into old bottles, and if a little common sense should be placed into the already dangerously inflated heads of men like "Can-Can," they might burst. What if they should? They never would be missed.

Retrieving at Field Trials.

Mr. H. E. Jones, of Nashville, Tennessee, has the following in the Turf, Field and Farm of current issue. It is good and touches an important matter. He says:

"Mr. J. M. Avent wrote a letter a short time ago to the American Field, in which he attempts to draw a distinction between "a high class field trial dog" and what he calls "a plug hunting dog."

As I catch his meaning, any dog fit for a gentleman to have a pleasant day's sport with, in the field, comes under his designation of a "plug hunting dog." Such a dog, he tells us, is unfit for a field trial dog, and, on the other hand, "a high class field trial dog" is unfit to hunt over. If this be true, then there is something radically wrong, and our leading field trial clubs ought to change their sign boards, so to speak, on nearly all of which we read this legend: "It is the purpose of this club to encourage training and breeding of such dogs as are best adapted to the use of sportsmen in practical field shooting." According to Mr. Avent, the latter part of this announcement ought to be changed so as to read, "dogs utterly unfit for the use of sportsmen in practical field shooting."

Mr. Avent tells us that a high class field trial dog ought not to retrieve. The reason he ought not to retrieve is, I suppose, that retrieving is a very desirable quality, or trait in "practical field shooting," and a high class field trial dogs according to Mr. Avent's theory, ought not to have any connection wiih "practical field shooting."

The principal traits to make up "a high class field trial dog," according to Mr. Avent's theory, are great speed and wide ranging. These qualities are very taking to the eye, but when carried to an extreme make a dog regardless of his handler, and cause him to be often lost. Mr. Avent has bred his dogs up to his ideal, but the question for sportsmen is, Is Mr. Avent's ideal the correct one? If a high class field trial dog is unfit for practical shooting in the field, then it follows that the tendency of our field trials is toward the destruction of the practical utility of bird dogs. Mr. Avent designate, all dogs suitable to shoot over as "plug hunting dogs."

When the field trial clubs tell us they are organized and conducted to encourage the breeding and training of dogs "adapted to the use of sportsmen in practical field shooting," they tell us they are intended to develop high class "plug hunting dogs." Mr. Avent tells us such dogs cannot be "high class field trial dogs." Who is right?

A high-class "plug hunting dog" ought to exhibit in the highest degree all those qualities that fit him for his work. These necessarily include speed and wide ranging where the nature of the ground requires the exhibition of these qualities. But equally important are good judgement, a good nose and bird sense, and these at all times under the control of the handler. The reason that Mr. Avent's "high class field trial dog" is not suitable to shoot over is because he is often lost, or beyond the control of his handler.

This is the result of education. Any fast and high strung hunting dog can be trained to fast, wide ranging. It is, in fact, much easier to train a dog after this fashion than to train one, of equal merit naturally, to hunt with correct judgment. In the one legs and driving power are the greatest essentials. In the other, legs and driving power must be supplemented by the exercise of great intelligence.

Two dogs may be equal in intelligence and in all other respects naturally. Take two dogs. for instance, possessing equally and in the highest degree all the qualities of first-class dogs. Any intelligent trainer knows it would be easier to train one to be a fast, wide, dashing ranger, reckless of his handler, than it would be to train the other to hunt with proper judgment and with perfect obedience. One is ornamental and useful, the other ornamental only. Can there be any doubt as to which is the highest class dog?

The most brilliant representative of the high-class field trial dog, according to Mr. Avent's standard, now before the American public, is unquestionably Antonio. I have no doubt in my own mind that Mr. Avent's article was written with special reference to this dog. I suspect that it was written to educate the public up to an appreciation of the brilliant dashes of speed and range exhibited by Antonio in the trials. On the other hand, the best living representatives of the high class "plug hunting dog" are unquestionably Daisy Hunter, Maid of Kent and Rip Rap. Of course, I use the word "plug" simply as a quotation from Mr. Avent. The recent contests between Daisy Hunter and Antonio and between Maid of Kent and Antonio have forced upon the American public a very important question. It ought to be definitely settled before the trials of next Fall. Our field trial clubs tell us they are organized to promote the breeding and training of dogs best suited for practical field shooting.

The judges of these trials, acting on Mr. Avent's idea, gave the honors to a dog confessedly unfit for practical field shooting, over dogs that showed themselves to possess in the very highest possible degree the qualities the clubs are said to encourage. The result was a very natural one—a vigorous and unanimous protest from the reporters and "all the spectators, among whom were many experts."
